WILL NOT STRIKE, RAILWAY UNIONS ASSURE WILSON

Brotherhoods Agree to Accept Plan of Settlement to be Advanced by President.

CONSENT TO MEDIATION

But Reject Arbitration and Congress May Be Asked for Compulsory Act.

WILSON SAID TO FAVOR IT

Bill Authorizing President to Draft Railway Men Into War Service Also Revived.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—That there will be no railroad strike or any serious difference between their employes and the railroads is certain. President Wilson has been authorized in effect by the representatives of the brotherhoods to offer a plan of settlement as to wages which the brotherhoods will accept. It is understood that the President will insist that the men compose their differences by mediation and that he is inclined to favor the enactment of a law for compulsory arbitration of railroad disputes during the war period.

The attitude of the brotherhoods is satisfactory to the Administration, although President Wilson had hoped that the officials of the brotherhoods would go as far as the railroad Presidents in agreeing to arbitration as well as mediation. It became known tonight that the officials of the brotherhoods had signed an agreement with Judge Chambers of the Board of Conciliation and Mediation, consenting to mediation, but rejecting arbitration. The railroad Presidents on the other hand agreed with Judge Chambers to abide by arbitration in the settlement of wages and all other disputes which might arise. That the brotherhoods should be less disposed to accept this principle than the railroad heads has had the effect upon the Administration of reviving bills proposed in the last session to govern this very situation.

The brotherhoods, while refusing to agree to arbitration in their conference with Judge Chambers at Cleveland, did not close the door to a settlement of disputes between themselves and the railroads. The agreement signed by the leaders ends by the very optimistic stipulation "that they will agree to suggestions of a plan of settlement advanced by President Wilson." It is this stipulation that makes it certain that there will be no strike, as the brotherhood officials are forced to agree to a settlement on terms brought forward by the President or place themselves in an indefensible position.

This agreement is sustained by W. S. Stone, Grand Chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; W. S. Carter, President of the Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen; L. E. Shepherd, Senior Vice President of the Order of Railroad Conductors, and W. G. Lee, President of the Brotherhood of Railroad Firemen. These men will confer with the President next week, and this conference is expected to lead to an offer from the brotherhoods for a settlement which will be entirely satisfactory to the railroad Presidents.

Two moves are planned in the next Congress to overcome the situation now threatened. One provides for the introduction of a bill prepared by the Attorney General to give the President authority to place railroad employes in military service during the war period. The other provides for compulsory arbitration of railroad disputes.

These bills were prepared at the request of President Wilson by Attorney General Gregory, Judge Chambers, and Commissioner Clark of the Interstate Commerce Commission. In the opinion of Administration advisers any unseemly move by the brotherhoods at this time would furnish the very best argument for their enactment. It is with a full realization of the strong position that the Administration is in that the brotherhood chiefs have agreed to adopt the advice of President Wilson for a settlement.

ACCEPT PENALTY CLAUSE

Western Coal Miners Reverse Stand and Submit to Garfield.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 15.—Representatives of coal miners of the three Southwest districts, comprising Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma, and Arkansas, in convention here today defeated a resolution instructing the Presidents of the districts to call a general strike if the Southwestern Coal Operators' Association refused to accept the so-called Kansas City agreement, which did not contain the automatic penalty clause. On rollcall the resolution was defeated, 185 to 108.

The convention adopted a resolution instructing the officers of the three districts to confer with officials of the operators' association and obtain the best possible penalty clause. The action rescinds that taken last night, when the delegates rejected the penalty clause.

The convention adjourned subject to the call of the Chairman, Alexander H. Howatt, President of the Kansas district. It was explained that now negotiations were where they were prior to the drawing up of the Kansas City agreement, which contained a clause abolishing the automatic penalty clause. That phase of the agreement was objected to by Fuel Administrator Garfield, who held that the automatic penalty clause tended to insure continuity of production.

By their action tonight, it was stated, the miners had tacitly accepted the penalty clause. It was made clear, however, that the miners would insist upon wage increases being embodied in the new clause.

Before the vote on the penalty clause was taken Howatt, in a speech, urged the miners to close down all mines in their districts.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Illinois coal miners today notified Fuel Administrator Garfield that they would appear here Nov. 26 to present for his approval a penalty clause for their new wage contracts with operators, which Dr. Garfield insists must be satisfactory to him.

Berne Peace Conference Off; Only Teuton Delegates There

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Through Zurich, Switzerland, there came today a cable report from Berne of the collapse of the projected pacifist conference which was to have been held in the latter place.

At its first and only sitting on Monday the conference adjourned to the last of December because there were no Entente representatives, though for the Central Powers Dernburg, Erzberger, Karolyi, and others were in attendance, ready to set forth their views.

PROPOSES FEDERAL LOAN TO RAILWAYS

THORNE SUPPORTS THE IDEA

Would Make Rate Increase Unnecessary, Shippers' Counsel Says, but Rea Dissents.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—The question of the Government's loaning money to the railroads was brought forward the first time officially today at the cross-examination of Eastern railroad officials in the 15 per cent. advance rate case before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Samuel Rea, President of the Pennsylvania Railroad, said he believed the time had arrived when Government loans should be seriously considered, and later Clifford Thorne, counsel for many important shippers, said he believed it the proper solution for the railroad situation. Mr. Rea testified, however, that should the money be forthcoming from the Government it ought not to affect the proposed freight increase, while shippers' counsel believed the plan should be made effective in lieu of the rate increase.

Mr. Rea's statement regarding the loan came after he had testified that the Pennsylvania could not get more freight cars until the middle of next year, that he did not believe it possible to increase the output of locomotives largely, because of what he referred to as a disadvantageous labor situation, and that he did not believe it would be right to attempt bond flotation while the Government was attempting to make large war loans.

The hearing today was confined to Eastern railroad officials, whom the shippers had asked to have called for cross-examination on testimony given at a previous hearing. Besides Mr. Rea, Howard Elliott of the New Haven and G. M. Shriber, Vice President of the Baltimore & Ohio, were examined, and John Muir of the Railway Investors' League made a plea in favor of increased rates.

The cross-examination of Mr. Elliott indicated that shippers' counsel would argue Monday that at least in the case of the New Haven statements of earnings had been based on high capitalization. After denying such was the case, Mr. Elliott gave a detailed statement in an effort to show that added revenue was needed by the New Haven, not on a basis of capitalization of the system but upon the book value of its lines.

Mr. Thorne indicated in a statement given out tonight that shippers' counsel would contend that the Government should loan money for needed improvements and new equipment, rather than allow the railroads to forward new construction and build equipment with earnings.

Addressing the commission, Nathan L. Amster of Boston, President of the Investors' Protective Association of America, declared that railroad rates generally were too low. He said that the United States was putting hundreds of millions of dollars in railroads abroad, realizing that an effective transportation machine was as necessary as an efficient fighting machine, and that it should do no less for the United States.

"The present war conditions," he said, "justify the commission suspending all technical investigations, as a war measure, and, bearing in mind the general situation of traffic and operating cost, granting the railroads at once and from time to time during this war such increased rates as the advance in wages and cost of fuel and supplies would, in the opinion of the commission, justify."

EXPRESS COMPANIES ASK RATE INCREASE

Say They Are Losing Money Under War Conditions and Want 10 Per Cent. More.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Express companies today applied to the Interstate Commerce Commission for an increase of 10 per cent. in their rates. The Adams, American, Southern, and Wells Fargo companies, making the application in behalf of themselves and other express companies, set forth that they had suffered a net loss of $39,848 as the result of increases in operating expenses and taxes during the first six months of this year.

The companies assert that they are carrying on greatly increased business "under the most trying conditions," and that their facilities are taxed far beyond their normal capacity. It is increasingly difficult, their application says, to obtain necessary labor, and because of the increasing demand for express and baggage cars for movement of troops and military supplies it has been impossible to obtain adequate equipment.

Frequent and substantial advances in wages, particularly to employes receiving lower rates of pay, are said

AMERICANS KILLED BY GERMAN SHELLS; OTHERS WOUNDED

GUNNERS QUICKLY ANSWER

HURT MEN IN HOSPITALS

By The Associated Press.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Nov. 15.—A number of American soldiers have been killed or wounded in the recent shelling of the American trenches by the Germans.

Several infantrymen suffering from wounds arrived today at the base hospital. All the casualties were caused by the same shell.

A group of Americans was in a shack in the reserve when the Germans began shelling heavily. The officers ordered the men to a dugout, but before they could get there a big shell dropped on the position and exploded. The American gunners concentrated their fire on the communicating trenches of the enemy, and it is thought that their shells caused casualties and considerable damage.

Since this occurrence there have been further encounters between American patrols and Germans in No Man's Land. Last night there were a number of clashes, but the night was dark and showery and the firing was at a distance. There were no American casualties.

The American artillery fire has been heavy recently and there is good reason to believe that it has accounted for a considerable number of the enemy.

The general accuracy of the American artillerymen's fire has evoked enthusiastic comment from the French superior officers of the command in which are the trenches occupied by the American troops. The General in command told American officers today that the marksmanship of the artillerymen was excellent, comparing most favorably with that of troops which had been at war for years.

The American officers were highly elated by the compliment. The only complaint heard is that a few American batteries are not as rapid as they might be, but they are improving daily.

The infantrymen are now interesting themselves especially in patrols. All the men who have not had this experience are eager to try their hand, and some have asked to be assigned to this work.

It is the unanimous opinion that the men are learning more of the science of war by their short stay in the trenches and gunpits than is possible to gain in months of other instruction.

While the infantry is learning how to handle itself in the trenches the artillery, in addition to the actual firing, is acquiring valuable experience in observation work and locating enemy batteries by the sound method. The heavy guns on both sides are engaged in a duel at long range, with lighter pieces working at targets nearer the lines.

A German paper balloon, used to distribute propaganda behind hostile lines, came down today in the town occupied by American Division Headquarters with copies attached of the Gazette des Ardennes, which is published by Germans in French at Charleville.

The leading article attacked President Wilson for his alleged pre-war attitude and for not prohibiting the sale of munitions to Germany's enemies. In an attempt to convey an idea of reliability, the newspaper printed a British official statement, telling of the capture of 1,000 Germans in Flanders. The copies of the newspaper were sent to General Pershing.

Senator William S. Kenyon of Iowa and Senator John D. Kendrick of Wyoming arrived at headquarters yesterday on their tour of the military zone. They took dinner with General Pershing and his staff and inspected some of the troops.

They saw American battalions practicing an attack behind barrage fire and also witnessed the work of machine guns, trench mortars, hand and rifle grenades, bayonets, and indirect artillery firing. Both Senators agreed that the American soldiers were doing splendidly and that their training has progressed more rapidly than seemed possible. They later left for Paris, from where they will go to the French front.

Major General Sibert's fifth son is now in the army. Two of his sons are Captains, one is a Lieutenant and one a West Point cadet, and the General instructed his fifth and youngest son to keep away for the present. He has been advised, however, that his youngest son felt that he could keep out of the army no longer. He has just enlisted as a private.

Germans Hail Hylan's Victory; Call Tammany Hall Pacifist

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15. — Word reached Washington today that German press comments upon the election results in New York interpret them as a triumph for the American pacifists.

The Kreux-Zeitung asserts that the defeat of Mayor Mitchel for re-election was favorable to Germany, as Mitchel, it says, was a warm friend of the Entente and was pro-war, while it maintains that Tammany Hall is pacifist and its whole ticket was pacifist.

Vorwärts and Germania quote from the Munich Neueste Nachrichten, which holds that Hylan's election over Mitchel is evidence of a lack of war enthusiasm in America and a "moral defeat" for President Wilson and the war party.

SEES SUFFRAGISTS ALL TURNING ANTI

OTHER JUDGES MORE KINDLY

One Thinks Women Better Suited by Temperament Than Men to Sit on the Bench.

Justice Jacob Marks of the Municipal Court dampened the rejoicing over the suffrage victory, which overshadowed everything else at the tenth annual dinner of the Women Lawyers' Association at the Café Boulevard last night, when he asserted bluntly that in his opinion the most rabid of the suffragists today would probably become in a short time just as violent antis. A chorus of negation arose at the remark, and cries of "Now, Judge, you don't mean that," and "Why, the very idea!" prevented the Justice from continuing his speech for several minutes.

Justice Marks followed several other county and municipal court jurists who had praised the granting of the vote to New York women as an admission that the State recognized at last that its "women were human beings." Just preceding him Katherine Devereaux Blake had related instances of the seventy years' fight which women had waged, beginning with Susan B. Anthony and Elizabeth Cady Stanton, who made the remark that "she didn't want to enter the Kingdom of Heaven unenfranchised."

"The result of last Tuesday's election was a complete surprise to me," said Justice Marks. "I have not recovered from the shock of it yet. And let me tell you all I am not in the least optimistic as to the result."

Leaves No Room for Doubt.

At this point there were audible murmurs from his listeners who were not sure that they had heard aright. Their doubts in this matter were set completely at rest in a moment, however, for raising his voice to carry above the hum and buzz of women's voices, the Justice went on:

"And let me tell you that those of you who have been the most rabid for the vote will after a few years become the most rabid to give up the vote. Perhaps I may be wrong, but that is my opinion."

There was no room for doubting their ears, and the women at once raised a clamor of protest that brought guests from other rooms to see what the noise was that had succeeded the generally low-pitched hum of the diners' conversation. For five minutes at least the confusion kept up, while Justice Marks made no effort to reply but stood patiently waiting until the tumult should die down. When the women ceased, as they did through sheer curiosity to see what he would say next about their course, he continued to warn them of their responsibilities.

"You can change the complexion of any party," he said. "You can change the complexion of any Government if the majority of women voters become party bosses. My advice to you is to work for the independence of the bench. Get behind good Judges who are up for re-election. Perhaps the Women Lawyers' Association can do what the men's Bar Association had so far failed to accomplish, to see that all parties indorse good Judges. I venture this as a suggestion," he added, and sat down.

Supreme Court Justice Charles L. Guy was the first speaker. He congratulated the women on becoming fellow-citizens and being recognized as human beings at last. He went on to say that he thought now that every field of endeavor open to men ought of a right to be opened to women. He would be glad to see them on the bench, he said, and he thought they would make better jurors than men.

Says Women Are Not Emotional.

"It is a popular delusion that women are the emotional sex," declared Justice Guy. "That is not a fact. They are in truth the more cold-blooded sex. Women are more apt to decide on the merits of a case than men. They are less apt to be carried away by their feelings."

Miss Blake urged the women to stay out of parties. She said that they must take a stand for good legislation in the case of women and children workers in factories rather than allow themselves to become the pawns of politicians.

"My big message to you tonight," she said, "is to keep the politicians guessing. Don't you tell them what you are going to do."

AMERICA TO CONTROL WAR

Unless Allies' Methods Are Improved—In View of All Which He Cannot Enter Cabinet.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Lord Northcliffe has declined a proffer by the administration of the new Air Ministry made to him by Premier Lloyd George.

In a long letter to the Premier Lord Northcliffe explains that his refusal of the portfolio is due to dissatisfaction with some of the metheds of Lloyd George's administration, especially with regard to the relations with the United States, and says that Lord Northcliffe's desire, therefore, is to maintain an independent attitude.

Lord Northcliffe's letter to the Premier, dated today from the London office of the British mission to the United States, was as follows:

"Dear Prime Minister:

"I have given anxious consideration to your repeated invitations that I should take charge of the new Air Ministry. The reason which impelled me to decline that great honor and responsibility are in no way concerned with the office which is rightly to be set up. They are, roughly, as follows:

Tells of War Energy Here.

"Returning after five months spent in the virile atmosphere of the United States and Canada, I find that, while these two countries are proceeding with their war preparations with a fervor and enthusiasm little understood on this side of the Atlantic, while the United States instantly put into operation conscription, over which we wabbled for two years, and is making short work of sedition mongers; while Canada already has given such proofs of thoroughness as the disfranchisement of conscientious objectors and the denaturalization of all enemy aliens naturalized within the last fifteen years; while we, for our part, are asking immense sacrifices from these peoples, there are still in office here those who daily with such urgent questions as that of unity of war control, eradication of sedition, mobilization of the whole man and woman power of the country, and the introduction of compulsory food rations.

"I had personal experience while in America of the obstruction and delay in certain departments in London, which, for example, postponed sending Lord Reading's vital and most successful mission. I find the censorship still being misused and that men in various positions of authority, who should have been punished, have been retained and in some cases elevated.

Must Maintain His Independence.

"The spirit of the men and women of Great Britain is clearly as eager and splendid as ever. We have, in my belief, the most [efficient?] army in the world, led by one of the greatest Generals, and I am well aware of the fine achievements of many others of our soldiers, sailors, and statesmen, but I feel in the present circumstances I can do better work if I maintain my independence and am not gagged by a loyalty that I do not feel towards the whole of your administration.

"I take this opportunity of thanking you and the War Cabinet for the handsome message of praise sent to me as representing the five hundred officials of the British War Mission to the United States, many of them volunteers and exiles. Their achievements and those of their ten thousand assistants deserve to be better known by their countrymen.

"The fact that their work is not known is due to the absurd secrecy about the war which still is prevalent. Everything these officials are doing is known to our American friends, and, of course, to the Germans.

"I trust I make no breach of confidence in saying that some of the docu-

Berlin Looks for Lloyd George's Fall; Would Consider It a Step Toward Peace

BERLIN, Nov. 15, (via London.)—The Vorwärts today prints a long editorial on the French and British Ministerial crises. The newspaper considers the fall of the French Premier a mere footnote to the history of the war, but that of Prime Minister Lloyd George as a whole chapter. It says that the fact that Lloyd George is "wabbling" attracts the eyes of the whole world. Should he fall, it may not mean peace, but it will mean a long step in the direction of peace.

"Mr. Lloyd George," says the Vorwärts, "long since has gambled away his best stake—his following among the masses—and now is reeling about without a foothold."

The Vorwärts says that Mr. Lloyd George has forsaken the wise principle of seeking an alliance with international socialism, which, it asserts, is the great power of the future, even of the German people, despite all efforts to annihilate it.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 15.—The Berlin newspapers comment at length on the French and English crises, precipitated by the Paris speech of Mr. Lloyd George, whose resignation most of the German papers regard as certain. They express the hope that his "departure," will clear the political atmosphere of Europe and pave the way for peace.

PICKS CLEMENCEAU TO FORM CABINET

RADICALS WON'T OPPOSE

PARIS, Nov. 15.—Former Premier Clémenceau has agreed to form a new Cabinet.

M. Clemenceau was at the Elysee Palace today with President Poincaré for more than an hour, after which the announcement was made that the President had offered him the mission of forming a cabinet, which he had accepted.

On leaving the palace, M. Clemenceau said:

"I intend to act quickly and rationally. There are certain little matters to examine and regulate and I think I shall need forty-eight hours. I shall perhaps be able to give the first exact information tomorrow evening."

The Radical and Radical Socialist group in the Senate met and adopted a resolution that the circumstances of the hour required that the best qualified men take office, regardless of parties. The corresponding group in the Chamber, after sharp discussion, adopted a resolution against the party pronouncing against M. Clemenceau.

Previous to this decision, the parties of the Left—the unified Socialists, Socialistic Radicals, and Socialistic Republicans, had formed themselves in a group. This action was taken on the initiative of the unified Socialists with the view to common action. The Figaro styles this against Clémenceau."

It was Georges Clémenceau, for many years one of the most forceful figures in French public life, who began the campaign against German propaganda in France, and it was largely on that issue that the Painlevé Cabinet fell.

The "Tiger," as he is nicknamed, is known as an exponent of the Big Stick, and it has been prophesied that if he should be appointed Premier he would stamp out Bolshism. The chief obstacle to his selection was felt to be the implacable hostility of the unified Socialists, who have never forgiven his drastic methods in dealing with labor troubles when he was Premier.

M. Clémenceau is 76 years old. He is sometimes referred to as more of a destructive than a constructive statesman and is reputed to have upset nearly a score of Cabinets. He has held no Ministerial posts in recent years, devoting himself largely to his newspaper, L'Homme Enchaine, which has been suspended several times because of his biting criticism of the Government.

GERMAN SOCIALISTS FORCED WAR BARGAIN

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 15.—The National Liberal leader, Dr. Gustav Stresemann, publishes an article regarding the attitude of the National Liberals during the Cabinet crisis, and says that as a result of the co-operation of that party at the interparty discussions Germany's foreign policy "will not be led as in Michaelis's time," referring to the peace resolution of July 19.

Certain territorial additions to the German Empire are not entirely out of the question, he asserts, and moreover have been approved by the Centrists and Progressives. The National Liberals go further, says Stresemann, and demand guarantees in Belgium and the freeing of the Baltic from the Russian yoke. He argues that only the Polish question can be settled by the Reichstag.

Dr. Stresemann asserts that peace is on the road, and that the enemy is now only hoping for Germany's interior political collapse, and so the National Liberals have joined the majority to unite the country. He makes the interesting admission that the Social Democrats were only willing to continue the fourth year of the war if considerable concessions were made to them, and this was the reason why Hindenburg and Ludendorff had conferences with the leaders of the Workmen's Unions and factions. Neither the National Liberals nor the two Generals are really disciples of this plan, he says, but the unity of the country makes co-operation necessary.

ITALIANS HOLDING THE PIAVE LINE

But They Abandon Mountain Outposts to the Germans Pressing Southward.

NAVY AIDS RIVER DEFENSE

Fresh Assaults Are Repulsed and Teutons Already Across Are Held in Check.

ROME, Nov. 15.—The Italians have defeated renewed efforts of the Germans to cross the Piave River. Those of the enemy who forced a crossing at two points on previous days are being held in check, the War Office announced today.

The enemy forces which effected a crossing at Zenson are being more closely invested, and those across the river in the marshy sector near the coast are being checked and shelled. Other enemy attacks were repulsed.

In the mountains in the north the Italians have made a further withdrawal. The advanced posts at Monte Tomatico, south of Feltre, were drawn back to positions previously determined upon.

The official announcement follows:

The enemy has intensified his action on our mountainous front from the Asiago zone to the Piave Valley. On Tuesday night he attacked the Monte Sisemol-Meletta d'Avanti sector and was resisted effectively. The action was continued successfully by us yesterday with the object of driving back, with local counterattacks, enemy parties which, having reached some advanced elements of our positions, attempted to remain there.

Yesterday morning the enemy made an attack more to the north, along the front of Meletta d'Avanti-Monte Flor-Monte Castelgoberto, and was repulsed. He repeated his attempt during the evening with larger forces and greater violence, but was again repulsed.

Columns which were advancing in fan-like formation toward the front between Frisoni and the confluence of the Brenta and Cismon rivers were caught under the fire of our artillery and stopped. Large forces engaged our advanced line between the Cismon and Piave rivers. At Monte Roncone the enemy was repulsed. At Monte Tomatico our advanced posts withdrew, after offering effective resistance, to positions previously decided upon. In the direction of the Quero Pass an enemy attack was paralyzed.

On the plain the struggle continued. Fresh attempts on the part of the enemy to cross the Piave River have been frustrated. The units which had previously passed the river are being shut in more closely at the Zenson loop and held in check in the marshy sector between the Piave and the Piave Vecchia (the old bed of the river, near the sea,) where they have been counterattacked and are being shelled by our batteries, with the aid of Royal Navy artillery.

Yesterday our airplanes effectively bombarded bridges on the Livenza and Monticano rivers. Flying at a height of a few hundred meters, they attacked with machine gun fire troops and columns on the march along roads in the plain.

Germans Advancing Southward.

BERLIN, Nov. 15.—(Via London.)—German troops on the mountain front in Northern Italy are advancing to the south from Fonzaso and Feltre, says today's official communication.

No change is reported along the lower Piave River.

The afternoon announcement follows:

SEEK NOW TO CUT HIM OFF

Part of Northern Army Said to be Marching to Attack Him in Rear.

LENINE'S POWER WANING

ANARCHY IN MANY CITIES

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 15.—Telegraphic communication with Petrograd is still interrupted. Stockholm papers receive their news via Haparanda. The reports are contradictory, but it seems as if the Bolsheviki again command Petrograd. The executive of the Russian troops at Helsingfors on Wednesday evening received the following telephone message from Petrograd:

"Bolshevik troops have taken Gatchina. Kerensky, with his troops, about 5,000 men, retired to the south. Lettish sharpshooters and parts of the Northern army have been ordered to cut Kerensky's line of retreat.

"The left wing of the Social Revolutionary Party has decided to rally to the Bolsheviki. The standpoint of the other parties is not yet known."

A Haparanda telegram says travelers arriving from Finland late this evening report rumors that Petrograd is on fire. There are no further details.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Direct news from either the Kerensky or Bolsheviki faction in Russia concerning the situation there is still lacking, but a Reuter dispatch from Stockholm late tonight said that communication had been restored with Petrograd, and news of the actual happenings there is expected soon. If credence is to be attached to press dispatches sent from Scandinavian capitals the Provisional Government forces have lost the battle for the possession of Petrograd and are in retreat.

A dispatch from Copenhagen received this evening says:

"A Helsingfors dispatch to the Politiken says that the Military Committee last night received the following by telephone:

"'The people seem to have lost confidence in Lenine and Trotzky. It is intended to form a Social Revolutionary Coalition Government, with representatives of all parties except the well-to-do. The first task of the new Government will be to make peace with the enemy.'"

A dispatch from Petrograd, dated Tuesday, which may have been sent via Stockholm as soon as communication was restored, tells of an attempt to negotiate for a creation of a Socialist Government in Russia and the postponement of a railway strike there. It comes to the Exchange Telegraph Company. The Socialist leaders offered the Bolsheviki the following basis for an agreement:

First—The disarming of the Red Guard.

Second—The transfer of the control of the Petrograd garrison to the municipality.

Third—The cessation of military operations—and in consideration of the acceptance of these terms—

Fourth—Full guarantee that Kerensky's army would be the only one entering Petrograd and would not fire a single shot.

Fifth—The army would abstain from domiciliary searches and arrests.

The negotiations for the armistice collapsed because, although the Bolsheviki agreed to the terms, the Socialists insisted that the Bolsheviki should be excluded from the proposed Government.

Premier Kerensky, the dispatch adds, issued proclamations declaring his adherence to the revolution and guaranteeing the clearing out of the Bolsheviki as well as to the transference of power to democratic organizations, the preliminary Government and the committee for safeguarding the country and the revolution.

The Railway Union sent a delegation to Kerensky proposing that he withhold aggressive measures against the Petrograd garrison and the workmen. The Premier, it is said, replied that he would not pursue an aggressive course or apply repressive measures in the event of the Socialist parties arriving at an agreement.

It is reported from Kiev, the dispatch adds, that there is heavy fighting throughout that city. Airplanes are participating on both sides and there have been numerous casualties. The armistice at Moscow was to expire today.

Severe Fighting at Petrograd.

The Wolff Bureau, the official German news bureau, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Geneva, says that the Provisional Government has mastered the revolt in Moscow. It says that Lenine still controls Petrograd.

where the fighting was severe yesterday afternoon.

A Petrograd dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company, dated yesterday, says Kerensky's mixed detachments are concentrated close to Petrograd, and a telegram from Stockholm early tonight gives the following view of the situation:

"The only news of Petrograd events has been brought by travelers through Finland or transmitted by telephone, and these reports add to the confusion by their failure to give dates of the various alleged happenings.

"According to what is apparently the latest telephone report from Finland, all was quiet in Petrograd last night.

"A Russian who arrived at Haparanda from Petrograd Wednesday says that Kerensky's troops had not entered Petrograd Monday and he did not believe they would enter, as the garrison, numbering 50,000, remained faithful to the Maximalists.

"The cause of Kerensky's unpopularity, according to this Russian, was his opposition to peace, and he further declared that if the Maximalists could have made peace they would be masters everywhere. All hope was in the proposed coalition Cabinet, and he added: 'If such a Government cannot be formed we will have civil war.'

"The Revolutionary Committee in Petrograd, a message from Haparanda says, has taken measures for evictualing the Russian capital. Arrangements have been made for increasing the stocks of wheat, and workmen have been ordered to continue their work without interruption.

"The German minority Socialist Executive Committee has sent the local newspapers of Russian Bolsheviki a telegram for transmission to Petrograd, congratulating the Bolsheviki on their 'seizure of political power.' The telegram expresses the hope that the Bolsheviki will succeed in forcing a peace without annexations."

According to other reports from Stockholm, travelers who arrived yesterday evening in Haparanda, Sweden, from Finland, said rumors were current there that Petrograd was in flames and 2,000 persons had been killed in street fighting in Moscow up to noon Tuesday. In Kiev and various other towns anarchy prevailed to an astonishing degree, accompanied by mob violence against Jews. An agreement was said to have been reached at Moscow among the Socialistic parties to form a coalition government, including some Bolsheviki.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—The Russian Embassy announced today that a telegram had been received from the Russian Embassy at Rome, in which it was stated that Italy was in communication with Moscow via Murmansk. The embassy was informed that confirmation had been received of the reported decline of the Bolsheviki and that two days ago Premier Kerensky had regained control of the larger part of Petrograd.

The only information received by the State Department came from Minister Morris at Stockholm, who merely communicated the rumors and press dispatches published in newspapers of the Swedish capital. No direct word has been received by the State Department from Ambassador Francis in Petrograd since Nov. 8. No alarm is felt here, however, for Americans in Petrograd, and confidence is still strong that the Maximalist authority will be brief.

BERATES BUFFALO SPEECH.

Wilson's Warning of Teuton Ambition a Trick, Says German Paper.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 15.—The Liberal Industrial organ, the Rhenish Westphalian Gazette, comments on President Wilson's speech at Buffalo, calling it "Wilson's latest trick," and alluding to Colonel House as a spy. The President's "latest trick," the paper says, "is to find an artificial contrast and convince American citizens that if the war ends in a draw, Americans will be Germany's vassals.

"No statesman ever uttered greater foolishness," the Gazette continues, "and it can be assumed that the Central Powers will greet this with laughter. We rejoice that Wilson places himself and the Entente in a ridiculous position by taking refuge in such folly, this being the best proof that Entente diplomacy is at the end of its devices to destroy the unity of the Central Powers.'

The paper cites President Wilson's reference to the freedom of people and says:

"Pan Germanism is Wilson's favorite toy and the hobby on which he rides around is the difference between the German people and their Government."

The Gazette remarks that the entire German Empire has rallied around the Kaiser for more than three years to attain victory" and asserts that this alleged idea that Germany will again offer peace and will be ready to negotiate for Alsace-Lorraine is "an impertinent lie, because Alsace-Lorraine will not be negotiated about and there is no Alsace-Lorraine question. Lloyd George says the sword shall decide, and it is deciding in Italy."

The paper asserts that what President Wilson says about the Bagdad railway and the future relations of Germany with other nations is so far in the future that it is not worth discussing. It lays stress on the mission of Colonel House, "that ridiculous military lay figure whom Mr. Wilson sent to Europe to spy. A House and Gerard—we harbored two nice creatures. They were supposed to inform the Indian chief in the White House of the best way to scalp us. But they do not seem to have gathered much knowledge in their espionage.

"Wilson's whole speech, like his peace offer, is proof of his unscrupulous and hypocritical mind, which with the help of historical uncorrectness and a bought press desires to bring all States and peoples under the power of mammon. Only with the sword can he be crushed and the world freed of him."

SAYS DRIVE ON ITALY MENACES AMERICA

Germany Seeks Final Decision There, Head of the Italian Propaganda Asserts.

IMPLORES HASTENING OF AID

"Hold Out Until American Army Can Arrive," Albert Ferry Tells French Deputies.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 15.—"There is only one means of existence. That is to hold out until the great American Army can arrive," said Albert Ferry yesterday in the Chamber of Deputies. As a former Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs and a present member of the Army Committee, he has been foremost in asserting the necessity for allied unity of effectiveness, a subject on which he is recognized as an authority.

In further amplification of his words the following letter has just been received from Dr. Savj Lopez, former Professor of History in Pavia University, the present chief of Italian propaganda under the Secretary of State at Rome:

"It is more and more evident that the Central Empires are seeking in the plains of Northern Italy a decision of the conflict. Russia for the moment is no longer to be counted on. Once Italy is crushed, Italy, which up to date has held on her frontiers the greater part of the Austrian armies, Germany and Austria are free to throw themselves mercilessly on the western front and the war will be lost for the Allies.

"To this end the Central Empires have now thrown against Italy the best of their forces. Troops have been taken away from the Russian front, where there is nothing to fear.

"All the armies of shock which the Central Empires possess are pitted against us. We know positively that these forces are being increased day by day. An important concentration of German troops is being prepared in the Trentino.

Italy Straining to Utmost.

"Italy entered the war under the double impulse of completing its unity by delivering the Italians enslaved by Austria and associating itself in the great democratic movement of the Entente. The war was wished and longed for by all that Italy possesses of youth and of healthy thought. About four million men have been mobilized, and all sacrifices have been accepted renouncing joyfully the gilded advantages of neutrality.

"A prodigious industry for the manufacture of war material has been created, this in a country devoid of iron and coal. The people have gladly fought for two years, struggling against terrific difficulties and victoriously carrying the war into the enemy's country.

"Seeing herself ready to fall, Austria was obliged to call to her aid her protector Germany. All those who still have a faint hope of seeing Austria free herself from Germany would do well to undeceive themselves. The sole fact that Austria needs Germany to protect her against Italy means that Austria is entirely in the hands of her protector.

"Germany from now on has a double end in view, to complete the enslavement of Austria and to give a fatal stroke to the armies of the Allies. If in France, England and America there remained any vague desire not to be too hard on Austria, the stern reality of the present facts must now have dispersed it. So the political situation of the Entente is cleared up.

"Italy, by the fact that today she is facing the most violent effort ever attempted by Germany, proves how loyal and profound has been her faith in the Entente. France and England fight Austria for the simple reason that Austria is nothing less than Germany. To the supreme effort of the Central Empires on the plains of Venice should come the answer of a supreme collective effort by the Allies.

Hope in America's Help.

"What will America do?" It is inconceivable that the American flag will be absent at the gravest moment of the conflict in which America has entered with all the nobility of its democratic ideals. If Italy is destined to be crushed by German militarism, then the democratic idealism of America is also crushed and our allies will be unable physically to have their revenge on other fronts. It is therefore necessary that the United States should understand clearly the gravity of the danger.

"Italy, which up to today, has been torn internally by certain differences of opinion, quite natural in a country fighting for an ideal and not having suffered from invasion—exactly the same state of things exists in America—now in the face of catastrophe finds herself absolutely united and determined to sacrifice everything in the supreme struggle. To support such a resolution she needs the moral and material aid of her allies.

Today Italy is in precisely the same position as France, with certain greater disadvantages, a smaller national fortune and a great lack of raw materials. All this is heightened by the difficulties of maritime traffic.

"We beg Americans to come and see for themselves the admirable energy of our people and at the same time convince themselves of our pressing needs. I can assure you that all Americans coming to us to study conditions will be most welcome, and those who have the power and talent to inform American opinion on the stern reality of things will render to the common cause a most precious service.

"In stating these things, I interpret the thoughts of Signor Gallenga, Secretary of State, who appreciates the love America has for our own country, and of which she has given proof.

"A dispatch, received as I write, backs up the foregoing arguments. Contrary to what has been said lately in the press, the mass of Austro-German troops in Italy is the most formidable concentration which has taken place to date on any one front. The attack is made upon the Allies as a whole with the evident purpose of reaching a final decision."

BELGIANS ARE BUSY NORTH OF DIXMUDE

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Only minor activities are chronicled in the British War Office report today on the western front. Belgian forces in Flanders have been busy.

The day report of the British War Office reads:

Yesterday afternoon hostile reconnoitring parties endeavored to approach our lines in the neighborhood of Polderhoek Wood, north of the Menin Road, but were driven off, with loss of prisoners and killed.

On the night of Nov. 13-14 Belgian troops entered the German lines north of Dixmude and blew up a number of the enemy's concrete shelters.

A hostile raid attempted last night north of Bixshoote was repulsed by artillery and machine-gun fire.

The official statement from British Headquarters in France and Belgium, issued tonight, reads:

Early this morning the enemy bombarded heavily our positions north of the Menin Road, and shortly afterward its infantry attempted to advance. The attack was successfully repulsed by our fire. Another party of the enemy, which endeavored to approach our lines northeast of Passchendaele, also was driven off.

The hostile artillery again has shown great activity in the neighborhood of Passchendaele, and also north and south of it.

The Belgian communication issued at Havre says:

During the day of Nov. 13 the artillery fire was rather lively southeast of Dixmude.

PARIS, Nov. 15.—Operations on the Western front today consisted largely of heavy gun fire and aviation activity. The day report of the War Office reads:

The night was calm except in the region of Caurieres, (Verdun front,) where a heavy bombardment is being carried on.

On Tuesday four German airplanes were brought down by our pilots, and four others fell disabled within the enemy lines. Our aviators made a number of effectual raids, dropping many projectiles on various enemy depots and cantonments in the region of Muhlhausen.

German aviators carried out a violent bombardment on Tuesday night in the region of Calais. It is reported that there were a number of victims among the civilian population.

The War Office announcement tonight reads:

There is nothing to report except rather violent artillery action north of Braye-en-Laonnois, and on the right bank of the Meuse.

BERLIN, (via London,) Nov. 15.—The day report of the War Office says rather violent artillery action north of

There being mist and fog the artillery activity in general was moderate, but it increased to greater intensity in the evening near Dixmude and on some sectors of the Flanders battlefield. In successful reconnoitring engagements prisoners and machine guns fell into our hands.

JERUSALEM RAILROAD REACHED BY BRITISH

LONDON, Nov. 15.—The junction point of the Beersheba-Damascus Railway with the line to Jerusalem is now in the possession of the British Army in Palestine, it was officially announced today. The railway line to the vicinity of Na'aneh and El-Mansurah came into British possession as a result of the continued advance of General Allenby's infantry and mounted troops. The Turks lost 1,500 men in prisoners on Tuesday, besides four guns and a score of machine guns.

The text of the official statement on the Palestine operations reads:

Our infantry and mounted troops continued their advance, General Allenby reported yesterday, and we now hold the railway line in the vicinity of El-Mansurah and Na'aneh, including the junction of the Damascus-Beersheba Railway with the line to Jerusalem.

The losses inflicted on the Turks on Tuesday were heavy, including 400 buried at Katrah alone. Our captures on Tuesday amounted to more than 1,500 prisoners, 20 machine guns, and 4 guns.

and Feltre are in fighting contact with the enemy.

On the lower Piave there is nothing new.

The evening communication issued by the War Office says:

In the mountains on both sides of the Brenta Valley our troops are fighting their way forward.

Thirty-Mile Artillery Battle.

By The Associated Press.

ITALIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, Nov. 14.—(Delayed)—Under the escort of a staff officer from headquarters the correspondent today made a tour along thirty miles of the Piave battlefront while a terrific artillery fire was in progress on both banks of the river, and the whole ordinarily peaceful valley was transformed into a blazing inferno.

From a suitable observation point the view led across the river to the positions occupied by General von Buelow's German troops, who had occupied the town of Vidor, over which hung a huge German balloon. Further along, from a castle commanding the heights of Asolo, could be plainly seen the two opposing lines running along the east and west banks of the river, together with the Italian positions stretching back on the hills to Grappa and the Montello crest, and an enemy battery firing from the hills on the eastern side of the river.

An abandoned warehouse on the bank of the Piave River, further down, afforded a view of a massive bridge with the two middle spans blown up and of the great pall of smoke hanging over Zenson and the Island of Grave, where the enemy had crossed the river, but was still held back on the river's edge by the fierce counterattacks of the Italians.

All along the lower stretch of the river the bombardment was continuous, and the inhabitants of the whole countryside were fleeing from the terrain within the range of the guns.

The Italian lines were holding well at all points, and everything indicated the thoroughness of the concentration that had been effected by the army along the new lines. In the new trenches along the river bank and among the columns advancing along the roads the men displayed the best of spirits and evidenced their determination in the desperate struggle for the holding of the Piave line, which is now reaching its climax.

UNITY IN ITALIAN CHAMBER.

Giolitti and Other Ex-Premiers Pledge Support to Orlando.

ROME, Nov. 14, (Delayed.)—Great enthusiasm and patriotic feeling marked this afternoon's sitting of the Italian Chamber of Deputies. Professor Vittorio Orlando, in his first speech as Premier, struck the keynote of his policy, namely, that the situation called for action rather than for words.

The Premier spoke feelingly of the assistance being rendered by the Entente Allies to Italy, and a passage in which he expressed the warm gratitude of Italy to the "great American Republic" for her willing and powerful aid roused tremendous cheering.

Referring to the creation of an Inter-Allied Supreme Council and a Military Council Professor Orlando announced that they would include representatives of the United States.

Ex-Premier Giolitti, who made his first public appearance since Italy entered the war, re-echoed Premier Orlando's words, saying that the whole nation would follow the Government's lead, but that there must be no hesitation or half measures.

Ex-Premier Luzzatti declared in the name of his Venetian colleagues that the people of the invaded region were ready to suffer martyrdom so that Italy might retain her faith in the great principles of independence and liberty.

A vote of confidence in the Government, calling for national concord, was moved by ex-Premier Boselli and it was carried without division amid great enthusiasm.

400,000 ITALIAN REFUGEES.

ROME, Nov. 14, (Delayed.)—Four hundred thousand refugees from the zone of the present military operations have reached the central and southern provinces. Major Grayson P. Murphy, head of the American Red Cross Commission to Europe, is taking measures to contribute to their relief. He has sent agents to Bologna and Ancona, through which most of the refugees pass. Their principal requirements are woolen clothes, blankets, and shoes, which cannot be purchased in some districts.

Prince Colonna, Mayor of Rome, today welcomed the representatives of the American Red Cross and expressed his appreciation of their work.

For economic and political reasons the Government has decided that the refugees will be received elsewhere than in Rome.

HOPES TO SAVE ITALY'S ART.

Swiss Newspaper Addresses a Petition to the Austrian Emperor.

GENEVA, Nov. 15.—The Emperor and Empress of Austria are appealed to by the Journal de Genève to save Italian art treasures in a petition which it is circulating among art lovers in Switzerland for signatures before forwarding it to Vienna.

The appeal describes the treasures as the common patrimony of civilized humanity. Damage to them, it says, would cause profound sadness to the whole world and bring unanimous reprobation.

BELIEVES VENICE DOOMED.

Washington Expects Its Capture by the Invaders in a Few Days.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—The capture of Venice by the Germans is believed to be now only a matter of days.

This is the construction that Washington places upon the official announcements made by the Berlin and Rome War Offices in the last four days and the course of the campaign along the ninety-mile battle front, from the mouth of the Piave to the Sette Comuni Mountain sector northwest of the Venetian plain.

That Venice is doomed is also the interpretation placed upon the news dispatches from Rome and Venice telling of the flight of civilians from that famous city and of the utilization of an army of workmen in the herculean task of removing the art treasures of Venice to places of safety west of the River Brenta. Those of Treviso and Vicenza, cities that will be threatened when the Italian line along the Piave gives way for a further retreat, are also being removed.

Fears for the safety of Venice have been inspired by the fact that the Germans appear now to be concentrating on an effort to cross the banks of the Lower Piave River, not far from the Adriatic, within a distance of less than twelve miles from the heart of Venice. That the Germans have crossed this part of the river at two points is admitted by the Italian War Office. One crossing was made in the loop of the Piave at Zenson di Piave, nearly half way between the two lower rail crossings. It is admitted by the Italian War Office that the Germans also "filtered through" for a crossing at Griaolera. This point is about three miles from the mouth of the Piave.

AIR POST SPURNED BY NORTHCLIFFE

ments which have passed through my hands as head of the mission are such as, if published, would greatly increase our prestige in the United States and hearten our people at home.

"May I also take this opportunity of giving warning about our relations with that great people from whom I come. We have had the tragedy of Russia, due partly to lack of allied propaganda to counteract that of the Germans. We have had the tragedy of Italy largely due to that same enemy propaganda. We have had the tragedies of Serbia, Rumania, and Montenegro. There is one tragedy which I am sure we shall not have, and that is the tragedy of the United States.

"But from countless conversations with leading Americans I know that unless there is swift improvement in our methods here the United States will rightly take into its own hands the entire management of a great part of the war. It will not sacrifice its blood and treasure to the incompetent handling of the affairs of Europe.

"In saying all this, which is very much on my mind, believe me, I have none but the most friendly feeling toward yourself and that I am greatly honored by your suggestion.

"Yours sincerely,

"NORTHCLIFFE."

London Stirred by the Letter.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Lord Northcliffe has dropped his expected bombshell.

It was known that while he was still in America he was restive, and as he approached the British shores speculation was keen as to the manner in which he would signalize his return.

There had been almost general knowledge that he would receive the offer of the post of the new Minister of the Air, and the betting was odds against his accepting it. His refusal of the post scarcely causes surprise, while his manner of refusing it provokes some hilarity.

A prominent politician sarcastically said tonight that the greatest problem which Lord Northcliffe's letter to the Prime Minister had raised was one for A. G. Gardiner, editor of The Daily News. "Whom," asked the politician, "is Gardiner going to train his heaviest batteries upon, Northcliffe or Lloyd George?"

Lord Northcliffe's letter was not made public till too late an hour for much comment to be obtained in the political clubs the prevailing opinion seemed to be that Northcliffe had unwittingly done a good turn to Lloyd George. Politicians, it was said, were threatened with the lamp-post. They would prefer to hang together in battalions rather than as single spies. Consequently the chances were that they would present a solid front against the common enemy.

Northcliffe, it was also said, had greatly overestimated his power over public opinion—that is, the public opinion which really counts.

Sir Eric Geddes, First Lord of the Admiralty, has referred in recent speeches to what he called parrot cries of The Daily Mail, declaring that they did the nation great disservice.

Observers of those of the public which do not derive their opinions from the Northcliffe press are convinced that the circulations of The Daily Mail and The Evening News are not a criterion of their influence.

In other quarters Lord Northcliffe's attitude was regretted as calculated to increase distrust and dissatisfaction, which were not concommitants of a vigorous prosecution of the war.

One of the agencies which distributed the Northcliffe communication to the Prime Minister described it as "a remarkable letter."

TALK OF NORTHCLIFFE TO HEAD GOVERNMENT

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—In neither Rome nor Paris have I seen such excitement as was produced in London by the organization of the Supreme War Council and Lloyd George's speech in Paris, purporting to explain it. When the Premier alighted from his train at Charing Cross he faced a storm of indignant feeling, and for twenty-four hours it looked as if his much predicted overthrow was near.

Today the situation is calmer, and probably by Monday, the date fixed for Parliamentary discussion, the English public will have something new and more real to worry about.

One consideration, which apparently has escaped attention in the excitement, may have been paramount in the decision reached at Rapallo. It was necessary to make a new deal with regard to the Italian Army.

On the other hand, it was absolutely necessary under the circumstances, with France and England furnishing men and material, that they should be represented in the control of operations. Obviously, this was one of the chief reasons for constituting the council, composed of Foch, Wilson, and Cadorna. This action was received in Italy as an excellent solution of the difficulty and certainly had an instantly steadying effect on the army and the country.

The Rapallo action would probably have passed unchallenged but for the Paris speech. What the Premier said at the Painlevé luncheon is sufficiently accurate. The trouble was that the utterance seemed to mark a sudden and complete change of front on the part of the Premier.

Northcliffe could praise Kitchener for months and suddenly attack him, but editors are not amenable to Parliamentary control and can await the vindication of time and events. The Paris speech was entirely out of key with the optimism of previous utterances.

The British public was rudely jarred by the implication that Robertson and Haig were deficient and that the gains in Flanders were not proportioned to the sacrifices. Britain has given her best in life and substance for the gains now referred to lightly by the generalissimo of all the forces, civil and military, under whom the effort has been made.

Lloyd George probably will not be dismissed from power, but he has wounded British pride to the quick. There are enough accumulated grievances at Westminster to overthrow half a dozen governments, but whenever such an event draws near British good sense takes stock and concludes to stand Lloyd George's faults a while longer. His unfailing source of strength is the poverty of competitive material.

In Paris they kick out a Government any morning before breakfast. Whether one man or another heads the Ministry makes little difference, because there are a score about alike. In England there is nobody known to possess the qualifications for Lloyd George's place. I could mention perhaps half a dozen men in America who would be regarded as Premiership material if they were in public life here. Yet in America, too, we feel that public life has tended toward impoverishment. More than once I have heard the remark in England: "Oh, if we could only borrow your Roosevelt."

In the last day or two I have heard the whispered suggestion of the possibility of seeing Northcliffe at the head of the Government. Since his return from America Northcliffe has been strenuously busy and inaccessible to all, except such as the Premier and Colonel House. His presence has already put new vital energy into the Northcliffe press, which is vigorously pursuing Jellicoe for too much optimism and mildly chiding the Premier for too much pessimism.

REPORT HOUSE FAVORS ALLIED COUNCIL PLAN

London Paper Says that He Would Have Suggested if Lloyd George Had Not Done So.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—The Evening Standard today publishes a note stating that the establishment of a Supreme War Council, as outlined by the Prime Minister in the House of Commons yesterday, met with the full approval of the American mission in this country.

"I am informed," The Standard writer added, "that Colonel House has been given full power to assist in the formation of such a council, and that he himself will represent President Wilson on this body, and, further, that General Bliss, Chief of the United States War Staff, will be one of the military representatives whose executive function is to act as technical advisers to the council. I have good reasons for stating that had it not been decided to adopt such a scheme as outlined by Lloyd George Colonel House would have submitted almost identical proposals."

On inquiry at Chesterfield House, Colonel House's headquarters, THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent was informed that The Evening Standard's announcement was "entirely unauthorized."

Although all likelihood of a political crisis arising out of the proposals for a supreme war council appears to have disappeared, Lloyd George's plan continues to meet with very serious opposition.

The need of improved machinery to obtain the best results from the use of the Allies' resources in men and material is universally recognized, but many serious critics question whether the Rapallo plan will meet the requirements.

The Westminster Gazette is among the doubtful ones. The Manchester Guardian, on the other hand, argues that "we should make what changes in our organization promise improvement," and thinks that Lloyd George's scheme may work well, provided there is good-will all around.

The Evening Star and The Globe continue their denunciation of Lloyd George and all his works, chiefly on the theory that the Rapallo agreement is "an extension of the old Kitchener intrigue and the abortive Nivelle intrigue," and that it is "an attempt to put the control of the British Army into the hands of French Generals."

The most radical defect found with the plan by serious minded observers is that it creates a situation which might result in decisions that would not have the full agreement of the soldiers most responsible for their execution. This and other dangers, it is thought, can be avoided if the supreme war council (this designation is held to be a misnomer) is shut off from the actual conduct of operations in any theatre of war and confine itself strictly to the general survey of all operations and all the resources of the Allies with a view to their pooling and co-operation.

"If," says the Westminster Gazette, "the council will do this and desire to do nothing else, it may perform the invaluable function of thinking ahead for the Allies, of watching the various danger points on the many fronts and discovering the weak points in the defenses of the enemy. If it keeps within these boundaries it will be a useful and welcome addition to the allied organization. But if it exceeds them and attempts to interfere with the operations actually going on it may introduce the disastrous principle of dual control into the conduct of the war, leave the commanders in the field in doubt as to which is the supreme authority and, so far from unifying and expediting action, actually produce delay and confusion."

SAYS AMERICA UNDERSTANDS.

Northcliffe Paper Lauds Wilson Speech and Times Editorial.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—The Daily Mail prints a column report of President Wilson's speech at Buffalo, to which it refers editorially as follows:

"We publish today two utterances from the United States, each of which deserves a high place in the literature of liberty. One is President Wilson's address to the American Federation of Labor. The other is the leading article from THE NEW YORK TIMES, a journal that has understood the war from its very beginning; that fought a stout fight for the Allies in the days of American neutrality, and that is now among the ablest supporters and exponents of the cause that America has made her own."

In conclusion, The Mail says:

"The political and economic ambitions of Germany in the near and middle East are now recognized in the United States as the kernel of the war. That is a great fact. It registers an immense advance on the part of American opinion. It implies that the full scope of the struggle is now becoming understood in Washington, better, perhaps, than in some of the capitals of Europe."

The Daily Express, in a leading editorial, says:

"We print this morning part of a remarkable leading article which has appeared in THE NEW YORK TIMES, and which may be regarded as an indication of the determination of the United States, now that she is in the war, to fight with all her heart and with all her strength.

"The Allies, who have been at war with Germany for three years, now realize the necessity for closer co-operation if the enormous resources of the United States and its potentialities for war are to be employed with the greatest possible effect. It is clear that her co-operation must be thorough and without reservation. We would go so far as to say this: The utility of the new Allied War Council depends entirely on American representatives sitting with the British, French, and Italians, and on an American soldier joining the international staff."

TOOK 101,534 GERMANS IN LAST 16 MONTHS

LONDON, Nov. 15.—In the House of Commons today during a speech Henry William Forster, Financial Secretary of War, said that since July 1, 1916, the British had captured from the Turks 30,197 prisoners and 186 guns; and from the Germans on the western front 101,534 prisoners and 519 guns.

The approximate square mileage in territory conquered or reconquered by the British in the same time, said Mr. Forster, was 128,000. The total number of prisoners captured on all fronts since the beginning of the war was 166,000, while the captured guns numbered 800.

LEARN THE GAME RAPIDLY.

American Army in Fine Condition, Says Medill McCormick.

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—Medill McCormick, who returned here today after visiting the allied armies in Europe on every front, said today:

"Our boys in France are in magnificent condition and learning the game with incredible rapidity. Their conduct on and off duty deserves all praise. I saw a great deal of General Pershing, of whom the British and French officers speak in high praise."

He said that if the American job was well done as regards the output of guns and ammunitions and other preparatory work behind the lines, comparatively few lives would be lost.

"It was unmistakably apparent," he said, "that the side with the heaviest guns and the most ammunition, backed by the best organization in the rear, loses the fewest men. Therefore our business is to see that the men have that sort of backing."

AMERICAN KILLED AT FRONT.

William Parringfield Sends Back Message That He Died Gamely.

PARIS, Nov. 15.—William Parringfield of San Francisco, member of the French Foreign Legion, lost his life as the result of wounds he received in a recent action, according to an announcement made in The Herald today.

"Tell the folks back home I went out gamely, pal," Parringfield murmured as his Captain stooped to pin on his breast the Military Medal, says a letter received by Jack Barry of Brooklyn, another member of the Legion, who is on a furlough in Paris, from which The Herald quotes. The letter was penned on the front by Oscar Mouvet, giving the circumstances of the death in Lorraine of this twenty-year-old volunteer.

Parringfield had already been decorated with the War Cross for conspicuous bravery and daring during the last French drive at Verdun.

"Prior to the action which cost Parringfield his life," the letter reads, "volunteers were called for, and Bill was among the first to step forward for a charge which was necessitated by the fact that the Germans held a stretch of front in the —— district, near Lorraine, enabling them to pour a murderous fire on the French troops, rendering the latter's position well-nigh untenable.

"The boys stormed over the parapet as soon as the signal was given. Hardly had Bill progressed ten paces when a machine gun bullet brought him down in his tracks.

"We are so busy out here now that I fear I won't have time to deliver his final message for some days. Please see that it reaches his family. We all are broken up over his loss, but you can bank on us that he will be avenged."

DECORATE 4 OF OUR AIRMEN.

Ceremony Follows a Service in Honor of Guynemer.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE LAFAYETTE ESCADRILLE, Tuesday, Nov. 13, (via Paris, Wednesday, Nov. 14.)—This afternoon, "somewhere on the western front," an impressive service was held in honor of Captain George Guynemer, the famous French airman recently killed in combat. The scene was the airdrome of a fighting unit of the French Air Service, the airdrome from which members of the Lafayette Flying Squadron and their French comrades daily go out to give battle to the German airmen. Here in a hollow square on the flying field were drawn up the four fighting squadrons quartered at this place, who listened to an inspiring address by the commandant of all the French aeronautical forces.

After the service there was a distribution of the honors recently won by French and American pilots. The Americans decorated were Lieutenant Raoul Lufbery, now seventh on the list of French aces, and Sergeants Robert Rockwell, Robert Soubiran, and David McKay Peterson. Their citations were as follows:

Lufbery—A remarkable pilot, who on Oct. 24 in the course of three successive patrols and seven close combats brought down his fourteenth adversary and forced five others to fall out of control.

Rockwell—A fighting pilot, bold and skillful, who has had many battles and who met an enemy formation in superior numbers on Sept. 24 and forced one opponent to land out of control in his own lines.

Soubiran—An American engaged in the French air service since the beginning of the war; member of the Foreign Legion; took part in the battle of the Aisne in 1914 and the Champagne attack in 1915; wounded Oct. 19, 1915; entered aviation service and proved a remarkable pilot; forced an enemy to fall in October while protecting avions which were attacking an enemy observation balloon.

Peterson—An excellent fighting pilot; brought down an enemy on Sept. 19, following the falling German to within 500 yards of the ground regardless of a heavy fire from an enemy battery; machine gunned enemy trenches and reserve troops from very low altitudes on Oct. 24.

During the last fortnight the Lafayette Escadrille made many patrols in all sorts of weather, fighting numerous combats at altitudes from 16,000 feet to less than 500. Sergeant Ray Claflin Bridgman of Chicago again had his biplane damaged, this time by shrapnel from anti-aircraft batteries.

This afternoon Lieutenant William Thaw and Sergeant Peterson, while out on a patrol at high altitudes, had a lively battle with three albatross monoplanes, which attacked them from above, driving them down into the clouds. Sergeant Kenneth Marr of San Francisco was attacked from above by another albatross and compelled to dive from an altitude of 3,500 yards to 1,500 yards.

Charles H. Dolan of Dorchester, Mass., has been promoted to the rank of Sergeant.

SCOFFS AT OUR AIR PLANS.

Richthofen Says We Can't Put 20,000 Trained Pilots in War.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 15.—Captain Baron von Richthofen, Germany's leading aviator, expresses himself as unconcerned over the reported preparations to place 20,000 American aviators on the western front. He thinks it will be impossible to get together that many trained pilots, as the training is long and costly and involves heavy casualties. The newcomers, he says, will, particularly at first, "be unable to judge the military conditions, and at least 25 per cent. of the machines will be disabled during the long transport."

Lieut. Gen. von Ardenne of the Berliner Tageblatt, who reports this conversation with von Richthofen at the Flanders front, adds that the German air service, which evidently has been forewarned by newspaper discussion of American plans, is steadily increasing the number of aviators and machines.

German fighting airplanes, General von Ardenne says, now carry wireless receiving outfits, which enable them to engage in combat promptly with enemy fliers. This is necessitated by new conditions on the Flanders front, where whole squadrons of allied machines can appear over the German lines in a surprisingly short time. German squadrons starting from the ground to meet the invaders would be too late, so they must constantly be in the front lines, either flying or ready for flight.

German aviators say that they have noted recently that a majority of the British fliers in Flanders are showing themselves in the Dixmude section of the front instead of the region of Passchendaele.

General von Ardenne discusses new developments of the Flanders fighting, among them the decrease in the use of hand grenades, which in close fighting are as dangerous to friends as to foes. They are being displaced by light machine guns and special units whose task is to seek out enemy batteries by sight or hearing. The muzzle flash of a gun, he says, is observed by three to five stations connected by telephone, and the position of the gun is determined easily. Special apparatus has been designed to determine the distance and direction from which the sound of a cannon's discharge comes.

Trade Acceptances

More than 150 business organizations have appointed committees to assist in the campaign to extend the use of trade acceptances.

There are many advantages to be obtained by the use of the acceptance method which the officers of the Citizens National Bank would be glad to explain.

Allies' Progress Sure on Western Front, Which Is Merely Extended by Italian Army's Collapse.

By ARTHUR POLLEN,
Foremost British Writer on Naval Affairs.

The perennial difficulty in war is to see events first as they truly are, and next in their right relation to the situation. The thing would be hard enough to see, as a whole, if we had to think of the 500-mile western front alone, but throw in the almost separate wars in Italy, the Balkans, Syria, Mesopotamia, and Russia, and add the war at sea, and who would be bold enough to say that his judgment of the position at any one moment is likely to be right? And it is another difficulty that each of us is desperately anxious for his side to win, and has been anxious for a desperately long time, and so brings to the contemplation of each happening a mind wearied by long puzzling and nerves all on edge from constant disappointment. Small wonder if the events of the last month are disconcerting and discouraging.

For never apparently have things gone better for the enemy or worse for us. The German victory at Riga seems to put Petrograd at the enemy's mercy—whenever he cares to devote sufficient troops to the job of taking it. The joint German and Austrian invasion of Italy was the most sudden and complete reversal of form that the war has seen. It is hardly two months since we were all wondering whether it was worth while giving Cadorna the extra guns and ammunition that would start him on his conquest of Vienna! The defeat is not only disconcerting in itself, but doubly demoralizing because the only alternatives contemplated were either that Italy should mark time or be made the spearhead of the decisive allied victory.

Is it surprising that these things should be reflected in equally disconcerting political changes in Europe? Russia, whose Government was much more provisional than governing, is now seemingly in the full tide of a civil war. Italy, fortunately, had changed her Cabinet just before fell. And now the French Cabinet is gone, and Lloyd George's Government is very much on its defense. The enemy, in short, has not only won resounding military successes, but is reaping a full harvest in the political reactions these successes have created among the Allies. It is possible that nerves in London are a bit on edge on account of the recent air raids too.

Situation's Favorable Elements.

But looking on at a distance, where the atmosphere is calmer, one is inclined to wonder why the more favorable elements of the situation do not seem to weigh more heavily in the scale. Progress on the western front goes on slowly indeed, but without a check. At no point and on no occasion does the enemy seem able to resist very effectively or to counterattack very resolutely. He is not, of course, utterly demoralized, but he certainly has none of his old morale. On this front at least the formula of victory is understood and the promise of its ultimate completion all the stronger for the presence of the first division of the United States Army. In a purely military sense the situation on the western front can never have been better. It has, of course, for a year been extremely good. The only novelty in the situation is that the allied forces and command are improving week by week, and the enemy's power of resistence diminishing. Both are continuing processes, but have not been marked by any sudden and unexpected factor in our favor.

But at sea the situation has altered in our favor so completely as to make one chary of believing that we can trust the figures. Think for a minute what this comparison means. In April Great Britain alone was losing her larger ships at the rate of twenty-six a week, or nearly four a day. By September it had dropped to thirteen, or nearly two a day. In the last four weeks, the rate has been eight, or barely over one a day. For the last week, the loss is actually one in seven days! For a month, then, the submarine menace has been reduced below the level of what it was before the ruthless campaign began in February last. Again think what this means.

In November, a year ago, Germany informed her enemies that if they did not make peace at once she would at last make real war and crush the whole combination against her, and generally make us sorry we had provoked her. The idea was that Great Britain was holding the combination against her and that 250 submarines, all out together to sink at sight, would dispose of at least 1,000,000 tons of British shipping a month, would scare all neutrals off the sea, and so bring Great Britain to famine and the Allies to impotence before the Summer was over. And, as America could not strike for a year and as the war would be over—with a German peace at the end of it—long before that, it would not matter 5 pfennigs whether the new submarine war brought the United States into the field or not. They couldn't get into the field if there were no ships.

Now, bearing in mind that this was the German plan, remembering just how close it came to realization, and today looking at the evidence that the plan has definitely and finally failed, we can surely understand how desperate the situation must be which this miscalculation has created. Six months ago no one could have said that it was a certainty that an American army of one and a half million or two million men could ever have been sent over to France and maintained there. The highest rate of shipbuilding that all the Allies together could atttain at earliest a year after that date seemed to be less than two-thirds of the rate of loss. By the time the American Army would be ready, then, there would be no ships to carry or supply it. In other words, though the first part of the German calculations, namely, the prompt starving of Great Britain, might have proved wrong, it still looked as if the submarine would succeed in excluding America from actual intervention in the war. Those were the days when that terrible sarcasm haunted the mind of every observer: "Can the army win the war before the navy loses it?" And the collapse of Russia seemed to make an early military victory impossible.

The Situation Today.

Contrast the anxiety of those days with the situation today. The permanent factors in the problem are the same now as then. Germany has got no new accession of strength since this time last year. The Allies may temporarily and partially have lost Russia, but they have permanently gained America, and Russia is not wholly lost. Germany cannot take all her troops or, indeed, very many of them, away. There is always the danger of a revival as sudden as the collapse. Even the invasion of Northern Italy may ultimately, and indeed soon, prove a Pyrhhic victory. If the Central Powers have driven the Italian Army backward, they have drawn the British, French, and American Armies forward. Rightly seen, all that Germany and Austria have achieved beyond the material and men they have captured or destroyed is to make the Italian front a mere extension of the French front. If they come on in sufficient numbers to threaten Italy, they are laying out a sufficient bait to attract Pétain and Sir Douglas Haig. If victory were turned to defeat on the line of the Piave, the Brenta, or the Adige, it would only be a case of precedents one, two, or three years old repeated.

So it comes to this: Germany's gains on land are a very poor substitute for her lost campaign at sea, remembering, as we must, that it was on this campaign, and this campaign alone, that she founded all the hopes that carried her sorely tried army and people through the third Winter of the war. Now the fourth Winter must be suffered, and sea communications being safe for the Allies, a fifth Winter's war is a certainty unless Germany surrenders first. It is a certainty because France, Italy, and England can now be revictualed and Russia, if need be, can be rearmed; because an American army more than a million strong can be in the field for the Autumn campaign of next year. It means another million Americans for the Spring of 1919, a steady growth, in short of allied military force.

And meantime, the blunder of forcing America into the war has at last made the sea blockade a real siege. It is significant that von Tirpitz, the real inventor of submarine piracy, is the first to admit in Germany that piracy has failed. And it was Germany's only hope.

Newspaper Observers in London Won Over to Government's Policy in Reporting Sinkings.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Although Sir Eric Geddes and the other Admiralty authorities deprecate any judgments upon the submarine war based upon a particular week's return, yesterday's announcement of the small losses, following upon last week's reduced sinkings is taken as corroborating the nopeful views expressed by Sir Eric and others in their recent speeches.

Conversations which THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent has had with high officials, the details of which cannot be made public, give a highly satisfactory impression regarding the submarine question as a whole. There still remain difficulties, but, generally speaking, the situation is well in hand.

It has been suggested in America that the British naval authorities could make out a better case for themselves by the publication of certain details, and that the reticence they display creates a suspicion that they are hiding something of the truth. Readers of THE TIMES will remember the talk along similar lines in a part of the English press.

Sir Eric Geddes put an end to the campaign "for more light" here by explaining to the newspaper editors exactly what were the reasons that made secrecy advisable, and he has pursued a similar frank policy with American correspondents here.

The arguments which he advances appeal even to laymen as sound, and the statement of facts and the figures which THE TIMES correspondent has been privileged to see carries the conviction that, barring unexpected new developments, Germany's U-boat warfare has seen its best days.

While on this subject, it may be added that suggestions that have found expression in America that there are differences of opinion and viewpoint between the American and British naval officers are without basis. American officers who have been here or are here now on various missions speak in terms of gratification of their reception by British naval authorities and of the full facilities allowed them in the pursuit of their investigations. In the words of the First Lord of the Admiralty, "Every door in this building has been just as open to the American naval officers as to the British."

EDINBURGH, Nov. 15. — Baron Rhondda, the Food Controller, in an address here today said that, although the country rejoiced over the small number of ships sunk by German submarines last week, the seriousness of the food situation had not diminished.

The speaker said he intended buying all stocks of tea in Ceylon and India and selling them here at cost price. He added that he also was going to provide cheaper milk for expectant and nursing mothers and for children at the cost of the State.

U-BOATS DECISIVE, SAYS THE KAISER

Warfare Won't Stop Till Foe Is Beaten—Submarine Developments Yet to Come.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 15.—The German Emperor, according to a Berlin dispatch, addressing the U-boat crews in the Adriatic and referring to the development of the U-boats, said that a voyage of three or four weeks was now an everyday occurrence, and stated that the development of the U-boats had not reached its highest point.

He expressed gratification at the amount of tonnage sunk in the Mediterranean, which, he said, showed that the U-boats had fulfilled what had been expected of them.

Submarine warfare would have a decisive part in the final outcome of the war and would not be stopped until the enemy was vanquished.

The Emperor concluded:

"I am certain that our submarines will never rest until the enemy is subdued. But for this we need, as well as the power of man, the aid of God."

DENY SITUATION IN IRELAND IS GRAVE

Wimborne and Curzon Both Assert that Gloomy Views Are Unwarranted.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Viscount Chaplin in the House of Lords today called attention to the grave situation in Ireland. He referred especially to the Sinn Fein campaign in favor of an independent republic.

Baron Wimborne, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, replying, said he did not share Viscount Chaplin's gloomy anticipations, despite the inflammable material in Ireland. The gravest danger to be apprehended was the importation of arms or a hostile landing. But he had been assured that, in view of the steps taken, neither possibility was likely to arise. As to the internal situation in Ireland, that was not out of hand, and generally the country was prosperous. A governing factor in the situation was the Irish Convention, which he believed had been rewarded with substantial progress.

After alluding to the expected rising in Ireland last week Sunday, which did not materialize, he said that had the executive taken precipitate action the convention would have been killed. This incident justified the Government policy not to seek trouble, but to be prepared.

The Sinn Feiners, said Lord Wimborne, were not pro-German either in feeling or impulse. Their idea of Ireland becoming a republic must always remain a dream, the Government now having an adequate military establishment in Ireland.

The Marquis of Lansdowne and others also expressed apprehension over the situation in Ireland.

The Earl of Curzon, Government leader, in reply, referred to the Premier's recent declaration of policy for Ireland. He contended that the declaration had been effective; that a change had come over the scene in Ireland, and that the Government was pursuing the Premier's policy with firmness and without provocation. He denied that the Sinn Fein was a dangerous factor and said its importance should not be overestimated. Eighty per cent. of the Sinn Feiners, he said, were opposed to armed rebellion.

The Sinn Fein, Earl Curzon added, had alienated the soberer elements of the population, and it was a good sign that the Catholic Church had repudiated the Sinn Feiners. A strong reaction was growing in Ireland against the Sinn Fein, and it would be a mistake to check it and thus play into the hands of the extremists. Violent Sinn Fein speeches were a safety valve for pent-up emotions.

Mr. Duke, (Secretary for Ireland,) the speaker continued, recently refused to call out the military on the occasion of an apprehended rising which fizzled out. That was a feather in Secretary Duke's cap and a great blow to Sinn Fein. It would be unwise for the Government to risk jeopardizing the opportunity they now had for a thorough convention and in finding a solution to the Irish problem.

Viscount Chaplin then withdrew his motion.

SUBMARINE TERROR NEW GERMAN IDEA

Had Not Considered U-Boat an Important Weapon Before War Began, Says Marley F. Hay.

SIZE OF FLEET EXAGGERATED

Marine Engineer Denies Teutons Have Yard Capacity for Building Great Numbers.

Germany's pre-war submarine construction policy shows that she neither anticipated that England would enter the war, nor expected to use the submarine as an important weapon, according to Marley F. Hay of the Denny-Hay Submarine Company of Dumbarton, Scotland. Mr. Hay, who is a member of the American Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers, will read a paper entitled "The Influence of the War on the Submarine Policy" at the twenty-fifth annual meeting of the society at 29 West Thirty-ninth Street today. The paper was made public at yesterday's meeting of the society.

When the war began in August, 1914, Great Britain had the most submarines—ninety in all—according to Mr. Hay. The reason she had so many was for the protection of her harbors and coasts. The usefulness of submarines to England in work of this kind had been shown by tests during the five previous years.

Germany was the last of the great powers to admit the desirability or need for submarines, according to Mr. Hay. Her belief in submarines has developed only since the war under the pressure of actual war conditions. In 1911 Mr. Hay says he talked personally with Admiral von Tirpitz, who said then that he considered submarines in the experimental stage, of doubtful utility, and that the German Government was not at all convinced that they would form an essential or conspicuous part of future naval programs. That von Tirpitz was not merely "camouflaging" when he said this is proved, Mr. Hay thinks, by the well-known fact that Germany in submarines at that time was a third-class power.

When the war began Germany had only twenty-five submarines in commission and only half a dozen more building. They were all of the Krupp-Germania type. Von Tirpitz explained almost apologetically that they had been built for "experimental purposes."

Submarine Power Exaggerated.

"Estimates have been printed crediting Germany with possessing 700 submarines last May and 1,200 by the end of this year. No one familiar with German shipbuilding facilities could make such a statement. Considering her limitations in this respect, Germany could have only had 200 submarines in commission last May. If all her public and private shipyards are being given exclusively to the building of submarines Germany can only build 100 submarines every six months. Information at hand would indicate that the actual recent output has been approximately ten a month. Most of these have been 800 to 1,000 tons displacement. Several groups of 1,500 tons displacement have also been commissioned, and a flotilla of eight so-called submarine cruisers of 2,800 tons displacement, of which three are reported completed and the remainder will be ready next February, are now under way. These latter vessels will mount two six-inch guns, besides two guns of lighter calibre, and will have the innovation of an armored conning tower. An armored conning tower is only possible on submarines of great size, as its weight makes small submarines unstable.

"Before the war, it would seem that neither the Allies nor the Teutonic powers anticipated ruthless submarine war against merchant shipping. Conan Doyle prophesied it in a book. But his idea was dismissed as fantastic. That it was not planned beforehand is shown both by Germany's complete unpreparedness to conduct submarine war and the fact that what few submarines she had were of the anti-warship rather than the anti-merchantman type. Early in the war, the methods of defense against submarines were nets with telltale devices, and high speed patrol launches armed with 2-inch and 3-inch guns. Then knife edges and net-cutters were put on the submarines by Germany and they were armed with 4-inch guns to outrange the patrol boats. The latest German submarines have 6-inch guns and are formidable opponents to a destroyer. On the latest submarines, the periscopes are sometimes 10 meters high to reduce dangers from ramming. Although the conning tower is a submarine's most vulnerable point, its destruction by no means entails the submarine's destruction.

Saving in Torpedoes.

"Early in the war, Germany found that sinking merchantmen with 18-inch or 20-inch torpedoes was expensive and inconvenient. Now a 14-inch torpedo is used. An up-to-date German submarine is perfectly balanced. The vessel can remain stationary with only the tops of her fully extended periscopes exposed. The submarines have sensative listening devices and are nearly noiseless. At first, little success was had in combating submarines. Later developments, however, make it possible to hear even an invisible submarine and to approximate its direction. Submarines thus may themselves be effectively used to detect submarines. Contra-submarines of this kind, however, do all their work submerged and should preferably be armed with 12-inch torpedoes. Many should be fired at once on the principle of a shot gun since a submarine may be from 8 to 20 feet beneath its elongated periscope. These groups of tubes may be fitted in the bow. In stalking enemy submarines in this way, however, the element of chance is very great."

The naval architects and marine engineers are holding a two-day session. Naval Constructor R. M. Watt presided yesterday. Samuel W. Wakeman, Charles N. Crowell, Robert Haig, W. W. Smith, Robert W. Morrell, and A. G. Mattsson were among the speakers yesterday.

BRITISH BENEFIT BY BENSON'S VISIT

Co-operation of American and British Navies "More Complete," Says Admiralty.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—In an official communication issued this evening the Admiralty says:

"Since the arrival in England of Admiral Benson, U. S. N., and his staff, he has been in frequent conference with the First Lord of the Admiralty and with the chief and principal members of the naval staff. He also has visited the Commander in Chief of the Grand Fleet on board his flagship and is now visiting our principal naval bases.

"Very great benefit has been derived from these meetings and from the interchange of ideas and views, and cooperation between the American and British navies thus has been made easier and more complete."

All the members of the American Mission had an exceptionally busy day today. There were important conferences between Oscar T. Crosby, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and Major Gen. F. B. Maurice, Director of Military Operations of the War Office, and the Italian Ambassador on the subject of American loans to Italy, from which country General Maurice has just returned and between General Tasker H. Bliss, the American Chief of Staff, and General William R. Robertson, Chief of the Imperial Staff at Army Headquarters, and the heads of the British Munitions Department.

Vance McCormick, Chairman of the American War Trade Board, and Dr. Alonzo E. Taylor of the American Food Administration conferred with Lord Robert Cecil, Minister of Blockade, on the subject of Great Britain's blockade.

This afternoon Colonel E. M. House, head of the mission, was a luncheon guest of the Duke of Connaught, while this evening Colonel House and other members of the mission were dinner guests of Arthur J. Balfour, British Foreign Secretary, in the House of Commons.

2 KILLED ON THE ROCHESTER

Second Engineer and an Oiler Victims of U-Boat Attack, Sims Reports

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Forty-seven members of the crew and armed guard of the American steamer Rochester, including the Captain of the vessel, were rescued after it was sunk by German submarines on Nov. 2, and two men were killed by explosions, according to a statement authorized by Secretary Daniels tonight, which reads:

"A dispatch from Admiral Sims states that when the steamer Rochester was torpedoed and sunk Nov. 2 forty-seven of the crew and armed guard escaped in three boats. Second Engineer Bonde and Oiler Anderson were killed by explosions. Five days later a British patrol vessel rescued one boat, containing Captain Eric Kokerits, sixteen of his crew, and five members of the naval gun crew—Chief Boatswain's Mate Edward McCausland, W. B. Thompson, Thaddeus Fellows, and William Eisenhardt, seamen, second class, and William Foulis, gunner's mate, second class. The two other boats, Admiral Sims is informed, reached shore safely.

"The Captain reported that no submarine was seen until the crew had left the ship; then a U-boat came to the surface, fired ten shots at the Rochester, and signaled to two other submarines which were in sight.

"The home address and next of kin of the members of the armed guard mentioned in the dispatch are as follows:

Transfer of Huge Amount Effected Without the Slightest Disturbance of Money Market.

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York received yesterday $678,000,000 in payment of Liberty Loan subscriptions. Part of this sum represented the 18 per cent installment due yesterday and part of the 98 per cent. due on full-paid subscriptions, 2 per cent having been paid with the application. Of the $678,000,000 received, the bank got $48,000,000 in cash, $174,000,000 in Treasury certificates of indebtedness, and $456,000,000 was transferred to the Government by credits on the books of the subscribing banks and trust companies.

These figures were given out shortly before midnight, and it was stated that about 300 banks and trust companies had not been heard from. A great many more returns will be brought in by this morning's mail, and it is expected that the final tabulation will show receipts of at least $700,000,000.

Of the 1,275 reporting institutions, approximately half qualified as Government depositors and effected their payments by book entries, while the others either sent their drafts or instructed their New York City correspondents to make payments for them. Some of them forwarded certificates of indebtedness, an issue of $300,000,000 of which matured yesterday. The banks were permitted to use all outstanding certificates, (now totalling $2,284,631,000,) but few availed themselves of the privilege of sending those that have not yet matured. Many of the banks sent their certificates for redemption and paid for the bonds by book credits. It was estimated that approximately $165,000,000 of the certificates were presented for redemption.

The remarkable thing about yesterday's financial transactions—probably the largest of any single day in the history of the country—was that the transfer of huge sums of money was effected without the slightest disturbance of the money market. The rate for call money did not move above 4 per cent., the rate that has prevailed for the last week or two days, and no change was reported in time loans. The so-called Money Committee which has worked with the Liberty Loan Committee and which organized a money "pool" for the purpose of steadying the money market during the loan campaign was called upon to do very little yesterday as there was only a relatively small demand for money.

It was estimated that funds put out on call amounted to about $26,000,000 or $27,000,000, and that most of it had come from members of the Money Committee. Money brokers said that this was an unusually small amount of money, much larger sums having been lent on normal days. The excellent behavior of the money market was generally commented upon by bankers, who expressed gratification over the results and said that New York had given practical demonstration of the fact that it deserves the title of premier in the money markets of the world.

Subscriptions to the Liberty Loan filed in the New York district amounted to more than $1,550,000,000, and the bonds allotted totaled $1,151,000,000. Previous to yesterday the bank had collected about $90,000,000, of which $60,000,000 represented cash sales of actual bonds and the balance the 2 per cent. payment which had to accompany subscriptions. Although a great many individual subscribers made full payments to their banks prior to Nov. 15, the banks did not have to make their returns to the Federal Reserve Bank until yesterday. If all the reporting institutions had only paid in the 18 per cent. yesterday's receipts would have amounted to about $200,000,000, but the fact that $678,000,000 was received indicates that a large percentage of subscriptions, perhaps 60 per cent., were full paid.

There are two more installment payments, each 40 per cent., one due Dec. 15 and the other Jan. 15.

Transactions in Liberty Loan bonds on the Stock Exchange yesterday totaled $2,568,500. The 3½ per cents, after opening at 98.90, sold down to 98.44, a new low record. They rallied from that point to 98.94 and closed at 98.94, a net gain of .08 for the day. The new 4s opened at 99.00, declined to 99.24, and closed at 99.50, a loss of .20 from Wednesday's final figure. Sales of the 4s aggregated $1,018,000.

The Bond Issue Division of the Federal Reserve Bank expects to begin making deliveries of the new bonds tomorrow, and by Monday all of the bonds received from Washington will have been distributed. Shipments of the bonds from the Bureau of Engraving and Printing are proceeding rather slowly. Bank officials will not venture a guess as to when all the required securities will be available.

None of the conversion 4s have yet been received, but some may arrive Monday.

Charles H. Platner, manager of the Bond Exchange Department of the United States Treasury, announced at midnight last night that no more 3½ per cent. Liberty bonds would be converted to 4 per cents before Monday. This action had to be taken, he said, for the reason that the office force had been unable to keep abreast of the demands for conversions, which had steadily increased until yesterday more than 1,000 applications were made in person at the office of the department at 50 Wall Street, while more than 1,000 other applications came by mail.

Mr. Platner said that more than $50,000,000 of the 3½ per cent. bonds had been converted already for the later issues. He added that about 75 per cent. of the conversions were taking place in this city, persons living in all of the other Federal Reserve districts having the conversions made by mail in this city.

BOND SALE IN SCHOOLS.

The pupils attending the schools in New York State bought Liberty bonds to the amount of $38,258,450, according to a report presented to the Board of Regents of the University of the State of New York at a meeting yesterday in the rooms of the Bar Association, 42 West Forty-fourth Street.

The pupils in the schools in the cities bought $34,795,500 of the bonds, $1,962,450 was contributed by children in supervisory districts, $713,200 from villages, $637,000 from colleges and $118,800 from private schools.

The Liberty bond campaign in the schools of the State was under the direction of Regents Abram I. Elkus, Charles B. Alexander, and James Byrne. The report said that the fundamental plan of reaching the home through the child in the school far exceeded expectations. It is believed that the plan of the Regents caused every parent having a child in the school to be reached in the campaign, as well as every person interested in a child. The public libraries were also used in the State campaign, according to the report, which states that 550 libraries had booths and were centres of practical information on the Liberty Loan.

URGES WATERWAYS AS AID TO RAILROADS

President of Burlington Says These Must Be Used to Help Out Traffic Problems.

GIANT STRIDES NOW MADE

Hale Holden Tells Diners to Help Win the War by Ending Needless Criticism.

Hale Holden, President of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad and member of the Railroads' War Board, speaking at the annual dinner of the National Industrial Traffic League at the Waldorf-Astoria last night, served notice that the people of the country might as well get ready to use canals, electric lines, motor trucks, and other means of transportation to take some of the load off the railroads, because, he said, in the speeding up of the great American power machine, the Government's demands upon the carriers must be served first.

Despite occasional slipping of the cogs, the American machine was speeding up admirably, said Mr. Holden, and he called on the men and women of the country to oil the wheels by stopping criticism, criticism of the Government, of the war, of the Allies, and get down to the fact that the one business of this country now is to win the war.

Mr. Holden said that the railroads would do the job the Government had put upon them—and he added that they would be well able to do all the other business of the country were it not for the fact that machine shops and car mills were being used to rejuvenate the railroads of France and Russia. He said that the railroads of the United States must be kept in good repair, and that to do this the railroads stood in immediate need of funds.

Business of Winning the War.

"The practices of our commercial and industrial life of yesterday—in the days when war was far away from us and not as today, in the heart and on the tongue of every one—those practices are being rapidly readjusted to meet the growing problems of this modern science of wholesale homicide and destruction, and we must continue, as we have well begun, to bring our common effort into form best suited to the needs of the hour," Mr. Holden said. "These needs are measured yet by no horizon and no man knows how much of urgent effort and sacrifice of self and treasure will be required to carry on through to the end—but no man hesitates on that account.

"The business of the country today is the business of winning the war—every plan or action must be measured by that standard and be forwarded, altered, or abandoned by a patriotic appraisement of motives to that end. We have the experiences of our allies to guide us and know the cost they endured in men and money before each was aroused to the sacrifices necessary to bring its powers together to the single business of war. Business as usual delays the business of war, and the giant strides made, under the great leadership of the President, in mobilizing the business energies of the country are daily showing the conviction in the hearts of the people that nothing is worth while if it interferes with the preparations for the war or, indeed, if it does not in some way contribute toward them.

"Efficient transportation is one of the prime necessities of the whole war enterprise—the ocean has between us and our increasing army abroad—and that we are undertaking to finance. Transportation within our borders is equally vital and important and that is the subject of immediate concern that has brought us together here tonight."

Mr. Holden then told of the formation of the Railroads' War Board and its accomplishments.

"The result of all of this effort has been that without noticeable increase in power or cars, tracks or terminals, approximately 25 per cent. more freight traffic has been handled than last year, and the performance, I think, has been better than in the competitive confusion of a year ago," he said.

He added that many of the lessons in efficiency the roads had learned meant that in many respects there would never be a return to the old competitive system.

"But the railroads know that much more will be required of them. The business of the war is growing daily larger, and this means greater traffic to be handled," he continued. "Cold weather is at hand, with decreased efficiency of men and power, and this, added to the growing scarcity of labor, gives much concern to the outlook for the Winter. But I think there is no reason for alarm, nor, indeed, for doubt, about the capacity of the railroads to meet the needs of the country. There are some things, however, which must be done to accomplish this, and I base my judgment upon the faith that these things will be done."

Abolish Spirit of Complaint.

There was prolonged applause when the speaker said:

"Let us for the period of the war abolish and bring to an end the old spirit of complaint and criticism. This is no time to rattle old skeletons; on the contrary, they ought now to be put well under ground and if we will do this I think they will permanently stay there. Let us, at least during the war, have an end of this; before we criticise let us reflect; before we condemn let us investigate, and in a better spirit of forbearance and co-operation I am certain that we will jointly go further and do better in our service to the country in this hour of trial."

Speaking of the needs of the roads, Mr. Holden said:

"The railroad plant today needs more power, but for the present the output of the locomotive plants of the country is almost wholly going to supply the needs of the Government for its railroad operations abroad and the pressing needs of our allies. We need more cars, but because of the needs of the Government and our allies and the scarcity and high cost of labor and materials, not as much progress has been made in securing new equipment for renewals and additions as the traffic of the country needs.

"If the capacity of the railroads is exceeded this offers no more reason for now condemning them than any other industry or plant suddenly burdened by an excessive load. It is unfair to say, as some have, that the railroads have broken down, because the truth is that they are doing more than ever before and are handling continuously and efficiently the greatest traffic in the history of the country. The situation is only made worse by prejudiced expressions of that kind, and intelligent men give little heed to them."

Predicting a further curtailment of passenger service, Mr. Holden said:

"Already passenger mileage at approximately the rate of 25,000,000 miles per annum has been withdrawn, and this has released a great many men for more important work and has accomplished a considerable saving in coal. The passenger travel of the country is heavier than it has ever been before, and shows no signs of abatement. Under these conditions, further reductions in passenger service have not yet seemed possible, but, guided by action which we know has taken place abroad, we may predict that the public, for the like purpose of better use of men and facilities, may have to patiently submit to further curtailment of passenger service and forego some of the comforts and conveniences which it now has.

"We must make greater use of waterways, electric lines, and motor trucks wherever practical means can be developed to accomplish this—and no better time than the present can be found to make the experiment. In points, parts of the country freight is interchanged in considerable volume between steam and electric lines. Locally, electric lines are handling an increasing tonnage. Motor trucks present an admirable means for effecting delivery of package freight to nearby points, and as to all of these I am satisfied that the railroads are prepared to join in practical and reasonable measures to develop the use of them.

"Plainly, in these times, the railroads must have more revenues. Railroad expenses nowadays are an open book, and the predictions made by railroad officers to the Interstate Commerce Commission last Spring in the effort to obtain timely relief failed only in that the increased cost has greatly exceeded the conservative estimates then made. These things seem to me, however, not difficult to do—and yet the doing of them adequately and in time will likely determine the success of the efforts the railroads are so earnestly putting forth to help win the war."

Many problems affecting shippers were discussed yesterday at the opening sessions of the annual meeting of the league at the Waldorf, G. M. Frear of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, President of the league, presided over the convention, which was attended by 300 members.

The object of the league, it was explained, was to interchange ideas concerning traffic matters, co-operate with the Interstate Commerce Commission and transportation companies in promoting and securing a better understanding by the public and the State and national Governments of the needs of the traffic world, with a view to advancing fair dealing, and promoting, conserving, and protecting the commercial and transportation interests.

The league re-elected the following officers: President, G. M. Freer, Cincinnati; Vice President, W. H. Chandler, Boston; Secretary-Treasurer, O. F. Bell, Chicago; Chairman Board of Directors, F. B. Montgomery, Chicago; Chairman of Executive Committee, H. C. Barlow, and Vice Chairman, D. F. Hurd.

The convention will end today, after which the members of the league will make a trip around the harbor.

ORDERS 21,000,000 SHELLS.

War Department Allots Contracts for Part of 50,000,000 Total.

It was reported yesterday that the War Department has completed the allotment of orders for about 21,000,000 shells for 75-millimeter fieldpieces, out of a total of 33,000,000 shells, for which the department queried ordnance firms. This total forms part of orders for 50,000,000 shells in all, 8,000,000 of which are for anti-aircraft guns.

Canadian firms which have recently completed work for the British Government and were facing a shutdown, are understood to have received a large part of the order, and among American firms it is reported that the American Can Company, T. H. Symington & Co., New York Air Brake Company, American Car and Foundry Company, Worthington Pump and Machinery Company, and the General Electric Company received allotments.

The total cost of the present shell program is estimated at about $230,000,000, and other large orders are expected in the near future, as American troops begin to take an active part in the fighting in France.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—The War Department has this week placed some of the largest orders for shells that have been made during the war.

The contracts have been made through the Ordnance Department of the War Department and are for shells for 75-millimeter field pieces and for anti-aircraft guns. The precise number of shells has not been made public, but it is said to be 21,850,000. The orders were absorbed by several of the largest manufacturing plants in the country, and deliveries will be made regularly every month during the Winter, in anticipation of a general Spring drive by the Allies in combined force.

No difficulty has been encountered by the Ordnance Department in placing orders for these shells, and the order could have been considerably increased so far as capacity is concerned. The number contracted for is regarded as meeting all present requirements. Provision has been made, however, for increasing the quantity of shells covered by the contracts in case the Government should find that estimates had been under, rather than over, possible requirements.

WILSON AIDS JEWISH PLAN.

Will Try to Arrange for Sending Relief to Poland.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—President Wilson today assured a committee of prominent Jews of America who called upon him that he would do his utmost to aid them to forward money to the Jews of Poland. The committee consisted of ex-Ambassador Henry Morgenthau, Abram Elkus, Oscar Straus, Jacob H. Schiff, Judge Otto Rosalski, Alexander Kahn of New York, Judge Julian Mack of Chicago, and Dr. Cyrus Adler of Philadelphia. Dr. Adler and Mr. Morgenthau presented the plea of the committee.

This committee was formed several weeks ago to visit the President and urge upon him the necessity of making some arrangements through diplomatic channels of the United States which would permit the sending of relief to the population of Jews and non-Jews in Poland, which is now under German control.

This statement was issued, explaining the situation and the purpose of the visit:

"The committee urged upon the President to see whether the United States Government could not extend its aid in this direction, as was done by the Belgian Commission. It was urged by the committee that they would supply the proper funds and necessities which may be distributed by such commission as he may designate and which would be considered trustworthy in every way. It was shown that the State Department could be of very much assistance in this regard.

"The committee left the White House after a half-hour conference full of confidence and hope that the President would do his utmost in granting their request. It appears from all indications that the President was very friendly and felt much interested in this matter and would probably see the machinery of the Government in motion to bring this about, provided there would be enough bottoms and other means of transporting these necessities and funds to Poland. It is hoped that something substantial will result from this visit.

"The Joint Distribution Committee consists of representatives from the three Jewish relief committees in America, the People's Relief Committee, the Central Relief Committee, and the American Relief Jewish Committee. Up to this time the Joint Distribution Committee has collected $14,000,000, $9,000,000 of which they have already distributed for this year alone.

"A campaign has been going on to collect $10,000,000, two-thirds of which sum has already been gathered, and the remaining money is expected to be oversubscribed by the end of the year. Mr. Julius Rosenwald has given $1,000,000 to this fund. Mr. Alexander Kahn of the committee is Chairman of the People's Relief, which has 200 branches in the United States."

to have been necessary to retain the employes, and it has been necessary to hire large numbers of new men to fill the places of those drafted into the army or taken to other employment by higher wages.

"Your petitioners must be enabled," says the application, "to compete with industrial and other enterprises if they are to maintain their organization, a proper standard of service, and otherwise satisfactorily transact their business."

Present rates, the companies declare, "are insufficient for service under existing abnormal conditions, and do not produce sufficient revenue to meet the actual operating expenses and taxes of your petitioners."

They add that they are "not only unable to earn a reasonable or any return for their services to the public, but are doing business at an actual loss."

In support of this contention figures are cited to show that operating expenses and taxes of the four principal roads for the six months ended June 30, 1917, were $99,853,848, and receipts were $99,613,989. The deficit for July was estimated at more than $250,000.

WANT ALL UPPER BAY MADE 35 FEET DEEP

Dredging Program Proposed That Will Open Every Foot of Harbor to Biggest Ships.

MILES MORE SHORE LINE

Planned to Make Jersey Waters Available for Piers Clear to Constable Hook.

A hearing before Brig. Gen. William T. Rossell, United States Engineer Corps, at the Custom House yesterday on a proposal to dredge a 35-foot channel from Constable Hook to Ellis Island along the west side of the Upper Bay, developed into a demand for a dredging program that would ultimately give that depth to all of New York Harbor and make all the waters above the Narrows available for deep draught ships.

The improvement, as originally proposed, was meant to increase the anchorage area at the west side of the bay and open up a long stretch of the New Jersey shore to deep water shipping. Before the hearing ended, General Rossell had heard it as the unanimous opinion of the many interests represented that all of Robbins Reef should be removed, an area 4,000 yards wide and five miles long dredged to 35 feet, and every foot of all shores of the bay made available for any vessel likely to come into the port.

That even the improvement originally contemplated would bring about a marked advance in commerce was the consensus of the engineers and shipping and railroad men who attended the hearing. The hearing was held under provisions for a preliminary examination and survey authorized in the last River and Harbor Appropriation law. Representatives of the New Jersey State Board of Commerce and Navigation, the Jersey City Chamber of Commerce, the Chamber of Commerce of Bayonne, the Pennsylvania, Lehigh Valley, and Jersey Central Railroads were present. Among the engineers who appeared before General Rossell was Major Gen. George W. Goethals, in behalf of the New Jersey port and terminal authorities. About seventy-five others delegated by New York, New Jersey, and Federal interests, attended. There was a unanimity of opinion the bay should be deepened. Such a plan, it was contended, would open up for warehouse and terminal purposes all the land along the west side of the bay if the channel were 35 feet deep from the Kill Van Kull to Ellis Island, and provide anchorage room and relieve present congestion in the bay.

De Witt Van Buskirk, a banker of Bayonne, speaking of the need for the improvement, recommended that Robbins Reef be removed and advocated a subsidiary channel up to Bedlow's Island.

General Goethals also emphasized the need for the improvement and said it would mean a great advance in terminal facilities and be of benefit to New York as well as to New Jersey. He wanted a general improvement that would benefit commerce as a whole and not any special interest. He thought the improvement should be progressive and not considered finished until the whole area had been made available for deep-draft vessels. His opinion was shared by F. L. du Berger of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

All representatives of railroads agreed that the dredging was the practical course for the Government to pursue in the interests of commerce. Though the original plan was merely for a ship channel it was thought that the broader plan should be followed. This plan would contemplate dredging an area approximately 4,000 feet wide and five miles in length and involve the expenditure of millions of dollars.

Harbor Engineer Frederick Dunham of Jersey City said that city had only one small pier at the foot of Market Street on the other water front space being occupied by the railroads and other private interests. He said that Jersey City had under consideration a project for steamship and warehouse facilities to occupy 173 acres. He thought that unless such improvements as contemplated were made many great interests would be crowded into Newark Bay. He pointed out what the contemplated improvement would mean to industry and to the affected district.

DOCTORS BACK HAISELDEN.

Defend Use of Opiates Which Will Shorten Baby's Life.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—A number of Chicago physicians have examined Baby Paul Hodzima, 2½ years old, the child with the microcephalous head to whom Dr. Harry J. Haiselden is administering a drug which will relieve the pain, though it will shorten the baby's life. The following statement, prepared by Dr. Haiselden, was signed by the doctors:

"We, the undersigned physicians, have made a careful examination of Baby Paul Hodzima and we find that he is suffering from microcephalic head, (a brain too small to carry on the normal functions of the mind,) and a tracheal obstruction, which makes his breathing tortured and laborer. He is suffering from a nervous condition, which prevents him from securing rest. We therefore unhesitatingly advise the use of such opiates or sedatives as will relieve him from suffering and secure rest, even though such drugs might shorten his life."

The statement is signed by Drs. John Fisher, Clarendon Rutherford, Joseph Forrester, M. R. Barclay, Paul Ackermann, Theodore C. Guenther, Gustav Koehler, F. J. Berger, Albert Schupmann, J. H. Lincoln, A. H. W. Jourdan, Martin Schupmann, Edwin Cross, Thomas A. Carter, and Louis J. Kan.

"RIGHT" VOTERS GET SUGAR.

"Jimmy" Kelly, Celebrating Hylan Victory, Gives Away 1,000 Pounds.

Jimmy Kelly, Tammany Hall Captain in the Twenty-second Election District of the Second Assembly District, celebrated the victory of Hylan yesterday by giving away 1,000 pounds of sugar to those who voted "right" in his district on Election Day. The sugar was dispensed in bags of 2½ to 3 pounds each, and there were enough bags to cover the list of registered voters in the district. When the last bag had been handed in exchange for a ticket to a small girl the string orchestra that had been making things lively, struck up a two-step, and all the children about the door danced.

"Sure I am celebrating," said Kelly. "Didn't you hear about it? Hylan got 282 votes in my district, and there may have been a man named Mitchel who got 12 votes, another named Hillquit, who got 6, and still one called Bennett, who managed to collect 3 votes."

Kelly bought the sugar when it was 6 cents a pound a year ago. He opened a restaurant in connection with his bar, but the venture did not pay, and so he decided to give the sugar away where it would do the most good.

ALBANIANS IN AMERICA.

Federation President Denies Ismail Kemal Bey Represents Them.

By Telegraph to the Editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BOSTON, Nov. 15.—In regard to a telegram from Paris published in your esteemed newspaper's issue of Nov. 14 about Ismail Kemal Bey, I beg to draw your attention to the fact that this gentleman does not represent the Albanians of America as he claims.

The real representatives of the Albanians of America are those appointed by the Albanian organization, which is the greatest and most important Albanian organization in the United States and throughout the world. The representatives of the Federation Vatra in Boston are the following: Mehmed Bey, M. Konitha, member of the International Commission of Control of Albania; Judge Nicholas Kashetsi, in London, England, and ex-Minister of Education Dr. Michel Turtulli, in Lausanne, Switzerland.

LABOR CONVENTION PACIFISTS SILENT

No Anti-War Resolutions Among 160-Odd Being Considered by Committees.

LABOR DEARTH DEALT WITH

One Proposal Would Put Recruiting and Training of Emergency Forces Under Union Control.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, Nov. 15.—After a morning session devoted chiefly to addresses by visiting representatives of organized labor in Great Britain and Canada, the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor adjourned until tomorrow, and the committees which had been busy all week continued their work. The resolutions have all been presented, 160-odd in number, and there is none among them which calls for immediate peace or expresses serious dissatisfaction with the conduct of the war.

The nearest approach to a peace resolution declares that

Whereas, A conference of international labor for the purpose of discussing international relations and terms of peace must sooner or later be held,

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor, in convention assembled, expresses its willingness to be represented at such a conference whenever called.

The resolution was introduced by a group of a half dozen delegates of pacifist affiliations.

The resolution, presented by a Milwaukee delegate, asking the officials of the federation to use their influence to endeavor to get the Government to cease the suppression of papers which have been adjudged seditious, a practice denounced as "placing the entire press, and consequently labor, in jeopardy," will find supporters and conceivably may produce considerable argument when it is reported out of committee, but that it will be passed is extremely improbable.

Another proposal seems likely to raise interesting questions. It was submitted by delegates from Seattle and embodies the recommendations of the Metal Trades Council of that city regarding the expansion of labor necessary for the shipbuilding program. If put into practice it would mean that union labor would have entire control of Government construction work.

The preamble of the resolution recites that "the fulfillment of the Government's shipbuilding and other industrial programs is jeopardized by a shortage of skilled workers, to meet which shortage the Government is planning with various institutions to give intensive training to unskilled men, totally ignoring the skilled workers, whose interests are most vitally at stake."

Then follows the proposal by which the Seattle unions would deal with the question of this expansion. The features of the Seattle plan are as follows:

The unions are to furnish the men required upon request by the companies, so far as possible.

The unions are also to furnish instructors to train men for emergency service, as may be required.

The examining boards of the unions pass on the qualifications of all applicants for such service and issue permits to successful candidates.

Permits are to be temporary, and temporary or permanent layoffs are to be governed by seniority in the trade.

Union membership and seniority to give preference in all promotions.

Excess labor available is to be used to reduce hours so far as possible, without reduction of pay.

An emergency labor supply commission is to be appointed, on which union labor shall have a preponderance, to supervise this work under the jurisdiction of the Department of Labor and independent of civil service rules.

What the attitude of the leaders of the federation will be toward this proposal remains to be seen.

The other resolutions submitted run all the way from treatment of such local matters as the support of an individual union against a recalcitrant factory owner in a small town to a suggestion that the United States Senate ought to be abolished since it serves no function but "to block, delay or kill progressive legislation, especially that favorable to the working class, and to give unsuccessful lawyers soft jobs."

Among the speakers at the morning session were John Hill and Arthur Hayday of the British Trade Union Congress, and William Lodge of the Canadian Trade and Labor Congress. They told how the rank and file of their organization had battled for democracy in the trenches and in the workshops.

"When the history of British patriotism is written," Mr. Hayday declared, "it will be found that no class showed greater patriotism than the British workingman."

Major Edouard Requin and Lieutenant Francois Monod, officers of the French General Staff, now attached to the War College in Washington, spoke of France.

"With you and inspired by you," Lieutenant Monod told the delegates, "France in the factories and in the trenches is striving to win this war, and we will succeed."

TOWNLEY PREDICTS WHEAT ACREAGE SLUMP

Says Bad Weather in Northwest Has Left Farmers Poor—Millers' Big Profits.

BUFALO, N. Y., Nov. 15.—The wheat acreage in the Dakotas next year will run from 15 to 25 per cent. less than that sowed this year, according to A. C. Townley, President and organizer of the Farmers' Non-Partisan League, who is in Buffalo to address the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor. This is due to the bad weather experienced this year over most of the Northwest, which ruined the crops in many districts of that region and left the farmers without money.

"The farmers responded to the Government's call last year," he said, "and sowed a greatly increased acreage of wheat. The banks, too, felt that the situation called for support of the Government's food program and lent the farmers the necessary money up to the very limit of their capacity. The ruin of the crops in many regions left the farmers burdened with heavy chattel mortgages, and the banks are not in a position to make big loans this year, in view of the fact that the credits extended last year are for the most part still out."

Mr. Townley's visit is for the specific purpose of trying to clear up some of the misunderstanding which, he says, has been sown between organized labor and the farmer, but he admits that he hopes to bring about a general co-operation between organized labor and the farmers' State ownership movement, with the hope of eliminating, so far as possible, the middlemen, who are charged with getting most of the profit.

"Organized labor in the Northwest has co-operated with our movement," he said, "and I feel that since the interests opposed to us are to a large extent the same we ought to be able to work together to eliminate all the unnecessary motion which soaks up most of the profit between the producer and the ultimate consumer, leaving the consumer paying a big price and the producer getting very little.

"Mr. Hoover has said that a fair profit for the miller would be 25 cents a barrel. They are making $1 a barrel. Flour costs as much in North Dakota, right next door to the farm on which the wheat was raised, as it does in New York. A local mill in a North Dakota town will take the wheat from the farms right around it, mill it, and sell the flour at the price that would be charged in Minneapolis plus the freight rate from Minneapolis back to that town.

"The farmers have learned that they are up against a solid combination, and they know pretty well what is done with the grain after they sell it. It is sold back and forth from one firm to another, a purely bookkeeping transaction, and each of these firms has to get its percentage while the wheat is on its way from the farm through the mill to the bakery."

ALLIED DIPLOMATS WORRIED OVER MEXICO

Fear German Influence Inspired Carranza's Ordering of Troops to Tampico Fields.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—International apprehension has been aroused by the apparent determination of President Carranza of Mexico to drive the long unmolested Manuel Palaes and his little rebel army from the oil fields near Tampico. There was evident today in allied legations and embassies here a feeling that German influence had played a part in starting this move, which may prove embarrassing to the Kaiser's enemies.

General Manuel Diegues has been sent into the field at the head of a considerable force with orders to clear the country between San Luis Potosi and Tampico of rebels. Official reports reaching Washington indicate the effectiveness of his work. Already he has defeated one body of rebel troops and killed Magdaleno Cedillo, one of the leaders of the Revolutionists in that part of Mexico. Unless ordered by the War Department to change his plans, it is expected General Diegues will move toward the coast and attack Palaez.

Representatives of foreign Governments display more concern over the news of the campaign against Palaez than they have over any recent development in Mexican affairs. The fear frankly expressed is that a determined action just now by the Carranza Government may result in an attempt to destroy the oil properties. In some quarters here, however, it is believed that Carranza will hesitate to drive the rebels to that point, in view of the political and economic dangers involved.

PRESIDIO, Texas, Nov. 15.—Francisco Villa is in personal command of the Villa troops now occupying the Ojinaga port, according to Colonel Miguel Trillo, Villa's personal secretary. He said Villa made a trip of inspection of the country in the vicinity of Ojinaga and would return tonight. Colonel Trillo also said Hipolito Villa was in Ojinaga with his brother, having crossed from the United States more than a week ago.

Twenty-four Federal and Villa wounded are now in Ojinaga, and permission has been asked to bring them into Presidio for treatment. Colonel Trillo denied the execution of prisoners.

SNEERS AT AMERICAN FAITH.

German Paper Says Entente Should Beware of Our Promises.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 15.—The Catholic annexationist organ, the Cologne Volkszeitung, says that although America once declared she was waging her own war, the American press has not yet contradicted the report that America will sign the treaty of London, by which the Allies bound themselves not to make a separate peace with Germany.

It would appear, says the paper, that the "lightning change artist, Mr. Wilson," who, at the beginning of the war, proclaimed strict neutrality, has once again deviated from his course, although the whole American tradition is the avoidance of treaties. It says that Washington made independence from treaties the basis of American policy in his farewell address, having had unprofitable experiences in that respect. The paper then asserts that American politicians and historians have already stated that there is an extraordinary trait in the American character which revolts against treaties, and does not feel bound by them if unsuitable circumstances arise later.

Elsewhere, it remarks, "this would be called disloyalty and is the grossest egoism of Americans. It has happened several times that when a treaty no longer appeared to be to America's advantage it has been declared outdated."

The paper then says that in regard to China, America has not fulfilled her contract regarding Chinese immigration, and that America considers this lack of consideration excused on the ground of her extraordinary democracy. America's practical mind, it asserts, sees the necessity of the moment, and the new plan of "forcing service on neutral citizens" is proof of this. The plan, the paper asserts, is not to be defended, and shows that America takes her responsibilities lightly.

Up to the present time, the Volkszeitung says, America has followed Washington's policy and refused to make treaties in the Far East, going on her own way in the policy of splendid isolation. "Woodrow Wilson," it asserts, "has abolished this old tradition. If he signs the treaty of London the Entente will do well to remember earlier experiences and not build on it."

CALLS AMERICANS MISLED.

Berlin Paper Says Hearst Alone Prints Truth About War.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE Nov. 15.—"The deceived Uncle Sam," thus the Berlin Vossische Zeitung heads an editorial on the way in which it says poor Uncle Sam has been continually misled from the beginning of the war. It explains how in German schools every child is taught not only the geography of his own country, but that of the world, but asserts that in America it is different, the Monroe Doctrine being applied even to geography, and that Americans have a colossal ignorance of countries and peoples outside the American boundaries.

The paper says that this ignorance can be traced in the American press, which is a true reflection of the people, and that printed maps are incorrect and Americans are unable to obtain a proper view of the European war, owing to geographical ignorance. It comments on "the love of newspaper 'scoops,' which it says are impossible in this war, owing to the fact that cables have been cut and, the news all comes via London.

Even President Wilson, the paper says, felt obliged to have unbiased news from time to time and so sent Colonel House to Europe to make an impartial report. The Zeitung then comments on America's "nose for news, the desire to get the news right off the bat" and "hot out of the oven." It asks what America knows about the "victory of Skagerrak" and says that Hearst's is the only press in America which prints a word of truth on the great military successes of the Germans.

OFFERS JOBS TO 2,000 MEN.

Defense Council Calls for Workmen on Ship Plant.

The Mayor's Committee of Women on National Defense yesterday announced for the State Defense Council's Clearing House for Employment Offices that 2,000 men were needed for work on a new shipbuilding plant to be erected near one of the large cities in Connecticut. The employes wanted included all grades, ranging from laborers at $3 a day to employment directors and Superintendents at several thousand dollars a year.

The opportunity should be attractive to men in seasonal occupations who would rather work twelve months in the year for moderate pay than six months in the year for somewhat higher salaries and wages in the opinion of Director Goldfarb of the Clearing House. Mr. Goldfarb added that if employes could not be obtained for this and other essential work the Government would be forced to draft labor. Applications for the positions offered should be made to any public employment agency co-operating with the federation of non-commercial employment agencies in the city. The main office of the city public employment bureau at 53 Lafayette Street, and the State public employment office at 310 Jay Street, Brooklyn, are mentioned as places where applications may be made.

NAVY LEAGUE TO ASK WILSON TO LIFT BAN

Cardinal Gibbons, Alton B. Parker and David Jayne Hill Appointed to See President.

NO TRUCE WITH DANIELS

Organization Will Seek to Force Secretary to Give Official Recognition to Its Work.

The Navy League of the United States, with its nearly 200,000 members and its 800,000 women associated in welfare work for the enlisted personnel of the navy and merchant marine, has reached such a crisis in its affairs, due to Secretary Daniels's banishment of its members from all naval territory, that it decided last night to send a commission to appeal directly to President Wilson for a lifting of the ban. That action was taken as the result of an all-day session at the Hotel Biltmore of the Board of Directors and delegates from all parts of the country. The men asked to assume the mission of going over Secretary Daniels's head are Cardinal Gibbons of Baltimore, Alton B. Parker, and David Jayne Hill.

Colonel Robert M. Thompson, President of the league, and other speakers said that, so far as the growth of the league and the prosecution of such work as the making of safety jackets for the sailors is concerned, the row with Mr. Daniels has not affected the league at all, but that it was hampered in the carrying out of its general program. The members are doing much as individuals and through intermediate agencies, but they assert that, as a body of loyal and patriotic Americans, they should not be treated "as though they were enemy aliens."

Though the league is anxious to patch up the quarrel which arose last Summer when Colonel Thompson charged that the Navy Department appeared to have blocked the investigation of the Mare Island Navy Yard explosion, it did not display a conciliatory spirit toward Secretary Daniels himself. When a suggestion was made at a dinner of the delegates last night that the commission "write or see" President Wilson, one man exclaimed: "For God's sake, don't write; the letter wouldn't stay in the White House five minutes before Daniels had it," and his sentiment was approved on all sides.

At an earlier session it was charged that the league found a great body of men at a Southern base in a desolate harbor absolutely without means of recreation and that after it had equipped a 150-acre recreation field the men were overjoyed and Secretary Daniels himself went over it with every evidence of pleasure. Then, it was said, as he was going out he saw the league's sign over the gate and ordered every man in service off the field. For two weeks the men were forced to march up and down the road for exercise, then the league turned the field over to an intermediary and the ban was lifted.

Despite Secretary Daniels's declaration that the navy would have nothing to do with the league until Colonel Thompson had resigned—a statement which Mr. Thompson countered with an offer to resign if the Secretary would—there was no talk at yesterday's meeting of bringing about a reinstatement with the Navy Department by any such action. The resignation of Secretary Staton of the league, who prepared the statement in the Mare Island matter which caused the quarrel, was offered, but not accepted.

Charles B. Martindale of Indianapolis declared the people of America would not tolerate dictation by their hired public servants, and that Mr. Daniels would have to yield. Notwithstanding its disagreement with the Secretary the league went on record as standing firmly behind both the navy and the Administration and charged that John Temple Graves said there should go out an impression that the body was in any sense anti-Administration.

The prohibition against the league was described by Colonel Thompson as an undeserved stigma on loyal citizens and the opinion was expressed by some of those present that if President Wilson could be impressed with that fact, the President might be induced to persuade Secretary Daniels to modify his attitude.

Major Henry Breckinridge, formerly Assistant Secretary of War, a Vice President of the league, attended the meeting, but took no part, because of his connection with the army.

Commodore A. E. Jarvis of the Navy League of Canada said that the Canadian organization was able to do invaluable work for the enlisted personnel, thanks to liberal Government support.

NEW DRAFT RULES OUT.

All Existing Exemptions and Discharges Are Canceled.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—The new selective service regulations were made public by the Provost Marshal General today. Supplies of them have been received by Governors of States, and they will be forwarded to local and district boards at once for study.

Certain of the regulations go into effect on Nov. 20, while others, notably those which govern the process of selection and classification, will not go into effect until Dec. 15.

The new regulations not only repeal all preceding regulations but cancel all exemptions and discharges which have been granted by local boards under the present system. This will restore every man to his original status, and the local boards will send a questionnaire to every man who is not in the service.

The local boards will send out 5 per cent. of their questionnaires each day for a period covering twenty days. This method of distribution will allow the local boards, with the aid of their legal advisory boards and other volunteers, to instruct, complete, and file each day's questionnaire without the confusion and congestion which would attend the effort to require a larger number.

One of the noteworthy features of the new regulations will be the appointment of an officer of the Reserve Corps of the United States Army as an assistant to the Adjutant General of each State. This officer will also be the disbursing officer, and the financial affairs of the selective service system will thus be brought into intimate touch with the Provost Marshal General's office in Washington.

NEW ENEMY ALIEN RULES.

President to Promulgate Regulations—Licensing Expected.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Attorney General Gregory announced tonight that his department had about completed a draft of stricter regulations for enemy aliens. The regulations will be submitted to President Wilson this week and will be promulgated by him without delay.

T. D. McCarthy, United States Marshal in New York, was here today. He called on Mr. Gregory, and later conferred with Assistant Attorney General O'Brien. Mr. O'Brien is in charge of sedition cases, and Mr. McCarthy gave him information which will be used in framing the regulations.

It was announced positively that no attempt would be made by the Government to send the enemy aliens 100 miles from the seacoast. Indications are that all enemy aliens will be licensed and be compelled to report to the proper authorities at regular intervals.

Spain Denies Influencing Argentina

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Reports that Spain has been encouraging the Argentine Government to refrain from a breach with Germany have elicited a formal denial from Madrid, received here officially today. It says that the Marquis of Albucemas has declared that the report that Spain had taken measures to induce Argentina to follow the example of Spain in maintaining neutrality was without foundation, and that "Spain respects the policies of all nations."

PLAN TO DRIVE OUT DISLOYAL TEACHERS

Superintendent Tells Principals to Submit Names of Those of Doubtful Patriotism.

CHURCHILL MAKES PROTEST

Assails Policy of Secrecy and Declares Transferred Teachers Should Have Been Tried Openly.

A campaign to rid the high schools of the city of teachers whose patriotism is not above suspicion and who possess lukewarm or "neutral" views on the war began yesterday when Dr. John L. Tildsley, Associate Superintendent of Schools, in charge of high schools, requested the Principals of the twenty-four high schools of the city, in which 2,500 teachers are employed, to submit to him the names of all teachers who are suspected of holding views similar to those held by the three De Witt Clinton High School teachers who were suspended on Monday pending the trial of charges made against them for "holding views subversive of good discipline in the schools and which undermine good citizenship." At the same session of the board six teachers of De Witt Clinton were transferred to other high schools because of the charge that they were not sufficiently vigorous in their pro-Americanism and because they appeared "neutral" in their views on the attitude of the teacher to the Government at the present time.

The announcement of Dr. Tildsley is believed to be a prelude to a similar campaign to be begun soon by the Teachers' Council, an organization of teachers' societies, which was formally empowered by the Board of Education last Wednesday to call before it any elementary school teachers who might be suspected of holding disloyal views. The widened scope of this investigation covers the 20,000 teachers in the public school system of the city.

Dr. Tildsley said last night that three more teachers were under investigation, and an attempt was being made to ascertain their views on the subjects for which the other teachers were suspended. One of the suspected teachers is a member of the Faculty of the De Witt Clinton Bilch School and the other two are employed in other schools.

Dr. Tildsley said yesterday disloyalty must be eradicated from the high schools. He called attention to the especial necessity of teaching good citizenship in the schools, because a large percentage of the children attending high schools are of foreign extraction. Of 66,000 pupils in the high schools, about 40,000, he said, were foreign born or born of parents who were foreign born. Boys and girls of that age, he added, were prone to radical views. It is believed that high school students about to graduate will be asked to sign pledges of loyalty to the Government before they receive their diplomas.

Churchill Wants Open Trials.

Thomas W. Churchill, former President of the Board of Education, speaking last night of the importance of learning definitely the views held by the teachers who were transferred, said that they were punished either too lightly or too heavily. They should be put under trial on charges, he said, and dismissed from the service if found guilty.

"I voted for the suspension of the three teachers," he said. "They will have a hearing next week. In view of the representations of members of the board on the floor concerning heresy alleged to prevail among teachers not loyal to the Government, the parents and the taxpayers of the city ought to know the whole story. This is a thing that ought not to be star-chamberye. There has been altogether too much secrecy thus far. This is a serious thing in which the parents of the city and their children are vitally interested. The doors of the trial room ought to be opened to the public.

"The transfer of the six teachers was done with a shrug of the shoulders and an innuendo. In Dr. Tildsley's speech the matter of the transfer of the teachers was interwoven with the charges against other teachers. The worst of it is that the transferred teachers were not formally accused. If they had been accused the accusations could have been met. Transferring them was to distribute treason, if it is true that these teachers are treasonable."

Not the teachers but the Board of Education was on trial at the meeting on Wednesday, Mr. Churchill asserted, for he maintained that the board had failed to give the community the assurance that it could treat such matters with calmness and dignity "at this time, when serenity was the greatest asset the community could have."

When asked to comment on the statement of Mr. Churchill, President Willcox of the Board of Education said he had nothing to say.

Teachers' Union to Meet.

A meeting of the Executive Board of the Teachers' Union will be held tonight at the Washington Irving High School, and the suspended and transferred teachers will have an opportunity to present their side of the case. The announcement of the meeting says it was called "to tell the story of some recent and important progress made in the 'war for democracy' in the educational system." It is believed that the question of offering financial aid and legal counsel to the teachers under fire will be discussed and action taken.

It was said yesterday that the nine teachers disciplined insisted that they could not be charged with being disloyal. They assert that they believe in democracy in education. They also say that if the present attitude of the board is maintained it will stifle free discussion and make teachers subservient to those in authority.

A preliminary meeting to perfect an organization of high school teachers to oppose the longer school day was held yesterday at the De Witt Clinton High School coincidently with a conference further uptown, at which were present Dr. John H. Finley, State Commissioner of Education; President Willcox, and members of the State Board of Regents. The conference which the educational officials attended was held for the purpose of discussing the lengthening of the day in the elementary schools, but according to Mr. Willcox no definite action was taken. At the meeting of high school teachers it was decided to have the teachers in each school elect three delegates to take places in a new organization to further plans for opposing the longer school day in the high schools.

Dr. Tildsley took exception yesterday to the questions published which some of the teachers asserted he had asked in the course of his inquiry. Dr. Tildsley said that he asked questions "along the lines" of those made public by the teachers. It was his opinion that he had asked the teachers an average of one hundred questions each. He was indignant about the question which the teachers allege he asked concerning their views on the Bolsheviki. According to the teachers, the question was: "What is your opinion of the Bolsheviki?"

"I did not ask them any question on the Bolsheviki," asserted Dr. Tildsley.

It is believed that the trial of the suspended high school teachers will not take place next Tuesday. It was said that counsel to the Board of Education will probably need more time in which to prepare the csae.

TRAPPED A GERMAN SPY.

Teuton Posing as English Surprised on Steamer and Later Shot.

A PACIFIC PORT, Nov. 15.—The story of how a German spy betrayed himself was told today by Dr. M. A. Jelier of a steamer that has arrived here from Europe. On the way out, Dr. Jelier said there was a passenger on board of charming manners, who spoke English and went by the name of Forbes. He showed an unusual interest in military matters and took photographs while passing through the Suez Canal.

Forbes said he was Scotch, but Dr. Jelier said that during the journey across the Red Sea he suddenly asked Forbes in German where he was born. Forbes sprang to his feet and, also in German, asked the doctor what he meant, as he was an Englishman.

When the steamer put in at Colombo, Ceylon, the doctor saw Forbes making sketches and informed the British authorities, who took the man into custody.

Dr. Jelier said he had since learned that Forbes was tried, convicted and shot.

BARTHELME GOING HOME.

Former Correspondent of Cologne Gazette Starts for Eastern Port.

WICHITA, Kan., Nov. 15.—Dr. George Barthelme, who was arrested here several weeks ago, charged with being in a military zone, barred to aliens, and who since his release about six weeks ago has been compelled to report to Federal officials, left last night for an Atlantic port whence he will sail next week for Germany.

Dr. Barthelme was the American correspondent for the Cologne (Germany) Gazette. He was sent to Wichita from Washington last Summer, and was here several weeks before he was placed under arrest.

Suspicious Austrians Arrested.

NORRISTOWN, Pa., Nov. 15.—Two Austrians, one of whom is said to have been disguised, were arrested here today for acting suspiciously around the plant of the Municipal Electric Co. 'IRISH VOTE' USED AS CLUB BY DEVOY

DENIES IRISH REVOLT PLANS

Demands That Since America Prevents German Aid to Ireland, She Force England to Act.

In connection with the Federal Grand Jury investigation of The Gaelic American and the activities of John Devoy, its editor, which is reported to be nearing completion, Federal officials were interested in this week's issue of The Gaelic American, published yesterday. Most of the issue is devoted to denying the disclosure of Sinn Fein plans for another Irish revolt and to denunciation of William J. Flynn, head of the Secret Service, and of New York newspapers. Incidentally, the paper attacks Mayor Mitchel and sees in his defeat a triumph of the principles for which it stands.

In an editorial demanding that the American Government make England promise to give Ireland independence, it is said that if it had not been for the entrance of the United States into the war it would now be over, with Germany victorious, and adds:

"The United States prevents German help for Ireland, and the Government is therefore in honor bound to see that Ireland gets her rights. England dare not refuse America's request, and America's debt to Ireland will not be repaid until the request is made and the proper pressure brought to bear to make England do an act of simple justice."

The same editorial concludes thus:

"Ireland will win her liberty, and the Irish race in America is strong and resolute enough to defeat the present campaign against them and to punish the politicians and newspapers that falsely assail their loyalty in the interests of America's worst real enemy."

In reference to Chief Flynn's statement that the Sinn Fein was planning another revolt, the Gaelic American says: "This charge is as false as hell and the statement repeated almost every day that the Secret Service has discovered evidence of such a plot is known to the Government lawyers to be wholly without foundation, unless they take Chief Flynn's word and do not ask him to submit proofs. There is no such proof."

Another editorial threatens Postmaster General Burleson with the united opposition of the Irish in America if he bars the Gaelic American from the mails.

"The Postmaster General is known to be very solicitous for the welfare of the Democratic Party," the editor says, "and if he wants to insure its ruin he could not take any action more likely to bring about that result than the suppression of Irish papers that are as truly loyal to the United States as he or any other man in Washington. In the Northern, Middle, and Western States the Irish are the backbone of the Democratic Party, and without their loyal support the Democrats cannot win a Presidential election or control Congress. The unjust suppression of an Irish paper which has never criticised the Government or any of its policies since America entered the war would be an act of folly, as well as of injustice. It would create intense resentment among Irish citizens everywhere and would be condemned by fairminded Americans, and the suppressed paper would have more influence from its grave than it ever had during its lifetime."

The next editorial in the paper denies that Supreme Court Justice Cohalan owns The Gaelic American. "Judge Cohalan never owned The Gaelic American," it says, "and John Devoy does not own it now. The Judge at one time owned some stock in the paper, but parted with it when he went on the bench, and does not own a dollar's worth now. The paper is owned by a company, of which John Devoy happens to be President."

John Rathom, editor of The Providence Journal, comes in for some of the editor's invective. It refers to "Rathom, the Australian, who lived in the United States eighteen years before becoming an American citizen, and who is a self-confessed English spy," who said in an "idiotorial" that "Devoy's actions have shamed millions of Americans of Irish ancestry who are honest men. His paper, as The Journal has heretofore stated, should have been closed up long ago."

Following the attack on Mr. Rathom, the editor says:

"In Warsaw the Polish language is now being taught for the first time in all the schools. This was not the case when Poland was under Russia."

In a special column is this:

"King George has designated a day of prayer. 'Let us Prey' has been England's motto for a great many centuries."

This is followed by:

"Union Jack Mitchel's friends have devoted several days to explaining how it happened."

One article is headed "Glad Northcliffe Is Gone," another, "Dissatisfied with the Work of the English Navy," and an editorial on "The Course of the War" takes England to task for Italy's weakness.

About six columns are devoted to Chief Flynn's charge of a new Sinn Fein plot. The paper refers to Flynn's "dime novel" about the revolt disclosure and says: "The man who does such things is not honestly serving the United States Government." The letter addressed to "My Dear Mr. D.," which Mr Flynn believes was intended for John Devoy, is alleged to be a forgery. "If such a letter was addressed to John Devoy, as Lord Northcliffe's NEW YORK TIMES says it was, it would not have been found among Mellows's papers," The Gaelic American says, "but would have been delivered to Devoy."

There is also published a letter from Liam Mellows, in the Tombs, to the editor of The Gaelic American denying that letters Chief Flynn said had been taken from him had ever been in his possession. Chief Flynn has issued a statement in reply to this charge Mellows, saying that the Sinn Feiner is not telling the truth.

WARNS ENEMY ALIENS.

Staats-Zeitung Declares America's Consideration Is Not Weakness.

Commenting on the latest steps being taken by the Federal authorities to make the waterfront here safe against enemy aliens, Bernard H. Ridder said yesterday in the English column of the New-Yorker Staats-Zeitung:

"It is the purpose of the Government to bring these 'few thousand criminal agitators' under 'the mighty arm of the law' without causing any unnecessary inconvenience to their law-abiding countrymen.

"To appreciate the amount of consideration which the authorities in Washington have shown to enemy aliens as a class in this country it is only necessary to reflect upon the treatment they have received in the belligerent countries of Europe. This greater consideration for those who are 'enemy' aliens only in a technical sense is not, and should not be taken to be, an evidence of weak-kneedness on the part of the Government. It will be continued only so long as proof that it is merited is given.

"It is a matter of regret that the Government has been compelled to stricter regulations by the machinations of a few scatter-brains living amongst us, whose activity could do Germany no material good and were bound to react in one way or another to the injury of every law-abiding German domiciled in the United States.

"It would be a matter of still more profound regret if the Government were to be forced by them to abandon its present policy of discrimination, and make its heavy hand felt by innocent and guilty alike. The enemy alien in this country has his future to a great extent in his own keeping. It will be made burdensome or easy for him accordingly as he makes it. Germany has for the Government to do its duty by the nation."

PLOTTERS ALARM FATHER.

Tell J. Allison Muir Son Was Lost on Ship—Daniels Denies.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 15.—A long-distance telephone message, purporting to be from the Bureau of Navigation in Washington, was received today by J. Allison Muir of this city, stating that his son, J. Allison Muir, Jr., a first-class signalman in the Maryland Naval Reserve and a prominent Baltimore athlete, had been lost when the American freighter Kansas City was sunk with all on board. The message was to the effect that Admiral Sims had sent a cable, stating that the ship had become detached from its convoy after Sept. 5 and lost.

Tonight Mr. Muir received a telegram signed with the name of Secretary of the Navy Daniels, stating that the Navy Department had no knowledge of the loss of the Kansas City, and that his information was evidently part of the German propaganda being carried on.

ANTIS WILL OPEN FIGHT ON PACIFISM

Women Opposed to Suffrage to Turn All Efforts Now to Aid America.

TO SCHOOL NEW VOTERS

State Organization, Accepting Election Result, Urges All Women to Exercise New Responsibilities.

The New York State Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage will go out of existence in a few days. The organization which women opposed to the vote had built up will be taken over by a society of women who will conduct a militant campaign against socialism, against pacifism, and against all forms of pro-Germanism in New York City and State.

Some such slogan as "Let women quit fighting each other and all get together to fight the war" will be adopted by the new body. It will throw the rolls of its membership and the doors of its meeting places open to women of all shades of political opinion, provided only that they are unqualifiedly pro-American.

Anti-suffragists as individuals are not to abandon their fight against the Susan B. Anthony amendment. They will continue their opposition to making suffrage a national question, particularly at this time of national crisis, but their only organized body to carry on that opposition in this State will be a State Committee of the National Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, which has headquarters in Washington. This committee will continue to assert that suffrage is not a national question; that this is, in any event, the wrong time to agitate it, when more vital problems beset Congress, and that, the State fight having been won in New York, there is nothing for women of the Empire State to do but accept the verdict and turn their energies into more pressing activities.

The action of the antis practically was decided upon as soon as the result of the election became known, but before promulgating their views, the party leaders wanted general party action. Such action was taken by the Executive Committee on Wednesday. It was ratified with only slight opposition at a general meeting in the headquarters at 280 Madison Avenue yesterday morning, and it will be made final at a meeting of the voting members within a few days.

At yesterday's meeting there was manifest neither bitterness nor sadness. The women had fought for their views until the voters had decided against them, and it was entirely in a spirit of accepting their new responsibilities gracefully and adequately that they agreed to break up the organization of women which has played a prominent part in affairs since the first committee in opposition to suffrage was organized in 1894.

Challenge to Suffragists.

That they regarded their action somewhat in the light of a challenge to the suffrage party, the leaders of the anti movement were frank to admit yesterday. They have opposed the amalgamation of the newly made women voters into a suffrage party to work for the national amendment, ever since that suggestion was made by the suffragists a few days after election. They have opposed, as well, any sort of organization which would pit women against men, creating, as Miss Alice Hill Chittenden, leader of the antis, phrased it, "a sex war." They epitomized their position yesterday in the words of their own leader thus:

"Let us all quit being suffragists and anti-suffragists, and just be women backing up the men in every phase of fighting the war."

The antis felt, it was made plain, that they had blazed the way to just such an elimination of all partisanship over the voting question, and they felt that if the vanquished could retire good-humoredly and turn their activities into those of a constructive national program, the victors well could afford to do likewise.

The first resolution presented to the meeting yesterday by Miss Chittenden was one adopted the day before by the Executive Committee. It ran:

> Resolved, That in view of the fact that the election has settled the matter of woman suffrage in the State of New York, we recommend that the New York State Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage as such organization be recognized as dissolved.

After this had been approved almost without dissent, this second resolution, also adopted by the Executive Committee, was presented:

> Resolved, That this Executive Committee affirm that the principles laid down and publicly stated by us for the last twenty years still obtain, namely: that suffrage is not an inherent right, but, once conferred, becomes a duty and responsibility and as such must be exercised.

This resolution caused more discussion than the other, but a large majority of those present declared their intention of working with the men for the best interests of government.

"The sentiment of the meeting," said Miss Chittenden, "was in favor of forming an organization of non-radical men and women—the object of which should be to stand firmly behind the National Government in the prosecution of the war—to work for constructive rather than destructive tendencies in government, and especially to do all in their power to stem the disintegrating tide of pacifism in New York City."

No detailed statement of the plans of the new organization could be obtained yesterday, the leaders feeling that, until the purely formal action of a voting membership was taken, ratifying the action of the executive body, no program should be announced. It is known, however, that such Socialist doctrines as tend to weaken the war spirit will come in for a large share of attention. That applies especially to the supporters of Morris Hillquit, who made his refusal to buy Liberty bonds practically a plank in his platform when he ran for the Mayoralty, and who polled an immense radical vote, though he demanded an immediate peace that was styled by many "a pro-German peace." Non-resident pacifists who favor the immediate peace movement will also be assailed, and speakers on all such topics who make the public schools the forums for promulgation of their doctrines will be fought by the new body.

Campaign of Education.

A phase of yesterday's meeting that attracted much attention was the readiness displayed by the women to participate in wider duties of citizenship. Several speakers said that as long as there remained large numbers of women who "didn't know the difference between a city primary and a Congressional election," it would be necessary to do a large amount of educational work. These Anti-Suffrage leaders asserted that the unfamiliarity of many women with public questions must not make large masses of women the pawns of party bosses. For that reason they will start, as soon as the new organization is perfected, a campaign of education designed to teach the fundamentals, without which the new women voters, the Anti-Suffragists say, cannot get the most out of their franchise privilege.

The Anti-Suffrage leaders, it was said yesterday, believed that radical women of the east side, such as supported the Hillquit campaign in immense numbers, and recently turned to Federal suffrage meeting in a public school practically into a Socialist rally, might be expected to make more general use of the ballot than would women of more loyal tendencies, large numbers of whom were indifferent, or by nature disinclined to political strife. For that reason a large share of the educational effort decided upon might be expected, it was said, to go to inducing patriotic women, whatever might have been their past inclinations, to accept the full responsibility of the ballot, to use the ballot on behalf of the forces for good, and then to learn exactly how to vote.

Among those at yesterday's meeting were Miss Chittenden, Mrs. Francis M. Scott, first President of the association; Mrs. Henry Seligman, Mrs. Vernon H. Brown, Mrs. Anson P. Atterbury, Mrs. Hamilton R. Fairfax, Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge, Mrs. Annie Nathan Meyer, Mrs. Sidney de Kay, Miss Mary G. Kilbreth, Mrs. Lancaster Morgan, Mrs. Edgar Hendricks, Miss Elizabeth Gallandet, Mrs. Robert Kelly Prentice, Mrs. De Witt, Clinton Falls; Miss Henrietta Church of Albany, Mrs. John F. Maynard of Utica, and Mrs. E. Remington of Cazenovia.

WOMEN DEMOCRATS ASK M'COOEY FOR ADVICE

Plan an Adjunct to the Regular Organization and Want Primary Enrollment.

Leader John H. McCooey of the Brooklyn Democratic organization received at his office yesterday a visit from Miss Amy Wren, Vice President of the Women's Law Club of Brooklyn and Corresponding Secretary of the Kings County Woman Suffrage Association. Accompanying Miss Wren were Miss Helen McCormick of 186 Prospect Place and Miss May Patterson of 207 Congress Street, both of whom have been active in the fight for woman suffrage. Their visit was for the purpose of obtaining Mr. McCooey's advice on the formation of a women's organization to be affiliated with the Democratic Party. Mr. McCooey promised to give every possible assistance in working out the plan.

Miss Wren said that her proposal was not in opposition to the announced declaration of the Woman Suffrage Party as expressed by some of its leaders to maintain itself as a non-partisan organization, but explained that she was prompted by a desire to participate in the primary election.

"We understand that if we are not enrolled as members of one of the old parties we will not be entitled to vote in the primaries," said Miss Wren, "and we are just as anxious to vote in the primary as to vote in the general election. Our idea is to organize the women voters along lines similar to the present political parties, but we also want to act in co-operation with the present political parties and not independently of them. So far as we are personally concerned our sympathies lie with the Democratic Party."

30 MORE IN HUNGER STRIKE.

Washington Militants Join Miss Paul in Her Jail Demonstration.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—The Woman's Party Headquarters announced tonight that the thirty women sent to the District Workhouse yesterday for displaying banners before the White House had joined Miss Alice Paul in her hunger strike to force the treatment of the militants as political prisoners.

Twenty-eight of the prisoners will be brought out of the workhouse tomorrow to be tried for their demonstrations on Monday.

START AMENDMENT DRIVE.

Woman's Party Sends Letter to Representative Maher.

With the possession of political power in this State the National Woman's Party began yesterday to exert pressure on Representatives in Congress for the passage of the Federal Amendment and for the recognition of the White House pickets as political offenders rather than as "obstructers of traffic." The following letter was sent to Representative James P. Maher:

> My Dear Sir: As Chairman of legislative work for the New York State branch of the National Woman's Party, I desire to call your attention to the fact that your consituent, Miss Lucy Burns, of 128 Greene Avenue, has just completed a sixty-day term in the Workhouse and jail in the National Capitol, and was yesterday sentenced again to six months, which we learn may be doubled tomorrow, for conviction of the euphonious charge of "obstructing traffic."
> The situation arises from the determined effort of the Administration to kill the agitation in favor of immediate action at the December session of Congress on the National Suffrage Amendment.
> We ask you to fight first for the passage of the Federal amendment at the first opportunity at the December session and second, to fight for the immediate recognition of the suffrage prisoners as political offenders with all of the privileges and immunities accorded to that class.
> Very sincerely yours,
> MRS. ELIZABETH S. ROGERS,
> Legislative Chairman.

A delegation of women had intended to present this letter personally to Representative Maher at the Pennsylvania Station as he was leaving this city on the Congressional Limited yesterday afternoon. They missed the Congressman and gave the letter to the conductor of the train for him. Miss Janet Burns, a sister of Lucy Burns, now in Occoquan, headed the delegation. Others were Mrs. John Rogers, Jr., Miss Bessie Lee Gaylord, Mrs. Belle Neumann Zilbermann, Vice President of the Political Prisoners' League; Miss Lucy Eastman, Miss Ella O. Guilford, and Mrs. Willlam L. Colt.

COST OF CAMPAIGNS FILED.

Swann's Report Shows He Contributed and Disbursed Nothing.

District Attorney Edward Swann, who was re-elected at the recent election, filed with the Bureau of Elections yesterday a statement of his campaign expenses, in which he said "I contributed and disbursed nothing." However, there was attached an explanation that all moneys were handled by the Edward Swann Business and Professional Men's Committee. This committee will report to Albany.

County Clerk William F. Schneider, re-elected, said he contributed $3,100 to his campaign committee. Edward M. Morgan, former Postmaster, defeated Republican candidate for County Clerk, contributed nothing and expended nothing.

John McAvoy, successful candidate for Supreme Court Justice, said he received nothing and spent $500 for printing. John L. Walsh, candidate for Justice of the City Court, reported he received nothing but expended $1,580.01. Schuyler M. Meyer, successful Republican candidate for Assemblyman in the Fifteenth District, received $125 fro mthe Citizens Union. George K. Hines, Prohibition candidate for District Attorney, reported that he expended nothing. Samuel Orr, candidate for Assembly in the Fourth District, was the first Socialist candidate to file an expense report. He certified that he paid $15 to his party and $2 for postage.

William Henkel, Jr., who was defeated by Michael E. Blake, Democrat, for Municipal Court Justice in the Fourth District, reported that he spent $560. Harry Robitzek spent $852 to be elected Municipal Court Justice in the Bronx.

REPUBLICANS MOVE TO ENLIST WOMEN

County Committee Directs Appointment of Conferees to Negotiate with New Voters.

MAY AMEND PRIMARY LAW

First Step Taken Seeking Removal of Obstacles to Fusion in This City.

The Republican County Committee, at its regular monthly meeting last night at Lyric Hall, took steps to invite the co-operation of women in the affairs of the county organization by the adoption of the following resolution:

> Resolved, That the President appoint a committee to confer with other committees and delegations representing women's clubs and political organizations desirous of co-operating with the Republican County Committee and Assembly District organizations in the County of New York.

The resolution was offered by Clarence Schmelzel, leader of the Tenth Assembly District. It was adopted unanimously. Chairman Samuel S. Koenig announced that he would appoint ex-Republican State Chairman Frederick C. Tanner Chairman of the Conference Committee, but that he was not prepared to announce the rest of the membership. It is understood that the Republican leaders will invite suggestions from some of the suffrage leaders with reference to the make-up of the committee, and that the full committee will be announced by Chairman Koenig on Tuesday.

Chairman Edwin S. Harris of the Democratic State Committee came to the city yesterday from Albany. He said that the course of the Democratic State organization with relation to the enfranchised women and their participation in the affairs of the Democratic Party was being considered. Chairman Harris thought he would issue a statement outlining the party policy by Tuesday of next week.

"It is to be hoped that the women, now that they have the ballot, will be induced to take a livelier interest in general elections than they have in school elections, in which they have had the right to participate for a number of years," said Mr. Harris. "Records show that in the years immediately following the granting of this privilege about 20 per cent. of the women exercised it. In late years the vote has dwindled until now it is approximately 1 per cent. of those entitled to vote."

The Naturalization Aid League announced yesterday that it had called a conference of labor organizations at the Broadway Central Hotel for tomorrow afternoon for the purpose of discussing ways and means looking to the naturalization of women members and their enrollment so as to enable them to vote both in primaries and general elections. A number of labor unions which have many women members have indicated their intention to be represented at the conference.

For Primary Law Amendment.

In addition to its Conference Committee on Suffragist Co-operation, the Republican County Committee, at its meeting last night, provided for the creation of two new standing committees—one on City Legislation and one on Election Law. Chairman Koenig named both. Ex-State Chairman Ezra P. Prentice was made Chairman of the Committee on City Legislation and ex-Judge Isidor Wasserzug of the Committee on Election Laws. The Committee on Election Laws, it is understood, will prepare amendments to the direct primary law so that in New York City elections it will not be an obstacle to anti-Tammany fusion. Last night's action undoubtedly was the direct result of the experiences of the Fusion forces in the Republican primaries in this city, in which election State Senator William M. Bennett was victorious over Mayor Mitchel. The question is not new, however, for it was before the Legislature at the time when Governor Hughes first recommended the enactment of a direct primary law. In the measure he proposed an exception was made of New York City on the ground that direct primaries would militate against fusion.

The Committee on City Legislation probably will take advantage of the fact that the Legislature has a heavy Republican majority to propose amendments to the City Charter with a view of curbing the incoming Tammany administration.

There was no sign at the meeting last night of the fight, expected in some quarters, by followers of William M. Bennett against Chairman Koenig as a result of the latter's failure to support Mr. Bennett in his mayoralty campaign although he was the regular Republican nominee. It was reported that Mr. Bennett and his friends had determined to delay their fight until the primaries next Fall.

Cropsey May Oppose Whitman.

In connection with this it was asserted by well-informed Republicans last night that if Supreme Court Justice James C. Cropsey of Brooklyn should step down from the bench within the next three or four months to assume the leadership in a fight against the renomination of Governor Whitman for a third term, it would cause no surprise to friends who are conversant with his intentions. Justice Cropsey, with the strong following he can muster in Brooklyn and the support he could command from up-State Republicans hostile to Governor Whitman, would be in a position to give the Governor a stiff fight. There is every prospect of a stormy time in Republican politics, with a number of spirited primary contests in up-State districts for the overthrow of leaders closely allied politically with Governor Whitman.

Chairman Koenig, as the meeting of the Republican County Committee was drawing to a close, made a speech congratulating the members on the result of the election.

"It is unnecessary for me to say that the result of the city election was not at all satisfactory to members of the Republican County Committee," said Mr. Koenig, "but the Tammany victory was not a Republican defeat. The Republican districts stood loyally by the Republican Party and gave us better results from a party point of view than they did in the Presidential election last year. We elected eight out of twenty-three Assemblymen in Manhattan against seven out of thirty-one in the election last year; we elected Courtlandt Nicoll to succeed Ogden L. Mills in the Senate by 3,500 majority.

"We elected all three Municipal Judges in that district, and in another uptown district where we elected one Municipal Judge last year we elected three this year. Our candidate for Attorney General won by a majority of approximately 150,000, and he lost New York County by only about 35,000. There is no reason for the Republican Party to feel discouraged regarding the future. We will march to victory in the State election next Fall."

Supreme Court Justice Samuel H. Ordway, who was defeated as a candidate for the place he now fills by appointment, and William L. Ransom, the defeated candidate for District Attorney, made short addresses, thanking the members of the committee for the loyal support they had received during the campaign.

SUFFRAGISTS HOLD ALOOF.

Poughkeepsie Meeting Favors Maintaining a Nonpartisan Policy.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Nov. 15.—At the first meeting since the election of the Woman Suffrage Party of the Tenth Campaign District, held today at the Poughkeepsie Court House, it was voted that the organization continue to nonpartisan policy, that the leaders shall not ally themselves with any political party for the present, and that the organization line up its forces behind the National American Woman Suffrage Association and conduct "a safe, sane, and constructive campaign for the Federal amendment."

The meeting was largely atended by women from the five counties of Putnam, Dutchess, Columbia, Ulster, and Greene, which compose the district.

Mrs. Gordon Norrie of Staatsburg, District Chairman, presided, and in opening the meeting expressed her views as to the future of the organization.

"Governor Whitman," she said, "has recommended that we forget the opposition of certain public men to suffrage; we shall not take his advice literally. It will not be in a vindictive spirit that we shall oppose them, but it will be found upon examination of the records that such public opposition extends not only to laws safeguarding women and children, but to humanitarian and progressive legislation nearly every instance. Where this is not true we shall be glad to [illegible] opposition to suffrage."

MAYOR SMITH PAROLED.

Is Cleared of Connection with Philadelphia Political Plot.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 15.—Mayor Smith was cleared of all connection with the political conspiracy which resulted in the killing of a policeman here on primary election nay in an opinion by Judge Martin today in Quarter Sessions Court. But the Mayor was held under his own recognizance to await the action of the Grand Jury, with William Finley, a political lieutenant of the Vares, on the technical charge of conspiracy to murder. Finley's bail was reduced from $10,000, which was originally imposed, to $500.

The decision was in connection with habeas corpus proceedings brought on behalf of the Mayor and Finley. The court ruled that apparently Mayor Smith had no knowledge or the Fifth Ward conspiracy, and that he had neither consented to any unlawful acts before their occurrence or assented to them afterward. In the opinion of the court, it would require a strained construction of the evidence to regard any of the acts charged to Isaac Deutsch, a Common Councilman and Vare leader in the ward, as the furtherance of a design to permit the use of the Administration to his advantage.

The decision of the court relieves the Mayor of the $10,000 bail originally imposed upon him.

JAPAN'S PLACE IN THE WAR.

Although he says that Japan is marshaling all her war resources at top speed and stands ready to do all in her power for the allied cause, the sending of a Japanese force to the European war fronts is not desirable for many reasons, Dr. T. Iyenaga, head of the East and West News Bureau, told 500 members of the Rotary Club yesterday at a luncheon at the McAlpin.

"The American Government understands the part which Japan is determined to play in the war, but the American public, perhaps, does not," Dr. Iyenaga said. "It is not the wish of the Allies that Japan should thrust herself into the European struggle. I have not heard that any formal request has been made by any of the allied Governments that Japan send an expeditionary force. Japan's proper sphere is the Orient and Pacific. Pursuant to the Anglo-Japanese alliance Japan has agreed with England to limit her activities to the Far East. The sphere of naval operations, however, has extended to the South Seas, Indian Ocean, Cape of Good Hope, and even to the Mediterranean, where a fleet of Japanese destroyers is now co-operating against the submarines.

"On land, however, intruding on European fields is none of Japan's business. It would be neither wise nor far-sighted. It would reawaken the cry of 'yellow peril.' Those who advocate that Japan send troops to Russia completely ignore the psychology of the Russian people, and the practical difficulties of sending a Japanese force to Europe are many. It would be very hard to adjust the wide differences of race, language, habits, and, especially, diet between the European and Japanese troops. The Russo-Japanese war also has left Japan with a heavy war debt. She is a poor country compared to the United States. She cannot bear the burden of a distant overseas expedition. The transsiberian Railroad also is already much too overtaxed with provisions and munitions to transport Japanese soldiers. To transport 1,000,000 Japanese soldiers by water would take 1,000 ocean-going ships of 4,000 tons each and a constant flow of food and munitions. The European Allies cannot supply food and munitions because the dietary and guns of the Japanese are so different. The solving of the sea transportation problem would take at least two and a half years. Meantime commerce of the Far East between America and Europe would be completely paralyzed. Japan, at least judging from the present outlook, will do better to patrol the immense stretch of waters from the Red to the Yellow Sea and the Pacific, and to supply munitions and money to the Allies.

F. J. H. KRACKE TO GET SERVICE BOARD PLACE

Whitman Expected to Name Member of Mitchel Administration for Hayward's Job.

It was said last night that Governor Whitman would appoint F. J. H. Kracke, Commissioner of Plant and Structures, a member of the Public Service Commission for the First District to succeed Colonel William Hayward, now in military service. The Governor, it is expected, will receive the resignation of Colonel Hayward within a few days.

Mr. Kracke, who is leader of one of the Republican factions in Brooklyn, has been closely affiliated with Mr. Whitman in a political way ever since Mr. Whitman became Governor. He was the manager of the Governor's primary and general campaign last year. His tenure of his present place under the Mitchel administration would have ended on Jan. 1. His salary as Public Service Commissioner, $15,000, is more than his salary as Commissioner of Plant and Structures.

Governor Whitman has another vacancy on the Public Service Commission for the First District to fill. This arose as a result of the resignation of Commissioner Henry W. Hodge, who went to supervise engineering and construction work with the Pershing forces in France. The Governor is looking for some man who is willing to accept this position, with the understanding that his resignation will be tendered when Commissioner Hodge has completed his war work and returns to this country, as Governor Whitman desires to have Mr. Hodge then return to the Public Service Commission.

"I am not yet ready to give out these facts," said Mrs. Humiston, "but from statistics I have gathered I can say that at one of our big camps there are 600 girls who are about to become mothers who have no husbands. At Camp Upton, it has been reported to me, seven of these little mothers are dead. I have proved the facts in the case of two of them, and am going down tomorrow to get the facts in regard to the others. You women have got to help me do something to relieve such conditions."

Mrs. Humiston said that while the War Department and the Y. M. C. A. organizations had so carefully watched the morals of the soldiers that conditions such as those depicted by Mrs. Humiston could not arise. The charge will be promptly investigated by the Committee on Morals, of which Raymond B. Fosdick is Chairman, and Mrs. Humiston will be called upon to produce evidence of her charges.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—"This statement is too absurd to make any attempt to deny," said an official of the War Department when Mrs. Humiston's charge was brought to his attention.

It was explained that the officials of the camp and the Y. M. C. A. organizations had so carefully watched the morals of the soldiers that conditions such as those depicted by Mrs. Humiston could not arise. The charge will be promptly investigated by the Committee on Morals, of which Raymond B. Fosdick is Chairman, and Mrs. Humiston will be called upon to produce evidence of her charges.

formal denial could be obtained tonight, of Mrs. Humiston's charges, but officers of high position who could be reached denounced her utterance as both malicious and preposterous. They insisted that not only would the story be denied today but that it could be shown there was not a shred of evidence to justify such allegations.

RAILROADS TO BAR MANY COMMODITIES

Traffic So Heavy List of 525 Deemed Non-Essential Is Submitted by the War Board.

PREPARING FOR EMBARGO

Lovett and Garfield, Harrison Announces, Will Decide What Shipments Shall Be Rejected.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Railroad Presidents forming the Railroads' War Board today admitted, in the most important review of the railroad situation yet made, that the transportation problem was one of growing uneasiness. Trying conditions are certain to develop this Winter because of the inability of the carriers to take care of increasing traffic. In order to lessen the congestion and still furnish prompt service for the Government, these officials have advised that nonessential shipments be dispensed with while the congestion exists. This list contains 525 nonessential commodities.

Fairfax Harrison, as Chairman of the Railroads' War Board, issued this statement:

"The transportation situation is becoming the subject of growing public uneasiness and agitation. Those responsible for the operation of the railways realize that transportation conditions, unless more vigorously dealt with by all concerned, will grow more acute. Therefore, the Railroads' War Board believes that it should make to the public a frank statement and explain the facts and indicate some of the means which it believes should be used in dealing with the situation.

"Both the public and the managements of the railways must courageously face the fact that, under the trying conditions which will develop this Winter, it probably will become impossible for the carriers to handle all the traffic which the shipping public can offer. The number of unfilled requisitions for freight cars, after having largely declined between May 1 and Sept. 1, in spite of vast augmentation of traffic, showed an increase on Oct. 1 and further increase on Nov. 1.

Record-Breaking Months.

"The main reason, of course, why the railways are having such great difficulty in handling all the traffic is that there has been an enormous increase in its volume, and that this still continues. Statistics which have just become available show that in the months of April-August, 1917, inclusive—those being the first five months after the entrance of the United States into the great war—our railways handled 16 per cent. more freight traffic than in the same months of 1916, which year broke all records up to that time. The traffic handled in these five months of 1917 was 30 per cent. greater than that moved in the same months of 1915, and, in fact, exceeded the total traffic moved in any entire year prior to 1904. When the statistics for September are available they will show that in the six months ended with that month the railways handled more freight traffic than in any entire year prior to 1907.

"Perhaps the most remarkable figures are those regarding the movement of coal. In the six months, May to October, inclusive, there were moved 150,000 more carloads of anthracite than in the same months of 1916, an increase of 18 per cent., and 751,000 more carloads of bituminous and lignite coal than in the same six months of 1916, also an increase of 18 per cent.

"A total of 116,000 carloads of freight have had to be hauled to the national army and National Guard camps, and up to the time of the latest reports over 17,000 carloads of freight had been handled for the Shipping Board.

"The railways are still moving a total freight traffic surpassing any ever known before, and it should be borne in mind that they are doing this with almost no greater facilities than they had two years ago, and under conditions which prevent them from materially increasing their facilities.

Unprecedented Passenger Business.

"Another important phase of the situation to which attention should be called is that the railways this year have had to handle the largest passenger business ever known. This has been a serious obstacle to needed reductions in train service. In addition, between Aug. 1 and Nov. 12 they transported 1,200,000 soldiers to training camps, cantonments, and points of embarkation. This troop movement involved the use of approximately 2,750 special trains. Of course, this lare passenger traffic and troop movement have complicated matters and increased the difficulty of moving the freight traffic. Large troop movements are still being made, and the railways are moving to the training camps and cantonments about 75,000 carloads of supplies a month.

"These facts are sufficient to explain the situation. The railways have secured much more service from every track, every car, every locomotive than ever before, and the fact that the unfilled requisitions for freight cars amounted on Nov. 1 to only 140,000, in spite of the tremendous increase in traffic, reflects great credit upon their performance.

"Upon this record of actual achievement the railroads rely upon the support of public opinion, despite much of what Commissioner Clark of the Interstate Commerce Commission has characterized as 'unfair criticism from people who are trying to direct attention to alleged faults of others in order to avoid having their own shortcomings and evil doings brought into the limelight.'

"But the public naturally is not so much interested in what the railways have done as it is in what they probably will be able to do during the coming months. The course of developments is forcing those responsible for their operation to anticipate that probably they will become unable to provide transportation for all the classes of commodities which they have been moving.

"The situation is similar to that in other industries. The steel manufacturers cannot produce all the steel needed; the coal mines cannot produce all the coal needed, and the farmers have not produced all the wheat needed. Other industries, faced by similar conditions, under the sanction and direction of the Government are reducing the amount of fuel and materials furnished to business concerns producing things not essential to carrying on the war. The time may be almost here when it will be necessary to distinguish in railway transportation between things that are essential and things that are not essential.

Non-essential Commodities.

"The Railroads' War Board has therefore furnished to Judge Lovett, the Government Director of Priority, and Dr. Garfield, the Government Fuel Administrator, at their request, a list compiled by a committee of railway traffic officers showing commodities the transportation of which is regarded as non-essential under present conditions. One part of this list is made up of about 450 commodities whose transportation it is believed could be dispensed with without any considerable inconvenience to the public. Another part contains about seventy-five commodities which it is believed the public could dispense with, but not without inconvenience. It is for the Priority Director and the Fuel Administrator to determine how many of these commodities shall be denied transportation.

"We have no doubt that if nonessential commodities are eliminated the railways can transport all commodities required by the Government in carrying on the war and by the people for their subsistence and comfort. Furthermore, those responsible for the operation of the railways do not wish to be understood as conceding that the transportation lines have reached the limit of their capacity. They are still increasing the amount of traffic they are handling, and, with greater exercise of skill and energy by railway officers and employes and increased co-operation from the shipping public and Government officials including the regulating authorities, the freight service rendered can still be largely augmented. The Railroads' War Board is issuing to railway officers and employes and to the public detailed suggestions, in addition to those already made, as to methods by which this result can be accomplished, and we have no doubt that these will be received and acted upon as similar suggestions heretofore made have been.

"The difficulties with which the railways were confronted at the beginning of the war were very great. Some of these have been overcome. The increase during the first five months of the war of 16 per cent. in freight traffic handled, with practically no increase in locomotives or cars, is equivalent to the addition of 5,000 locomotives and 360,000 cars to the number in service.

"The difficulties now confronting the railways are even greater than those they faced at the beginning of the war. They cannot get anywhere near all the men they need, they have lost many of their most efficient officers and employes because of their enlistment in the service of the Government or for other reasons, and the new men, of course, are not as efficient as those we have lost. It is impossible for the carriers to get the materials and new equipment they need, because it is thought by those in authority that the national welfare demands that the output of the iron and steel mills and of the railway equipment concerns be devoted to other purposes. Great, however, as are the difficulties which the railways are encountering in their efforts to render adequate service, we believe that if the Government and the public will be patient and will continue to give the managements of the railways their co-operation, most of these difficulties will be overcome."

JURY IS SELECTED TO TRY PAPER MEN

Hint that Government May Drop Charges, Accepting New Plan for Providing News Print.

Before Judge Mayer of the Federal District Court a jury was chosen yesterday to try the seven men indicted on a charge of violating the Sherman anti-trust law in having agreed to restrict the output of news print paper and to increase the price. After the twelve men had been selected the trial was postponed until Nov. 26. No secret was made of the fact that the defendants hoped that before that date an understanding would be reached with the Government which would result in the dismissal of the indictment.

One of the defendants is now in Canada, and is discussing with the news print manufacturers there a plan for joining the news print interests in the two countries so that the output will be sufficient for all and the price satisfactory. It is not known whether this work was undertaken with the authority of the Government, but the statement was made that the Government knew what was being done, and that the Federal authorities and the manufacturers were working in harmony. Lawyers engaged in the trial of the seven were guarded in their statements, but it was plainly intimated that the dismissal of the indictment was confidently expected.

The men under indictment are the following, the first five are executive members of the News Print Association:

George H. Mead, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the association and President of the Spanish River Pulp and Paper Mills, the Lake Superior Paper Company, and of the G. H. Mead Company of Dayton, Ohio.

Philip T. Dodge, President of the International Paper Company.

Edward W. Backus, President of the Minnesota and Ontario Power Company and of the Fort Frances Pulp and Paper Company.

G. H. P. Gould, President of the Gould Paper Company and the Donnacona Paper Company.

Alexander Smith, a banker of Chicago.

John Quinn and his associate, Louis Fehr, are counsel for Mr. Smith, who is said to have financed many of the manufacturers; and the counsel representing the other defendants are Gilbert Montague, John Barton Payne, John B. Stanchfield, Henry A. Wise, C. A. Thompson, James A. O'Gorman, and George Gordon Battle. The special Government prosecutor is Mark Hyman.

George F. Steele, Secretary of the News Print Association, was not named in the indictment because he appeared as a witness under subpoena before the Grand Jury and supplied many facts needed by the Government in its investigation. But this was held carefully culpable because the management was mainly in his control. Members of the association, it was alleged, controlled 85 per cent. of the news print trade and had facilities for controlling an additional 10 per cent.

"The defendants and Steele," ran the indictment, "were able to dominate to said listed concerns as to the manner in which they should carry on said trade and commerce, and were able, through their said knowledge and said connections to encroach upon said trade of such concerns as might fail to submit to the regulations, rules, and decisions."

The jurors chosen to try the defendants are F. W. Jenkins, a dealer in chinaware and glassware; Herman Doctor, manager; William H. Slattery, Superintendent; George A. Taylor, insurance; F. A. Von Bernuth, Treasurer; Edward A. Jacobs, auto supplies; Max Fraenkel, baskets; Rudolph H. Fischer, Secretary; Eugene Stratton, real estate; Maurice C. Wyman, book dealer; James J. Burns, retired, and Joseph Troxell, manager.

EDISON PLAN TO USE SAILING SHIP HULLS

SHIPPING BOARD IMPRESSED

Inventor Promises 10-Knot Speed for Transformed Craft—Submits Drawings to Board Experts.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Thomas A. Edison has worked out in detail a plan to equip 1,710,000 tons of sailing vessels with engines and submitted it today to Chairman Edward N. Hurley of the United States Shipping Board.

The scheme is receiving the closest attention, and Mr. Edison will be asked tomorrow to confer with Rear Admiral W. L. Capps, General Manager of the Emergency Fleet Corporation. Experts of the engineering department will be put at work on the details of the program.

Mr. Edison, it is said, believes that sailing vessels, under the plan he suggests, can be fitted with twin-screw equipment which will make possible a speed of from ten to twelve knots and thus make it practicable for this large fleet of vessels to enter the submarine zone under convoy.

The success of the Edison program would mean that the United States would be in a position to go far toward bridging the gap in shipping which may exist until the large merchant vessels which are now being constructed in American yards are off the ways.

Shipping Board officials today seized upon the Edison suggestion as a very valuable idea. It had been believed that because of the general model of the sailing vessels it would be impossible to equip them with engines which would generate power sufficient to give a speed that would save them from falling an easy prey to the U-boats.

Mr. Edison ridiculed this assumption and submitted his blueprints to prove his contention. He has gone over the matter with all of the care that he gave to a study of methods to defeat the attacks of the submarine and is absolutely confident that he has reached a solution of the problem which has been worrying shipbuilding officials for many months.

There are at present under control of the United States Government approximately 5,380 sailing vessels representing an aggregate gross tonnage of 1,310,000 tons. Under an agreement with the French Government another 400,000 tons is to be taken over by the United States in exchange for fast transatlantic ships. This will give America control over 1,710,000 tons of sailing vessels.

A certain percentage of these vessels will be held in the coastwise trade, and these will be the last to be equipped with engines under the Edison plan if the engineers make a favorable report.

The first attempt will probably be to equip sailing vessels to a tonnage of 1,000,000 with engines so as to add that capacity to the fleet of merchant vessels which the United States is able to put into the service of sending troops and supplies to France.

Mr. Edison said that he was willing to give every ounce of his energy and all his time to the Government in handling the problem, and suggested that he could accomplish results which the Shipping Board and Emergency Fleet Corporation officials believed to be impossible.

His conference with Chairman Hurley lasted more than an hour, and it was evident that Mr. Hurley was greatly impressed by the arguments brought forward by the inventor. If the plan submitted by Mr. Edison can be put into effect within a short time it is admitted by Shipping Board officials that it will go far to solve the problem of the danger of a shortage of shipping.

The question of the time which the program will require, as well as the expense which it will involve, will be taken up in detail by the engineering force of the Emergency Fleet Corporation. It may be stated, however, that expense will not be spared if it is shown that large results in the war against the submarine will be accomplished by the adoption of the Edison plan.

It was announced at the Shipping Board offices that a decision as to the practicability of the Edison scheme would be received from the engineers within three or four days. If they say it can be done large forces of workmen will be placed on the task.

A survey will be made to show the amount of shipping which could thus be released from the coastwise trade without interfering with the war program. As the situation developed all sailing vessels would be equipped with engines in order to obtain higher efficiency.

Mr. Edison has made up his mind that a single-screw equipment would not be practicable from any point of view. It would be almost impossible to fit the equipment to the ships, and the speed essential to any reasonable degree of safety in the submarine zone would be lacking.

'SHIPBUILDING PRIMAL DUTY'

Bowles Hints at Conscription of Workmen if Other Means Fail.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 15.—The United States must speed up its shipbuilding program or lose the war and all that depends on it, in the opinion of Admiral Francis T. Bowles, who spoke as the representative of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, before the Chamber of Commerce here today. Admiral Bowles intimated that a draft might be resorted to to obtain shipbuilding workmen and mechanics.

"If we cannot produce the ships that we need," he said, "by the spirit of our democracy we shall have to obtain this vital result otherwise."

Admiral Bowles declared that the people in this country must be brought to a realization of the fact that without ships the armies now in process of formation would be helpless. He called attention to the fact that without vessels American fighting men could not go abroad or subsist after arriving in France and the other fighting zones.

"Shipbuilding," said Admiral Bowles, "must be regarded as a primal patriotic duty."

RUMOR DISTURBS HYLAN.

Mayor-Elect Silent on Possible Appointment of Clergyman.

Mayor-elect John F. Hylan was visibly disturbed last night over a rumor that he intended to appoint a clergyman member of the new Board of Education, composed of seven members, which the Mayor-elect will name soon after he assumes office. The report came accompanied by speculation as to whether the prospective appointee would be selected from Catholic or Protestant circles.

The Mayor-elect was questioned regarding the report last night at the headquarters of the Business Men's League. He said he had no comment to make.

"In the future," said the Mayor-elect, "all my statements regarding possible appointments will be presented in typewritten form."

It was recalled to the attention of Judge Hylan yesterday that he had written an article last February, in which he declared that some way should be found to submit to a referendum for the approval or disapproval of the voters any city expenditure above $500,000. Judge Hylan was asked if he still held to the same view.

Episcopal Convention Stands Behind Government on Liquor Measures.

The 134th Annual Convention of the New York Diocese of the Protestant Episcopal Church, which has been in session for three days, adjourned yesterday. Bishop Grear, at the closing session, brought up again the question of national prohibition. He said that four of the newspapers had misconstrued the attitude of the convention from the events of Wednesday, when a motion favoring the enactment of a Federal measure for prohibition for the duration of the war was sent to a committee, and another resolution pledging all the members of the convention to abstain from alcoholic liquors was defeated. He asked Bishop Burch to explain the situation. Bishop Burch said that the Church as a whole was in favor of temperance, and he offered for readoption the resolution passed at the convention last year which favored in general terms total abstinence for both clergymen and laymen in the diocese. The Rev. Dr. William T. Manning offered the following amendment:

"Resolved, That this convention hereby declares its unqualified approval and support of such measures as the Government shall see fit to take to secure the establishment of national prohibition during the period of the war."

The resolution and amendment were passed unanimously.

Resolutions dealing with motion pictures which were adopted yesterday declared for a better control of moving pictures and also for a modified form of State censorship.

The convention went on record as favoring a close observance of Sunday, and also as opposing any lowering of the standards of labor as a war measure.

An appeal was made for Syrian and Armenian war sufferers.

KILL BANDIT; RECOVER LOOT

Posse Accounts for Two of Four Men Who Robbed a Paymaster.

NEW CASTLE, Penn., Nov. 15.—Posses of deputy sheriffs and State Constabulary searching for the four bandits who shortly after noon held up an automobile containing A. D. Farrell, superintendent of the G. W. Johnson Limestone Company, and two employes and, after killing one of the employes and wounding Farrell, escaped with $17,000 in pay roll envelopes, late today found one of the robbers dead in a clump of bushes near the scene of the holdup and shot another of the bandits who had concealed himself in a tree about a mile from the robbery. In the possession of the two bandits was $9,700 of the money taken from the Farrell automobile.

The superintendent's party was fired upon while passing along a lonely road ten miles west of this city, as the party was en route to Hillsville to pay off some workers. The bandits opened fire as they ran into the road. Farrell, who was driving, was hit by a bullet and the machine ran into the ditch. The four bandits then ran to the automobile and each taking one of the four boxes of pay envelopes escaped through the bushes.

OFFICIALS EXPLAIN WAR SAVINGS PLAN

DIRECTORS THEIR GUESTS

Speakers Predict National Response to the Appeals of These Patriotic Business Leaders.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—The campaign for the sale of $2,000,000,000 worth of war savings certificates was virtually launched by Secretary McAdoo and Frank A. Vanderlip, Chairman of the War Savings Committee, at a dinner given at the New Willard Hotel tonight to the various district and State directors of this new financial campaign under Federal auspices. The actual opening of the campaign will occur on Dec. 2, when the sale of the new certificates will start.

A practical demonstration of thrift was given at tonight's dinner, which was in point of fact a "frugality repast," held for the purpose of discussing the work of organization for an intensive campaign for the sale of these new certificates. Instead of having the usual six or seven course dinner, at a cost of $5 or more, a three-course dinner, which cost not more than $1.50 a plate, was served. It consisted of soup, chicken, two vegetables, and ice-cream. The serving of chicken is in keeping with a desire to conserve beef for army use. Conservation of cigars was practiced, for instead of placing two or three beside the plate of each diner, a box was passed. No limit was placed on the number that each guest might take, but one was the unofficial allotment a man.

Speeches were made by Secretary McAdoo, Frank A. Vanderlip, Robert F. Herrick of Boston, Postmaster General Burleson, and Basil P. Blackett of the British Treasury. Mr. Vanderlip, as Chairman of the War Savings Committee, under whose immediate supervision the directors will work, presided as toastmaster.

In his speech at the dinner Mr. Vanderlip said:

"There could be no finer inspiration than the group of men who are sitting around this table. You are men of large affairs, from nearly every State in the Union, who, at the request of the Secretary of the Treasury, have closed your desks and come to Washington to devote yourselves to one of the great undertakings of the war.

"You are the representatives of the Secretary of the Treasury in bringing to the attention of every man, woman, and child in the country, especially the investor of small means, the tremendous service he can render the Government in these critical days. You are called upon to point out the tremendous value of saving the pennies as well as the dollars. You are called upon to awaken the public to the fact that every time a man or woman refrains from buying an unnecessary article, labor which produced that article is released for necessary work to support our armies in the field. The response you have made in coming here on this very short notice is an evidence of your patriotism. When you return to your homes and begin this campaign I predict you will find the same ready response from the people of the United States. They will begin to save, and they will save in a way which will not only release great sums for the use of the Government, but will establish habits of thrift which will lay the foundations for the future greatness of America."

Secretary McAdoo referred to the patriotic and unselfish response made to the call for service to make the war-savings campaign the inspiring success that the two Liberty Loans had been, and said:

"Such organizations as we are perfecting here now will do as much in their own way in delivering the crushing blows to the enemy as our gallant men in the field. They will do the fighting with true American valor, but the responsibility rests upon you and me and every other citizen of the United States who is not in active field service to provide them with the equipment and machines to enable them to fight successfully.

"The work you have undertaken to do in organizing a countrywide campaign to bring to the attention of the American people the value of investing their savings in war-savings certificates, which are obligations of the United States Treasury bearing interest at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum, is one of the most vital and essential parts of the great financial operations in which the Government must engage if the war is to be successfully prosecuted. The value of the war-savings plan consists, not alone in the amount of money which the people of the United States may lend to their Government upon the certificates which are sold, but also in the lesson which will be taught in the habits of thrift that will be inculcated as a result of it. What this will mean in conserving the resources of America is inestimable. What this will mean in the future economy of America is incalculable.

"Victory can only be won by the valor of our soldiers, combined with the intelligent use of our resources. Savings and economy enlarge the available resources of the country for war, and the industry of the people is necessary to put those resources in the form which will enable our soldiers to use them with victorious effect upon the battle fronts.

"There is no more important movement in America today than this movement for savings and economy. I welcome you to this inspiring task. I know that you will perform it with a patriotism, courage, and enterprise so characteristic of America.

"And when the victory for liberty and democracy is won, and America's rights and national integrity have been made safe beyond question, you will have the superlative satisfaction of knowing that you have contributed nobly to that glorious result."

THEATRE FOLK GIVE WAR AID

The Fete des Allies on the Waldorf roof this afternoon and evening will have some prominent theatrical attractions to aid in making a success of its project for securing funds to equip dormitories for members of the allied armies and navies who may find themselves stranded in New York City overnight.

Mrs. Clifford Taber McAllister, who, with Mrs. William Cummins Storey, organized the affair, said last night that practically the entire Winter Garden show would appear during the afternoon. Other entertainers expected are Raymond Hitchcock, Grace La Rue, and some of the best known professional skaters. The National Emergency Relief Society for Army and Navy, which is holding the fête, was organized recently to care for men of our own and allied armies who come to New York on furlough and forget to save enough out of their funds to provide sleeping accommodations. Two houses have been donated for conversion into dormitories and funds are needed to equip them.

TO RESTRICT OUTPUT OF PLEASURE AUTOS

FORD OFFERS HIS PLANT

Likely to be Put to Work Making Parts of Engines and Boilers for Ships.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—The Government is prepared to shut down on the wholesale manufacture of pleasure automobiles, as the 2,000,000 tons of steel used annually for this purpose is needed for munitions and shipping.

Henry Ford, Hugh Chalmers, and other prominent automobile manufacturers were in Washington today to confer with the members of the War Industries Board and Chairman Hurley of the United States Shipping Board.

Mr. Ford made an offer to turn his entire industry over to the Government for the manufacture of shipping equipment "at any price I can get." He said that profit was the last thing he was considering in the present emergency. As a result, Mr. Ford probably will be called upon to manufacture certain small parts of engines and boilers which are essential to the shipping program. When he left Mr. Hurley he stated that he was awaiting word to do whatever the Government asked him to do.

The Government, it was stated, was not in the mood to disturb the automobile industry more than was necessary, but was prepared to call upon this class of manufacturers to drop personal interests and unite their energies in promoting the shipping and airplane programs. In fact, the legislation enacted by Congress makes it possible for the Government to shut off supplies of essential steel to the automobile industry unless the conditions put forward by the War Industries Board are met.

It is said that the automobile manufacturers in appearing before the War Industries Board found little hope that anything like normal conditions in the industry would be permitted to exist. They were told frankly that the demands of the munition factories, the airplane industry, and the shipbuilding program must be supplied before the other branches of trade were considered.

The steel market, it was pointed out, was in a condition where every ton was needed to build up a great war machine, and the automobile manufacturers were told that it was their patriotic duty to co-operate in such an effort. There was no disposition to hold back, according to what could be learned of the proceedings.

It is possible that the output of pleasure cars will not be entirely interrupted, but it is positive that it will be seriously curtailed during the period of the war. A few years from now a 1918 model automobile will be a curiosity, according to one Government expert.

The discussions today were in line with the efforts of Dr. H. A. Garfield to conserve coal by shutting down on the supplies which are to be given to the non-essential industries. The only difference is that the automobile plants will be used to full capacity in turning out parts for ship and airplane equipment, and, if practicable, for munitions work.

The steps taken today were received as the forerunner of others which must bring about a great industrial readjustment to meet the conditions faced by the country in war times.

AID FOR RIOTERS' VICTIM.

Fund for Family of Home Defense Member Killed While on Duty.

A. M. White, Special Deputy Police Commissioner, head of the Home Defense League, sent out an appeal last night for the family of Adam Mang, attacked and killed on election night. The following appeal is addressed to the officers of the Home Defense League precinct companies in all boroughs:

"On election night, Adam Mang of 468 West Forty-seventh Street, Manhattan, a member of the Home Defense League of the Twenty-sixth Precinct, was killed by a blow from a brick thrown while he was assisting the police in extinguishing bonfires in the streets.

"Mang leaves a widow and three children, two boys, 14 and 12 years, and a little girl of 5 years. The circumstances of the family are such that it should be the pleasure of fellow members of the league to assist in making up a fund which would relieve the widow from the immediate privations caused by her husband's death, and at the same time be a testimonial to his memory and his faithful service.

"Contributions to this fund may be made through the Captain of each Home Defense League company, who will then transmit them to James C. Auchincloss, 61 Broadway."

Use Sugar Sparingly—Do Not Waste It

Everyone—manufacturers and householders—should use sugar sparingly for the present.

The supply is limited and will be until the new crop of cane can be harvested and shipped from Cuba and the Tropics. The supply will then be ample.

In the meantime, the people of the New England and Atlantic Coast States should use sugar sparingly.

Grocers should limit their sales to any one family. No one should hoard or waste sugar. Do not pay an increased retail price.

GREENWICH VILLAGE OPENS ITS THEATRE

FRANK CONROY, DIRECTOR

An Interesting Little House and a Promising, if Unsensational, Start.

BEHIND A WATTEAU PICTURE, a fantasy in two scenes, by Robert E. Rogers, with music by W. Franke Harling; EFFICIENCY, a drama, by Robert H. Davis and Perley Poore Sheehan; THE FESTIVAL OF BACCHUS, a comedy, by Arthur Schnitzler, translated by Charles Henry Meltzer. Acted by the following Greenwich Village Players: Frank Conroy, Harold Meltzer, Eugene Ward, Everett Glass, Edwin Strawbridge, Joseph Macauley, Remo Bufano, Frank W. McDonald, David Pennington, Leonard Brooke, Hal Papham, George Weston, Sydney Carlisle, Fania Marinoff, and Margaret Fareleigh. At the Greenwich Village Theatre.

The Washington Square Company has a younger brother, and this child was born at home, right there in Sheridan Square where Fourth Street and Seventh Avenue come together. Its cradle is another of those little theatres that seat some 299 enthusiasts when they are all there and enthusiastic. It is a neat house, quite architectural, though simple, and it is very picturesquely situated on an obtuse-angle corner, its lights shining pleasantly down the Village streets.

The destinies of the enterprise rest in the hands of one of the more notable actors lately identified with the elder company—Frank Conroy, Director. The régime thus seems to be a Dictatorship, rather than a Council of Workmen and Delegates. No Bolsheviki here.

The opening bill consists of three one-acters, the first foreign, being by Arthur Schnitzler, and the others by new and native playwrights. The fare is shrewdly varied—a gently satiric comedy of marital relations, which shows how infidelity may be compatible with, even contributory to, fidelity; a fairly imaginative dramatic shocker, aimed at the Kaiser, and a picturesque Pierrot fantasy in verse. The company is happily chosen throughout and is led by Mr. Conroy and Fania Marinoff, distinguished artists both; the scenes are in excellent taste, with a touch of beauty, and the stage management thoroughly capable.

It was the Schnitzler play, naturally, which carried off the dramatic honors. Like the "Anatol" episodes, it pictures domestic irregularities with a keen eye for their surface humors and with an underlying sense of moral values with which Schnitzler is not popularly credited. It is a morality which is not at all conventional, and least of all perhaps in Vienna, but which is loyal to the more fundamental human impulses. In this "Festival of Bacchus" we see a husband stumbling upon his young wife and her lover in the act of eloping; taking in the situation with keen intelligence; reappropriating his wife with an easy mastery, and finally condoning her temporary faithlessness for the sake of the real loyalty and devotion which, as the audience has already been made to feel, she has always instinctively felt for him.

The dramatic shocker, "Efficiency," shows a new Frankenstein of science, a maimed soldier who has been made marvelously capable again by a new German invention. His inventor presents him to the Kaiser, who is highly delighted at being thus able to save the wastage of war—until the seeming automaton reveals a human heart and murders his Majesty in his iron clutch. The verdict is: Important if true.

The Watteau picture of the final piece shows us the bored Marquise sitting beside a garden gateway with her two gallants. At the touch of Harlequin, the figures come to life and enter the garden. It is the macabre abode of the melancholy Pierrot, and the intruders witness and take part in his troubles with a very gay and heartless Columbine. The play is in rather ineffective rhymed verse, and its action, though it culminates in a doubly fatal duel for Columbine's kisses, (the Marquise being more bored at this time than ever,) is not strikingly dramatic. But the scenes and costumes are very beautiful, and the experiment is thoroughly interesting as are its novelty and imaginative intention.

Mr. Conroy played the throttled Emperor with dignity and the Schnitzler husband with admirable subtlety and power. Miss Marinoff was the Schnitzler wife and also the dancing Columbine, giving two widely different performances with rare skill and charm.

Like the elder company, these villagers seem inspired by a genuine spirit of pioneering, and their work is as valuable to the local art of the drama as it is enjoyable to all folk who are interested in the rare, the unusual, and the experimental.

PLANS THEATRE IN PARIS.

George Blumenthal Would Entertain American Soldiers on Leave.

Plans for the establishment of a theatre in Paris to be devoted exclusively to American productions, with a view to the entertainment of American soldiers on leave, were announced yesterday by George Blumenthal, formerly associated with Oscar and Arthur Hammerstein. The plan, it is declared, has been approved by President Wilson, Secretary McAdoo, and the French Ambassador.

A theatre seating about 1,500 persons will be rented, and it is purposed to rename it the "Over There." Three performances daily will be given—a comedy in the morning, a drama in the afternoon, and a musical show in the evening—and in that way it is expected to entertain about 30,000 soldiers in a week. A certain number of free tickets will be distributed among our men, and there also will be paid admissions. Any surplus derived will be distributed among the dependents of those incapacitated in service and a percentage will be given to the Actors' Fund of America.

A company of about fifty, according to the present plans, will be taken to Paris from this country, and all attachés of the house will be Americans. It is hoped to open the theatre in January.

Hunter Association Reunion Plans.

James W. Gerard and Charles E. Hughes are to speak at the twenty-second annual reunion and dinner of the Thomas Hunter Association, which is to be held at the Hotel Astor on Saturday evening, Nov. 24. The Rev. Warner W. Giles and Major Wallace McCutcheon of the British forces will also be among the speakers. TORTOLA VALENCIA DANCES.

An International Program at Century—Young Duncan Dancers.

Tortola Valencia, of whose Maja Dance one catches a fleeting glimpse in "Miss 1917," gave a program of eight numbers yesterday afternoon at The Century. Besides La Maja, only one of the dances was Spanish, a tragic gypsy dance. Two of the remaining numbers were Arabian and two Indian; one, a funeral march, was classical, and one, the Dance of the Gnome in "Peer Gynt," was Norwegian.

Señorita Valencia is happiest in work that calls for bodily vigor and saliently characteristic expression. In the Hindu Snake Dance the movements of her arms and hands were extraordinarily suggestive of serpentine writhings, and the Dance of the Gnome was a striking achievement of squatting, bounding, grotesque. In the other numbers her most notable effects were the deliberate grace of the Maja Dance and the sombre, hag-like passion of the Gypsy Dance. A large audience was liberal in applause.

The Century Theatre Orchestra accompanied the dances, and in the intervals there was music by the Blue and White Marimba Band.

Isadora Duncan's young dancers, without their chief, who is leaving for a tour of her old home, California, arranged by Coburn & Neagle, began a series of independent matinées at the Liberty Theatre yesterday, assisted by the Little Symphony, under George Barrere, and by John Cowper Powis in an opening address. There were dances from the "Iphigenia" and "Orpheus" of Gluck, and some closing waltzes of Schubert, which earned his "Musical Moment" and "Marche Militaire" four encores, as well as many flowers for the young women, known only by their first names, Anna, Therese, Irina, Liese, Marguerite, and Erica. The dancers showed individual charm and talent, deserving not only their present exhibition, but also the chance to make a reputation under their own proper names.

CONCERTS OF A DAY.

Mary Jordan, Arthur Alexander, and Thibaud and Bauer.

Mary Jordan, an admired contralto, whose annual recital filled Aeolian Hall with a gala audience last night, sang "The Star-Spangled Banner" amid a decoration of flags and palms, and introduced into her program not only French, Russian, and old Hebrew airs, which were redemanded, but also American negro folk songs, and, by request, Stephen Foster's "Suwanee River," which the house applauded at the first bars from Carl Deis at the piano. Miss Jordan sang three unusual numbers with evident sympathy, as she did Arthur Whiting's "Hundred Pipers" and H. T. Burleigh's "The Sailor's Wife," among her less familiar pieces.

Arthur Alexander, tenor, sang to his own artistic accompaniment an entire program from old Italian and German to modern French and American composers yesterday afternoon in Aeolian Hall. Mr. Alexander's voice of agreeable quality, his communicative appreciation and delivery of poetic texts have been made known here before, as evidenced by the fact that most of both the French and American groups were "request" numbers, including airs of Duparc, Dupont and Widor, La Forge, Campbell-Tipton, and Carl Busch.

Jacques Thibaud and Harold Bauer continued yesterday their complete recitals of Beethoven's sonatas for violin and pianoforte at the Punch and Judy Theatre, where the concluding matinée takes place a week from next Monday, under the auspices of the Society of the Friends of Music. Four sonatas made up yesterday's program, heard in intimate surroundings by an audience of enthusiasts, quick to show its delight in a performance far from the run of crowded events in local concert halls.

JASCHA HEIFETZ, SOLOIST.

He Plays Bruch in D Minor with the Symphony Society.

At the concert of the New York Symphony Society yesterday afternoon Jascha Heifetz, the young Russian violinist, who was found so admirable an artist at his opening recital three weeks ago, made his first appearance here with an orchestra. He played Bruch's concerto in D minor, not a work of the first order, and not one making the highest demands upon an artist's emotional or intellectual equipment. But the music was put on a higher level by Mr. Heifetz's noble and dignified performance of it.

There was all the beauty, the richness, the seizing quality of tone that he displayed at his recital; there was the fine finish, the unerring certainty in intonation, the security and firmness of rhythm, the beauty and elegance of phrasing through breadth and elasticity of bowing. All these qualities appeared in a performance of the concerto marked by singular poise, simplicity, and concentration. Only a master plays with such style and such effect. The desire still remains to hear Mr. Heifetz in concerted music of the first rank. There was much applause for his playing.

The orchestra repeated its effective performance of Théodore Dubois's "French" symphony, and closed with George Schumann's "Variations and double fugue on a merry theme": pleasing music of its kind with a high Teutonic flavor.

LEGACY TO MRS. BOOTH.

C. D. Stickney Leaves $93,689 to Wife of Gen. Ballington Booth.

Mrs. Maud Booth, wife of General Ballington Booth of the Volunteers of America, received $93,689 as residuary legatee under the will of Charles D. Stickney, lawyer and philanthropist, who died March 9, 1916. This was disclosed yesterday in the transfer tax report of Mr. Stickney's estate, showing that he left $178,914 gross and $113,689 net. Mathilda M. and Elizabeth C. Steuart, daughters of a life-long friend of the decedent, got $10,000 each.

The bulk of the estate consisted of his interest of $125,711 in the estate of his mother, Mary A. Stickney.

FRIEDA HEMPEL IN 'L'ELISIR D'AMORE'

CARUSO SINGS NEMORINO

L'ELISIR D'AMORE, an opera in three acts and four scenes. Book by Felice Romani, (in Italian.) Music by Gaetano Donizetti. At the Metropolitan Opera House.

Adina .... Frieda Hempel
Giannetta .... Lenora Sparkes
Nemorino .... Enrico Caruso
Belcore .... Antonio Scotti
Dulcamara .... Adamo Didur
Conductor—Gennaro Papi.

There was contrast enough with the first two evenings at the opera in the third, which was last evening, when Donizetti's comedy, "L'Elisir d'Amore," was given. It is an opera that has been restored in recent seasons to the repertory of the Metropolitan by the presence in the company of Miss Frieda Hempel: an artist able to sing the music of the rôle of Adina as no other soprano who has been here since Mme. Sembrich. And so this German soprano was necessary for the production of Donizetti's comic opera in Italian this season. She sang beautifully and represented the coquettish village maiden with arch gayety. It is worthy of note that she was cordially received and applauded in accordance with the excellence of her singing.

Mr. Caruso finds one of his best parts in Nemorino, the peasant consumed with a jealousy which suffers nothing from over-subtlety as Mr. Caruso presents it in his actions. He was in better voice last evening than he was on the first night of the season, but he was not at his best, though he expended his voice prodigally and made many of his accustomed effects in the music, notably in "Una furtiva lagrima," near the end.

Mr. Scotti's gallant Sergeant Belcore is a familiar figure and loses nothing of allurement in figure and presence as time goes on, though the voice is not what once it was. There is rich unctuousness in Mr. Didur's impersonation of the imposing quack, Dr. Dulcamara, though not much of that quality in his voice.

The little piece was presented with plenty of spirit under Mr. Papi's direction. The chorus sang heartily.

SAYS MRS. STIASSNY HAD CAUSE FOR SUICIDE

Cousin Declares Widow Killed Herself When She Found Her Estate Wrecked.

Mrs. Sarah M. Stiassny, who was found dead in her bed with two bullet wounds on Wednesday before last, killed herself because she had discovered that the treachery of an adviser had deprived her of a valuable piece of property, according to Richard I. Epstein, a cousin of Mrs. Stiassny, who told his story publicly for the first time yesterday.

He said that this discovery came at the end of a period of ill-health, aggravated by worry lest she should be forced into bankruptcy. Epstein said that Mrs. Stiassny found out that she had been defrauded only the night before she was found dead, and that he had no doubt that this disclosure caused her to reach a sudden decision to kill herself.

"Instead of being rich, as she has been represented, her affairs were very much involved," he said. "Her property was nearly all mortgaged. Her bank account was overdrawn. She had borrowed money from many of her friends. She did not know where she was going to get money to meet her taxes this year. Recently she had said to me several times: 'Do you think that I will pull through?' She had this dread of going bankrupt constantly before her. During the two weeks before her death she had suffered constantly from a severe headache."

Mr. Epstein said that features of the case which had been represented as doubtful could readily be cleared up. He said that the nightgown with powder stains on it, which had been found behind a radiator in the apartment, had been placed there to dry it after washing. He said that the garment had been produced instantly when Assistant District Attorney John T. Dooling had asked for it. As for the three missing cartridges, two of which were located in a trap under the laundry tubs, Mr. Epstein said that these had probably been dropped accidentally by the policeman who had opened the revolver. He said that Dr. B. M. Feldman had told him that a policeman had opened the revolver in his presence and found five cartridges in it.

The statement was made at the office of Max D. Steuer, counsel for Epstein. Mr. Steuer said that he had directed Dora Watts, the colored maid, to tell Mr. Dooling all that she knew about the case.

"I have made every effort to assist the District Attorney in this matter," he said. "When the maid refused to say anything at the District Attorney's office I told her, and Mr. Epstein told her, to tell freely everything that she knew."

The lack of developments after a week of investigation convinced most of those connected with the District Attorney's office yesterday that the case was one of suicide, which was the original verdict by Dr. Otto H. Schultze, medical assistant to the District Attorney. Assistant District Attorney Dooling said yesterday that he still thought that many points must be investigated and that nothing had occurred to clear up suspicious features to his satisfaction. He said that he had not yet received a report from Loren C. Horton, the handwriting expert, who has been asked to render an opinion on the genuineness of the note signed by the name of Mrs. Stiassny indicating her intention to kill herself.

NEW YORK, FRIDAY, NOV. 16, 1917.

HAS THE SUBMARINE CAMPAIGN BROKEN DOWN?

The first impression made by the British Admiralty's weekly report of merchant vessels sunk by mine or submarine, one over 1,600 tons and five under, is that it may be too good to be true; true in the sense that the figures prove a collapse of the German submarine campaign. In the week ended Oct. 28 fourteen ships over and four under 1,600 tons were sunk. The following week the number was respectively, eight and four; and now, so far as big ships are concerned, the tally is almost in touch with the vanishing point.

It will not do to halloo before we are out of the woods, and there must be an uneasy feeling that less than a month ago the submarine menace could not be made light of, for the British Admiralty (on Oct. 21) reported seventeen vessels over and eight under 1,600 tons lost. To what is the rapid decline in destructiveness to be attributed? It can hardly be the fact that the enemy's flotilla is so reduced in numbers that six British merchant vessels torpedoed in a week, five of them of less than 1,600 tons, represents his maximum ability to strike, that is, say, on paper.

However, it may be true that the manning of the enemy's submarines with effectives becomes more and more difficult; that is, he may have U-boats enough but not the men to operate them. It was six weeks after the mutiny in the Fleet that the significant news of it reached the outer world. The submarine service, with its dangers and hardships, had become a dreadful spectre to the men. Bonds of discipline burst, and officers were attacked and thrown overboard. If the sailors of the High Sea Fleet are still in a state of rebellion and resist being drafted to the submarines, the facts would be suppressed until there was another leak. It is to be noted that on Nov. 8 the German Admiralty said:

> With occasional fluctuations, which are inevitable in connection with this new method of warfare, the submarine war goes unswervingly forward and becomes more effective every day.

There were fluctuations, it is true, but they had been running against German success. Of course the rest of the statement was grotesquely false. Was it put out for home consumption, to stem a swelling tide of protest against the declining efficiency of the submarines? If so, there was a state of nerves in the camp of those responsible for ruthless warfare. Two days later Captain PERSIUS, the naval "critic," sounded a warning that England could not be starved into submission by U-boat methods for some time to come—she would not feel the pinch of want for six months, at any rate. He rebuked the grumblers for expecting too much. On Nov. 13 Admiral VON TIRPITZ apparently threw up the sponge. He said it was a mistake to believe that the submarine "would prove a sufficient protection against Great Britain, as some effective counter-weapon was bound to be discovered."

Evidently the ruthless school was losing faith, whatever the cause of its discomfiture. The stronger patrol of the allied fleets, the havoc wrought by the depth bomb, the difficulty of breaking through convoys escorting a score of merchantmen, and last, but not least, the problem of manning the submarines—all may have combined to convince the German Admiralty that the game was up. But this would not explain a collapse of the campaign, would not explain last week's tally dwindling almost to nothing. Is a deep game being played by the wily and ever resourceful German Government? It is conceivable that, submarine frightfulness being destined to failure, there will be a resort to audacious propaganda to influence public opinion in the United States against a continuation of the war. Germany is equal to abandoning the submarine campaign which she cannot win, and then bidding the American people consider that the cause which brought them into the war no longer exists, or has disappeared. Why, then, a further waste of the resources of the country and unnecessary effusion of blood? The appeal would be caught up by our Socialists and pacifists and the Government would be embarrassed in its conduct of the war. There could be only one answer. America, which had entered the war to save democracy, would be true to her purpose to the end, and there must be no parleying with the Germany of the scrap of paper, the Germany of innumerable atrocities, the Hohenzollern and the Hun.

THE ANGLO-FRENCH AGREEMENT.

So far as the opposition to the Anglo-French military agreement was the product of sincere apprehension, Mr. LLOYD GEORGE's frank answer to Mr. ASQUITH's questions must have allayed it. So far as it was partisan and otherwise political, doubtless this frankness has not disarmed it. In the absence of precise information about the terms of the agreement, there was room for honest doubt about it, and this doubt was governed by a fear that Mr. GEORGE or some members of his Cabinet intended to take the direction of military affairs out of the hands of Field Marshal HAIG and the General Staff. The Prime Minister took the only effective way of dealing with that suspicion by reading the agreement, and thus demonstrating that it had no such purpose. With the ground cut from under suspicion, leaving it no excuse for existence, it is seen that the British, French, and Italians have taken only a step, far too short, toward the co-ordination and co-operation without which it is useless to look for an early end to the war.

Indeed, the agreement is not only miles away from that hard German concentration which has made the Teutonic Alliance a single weapon for a single arm, but it is a good long distance from that kind of unity which an alliance of democratic Powers could safely arrive at without any sacrifice of their cherished independence. They could go much further on that road without sacrificing even their amour propre. The new War Council which it creates is merely advisory to the respective Governments, and is in turn advised by military men. The Governments have exactly the same independent powers that they have now. There is no difference, except that they have the advantage of knowing what the situation is on all fronts before they take any step. The council, which consists of some of their own members, gives them information, and is supplied by the agreement with opportunities for gathering it before giving it. That is all.

No one will say that it is not advisable for the English Government, for instance, to know what the situation is and what the hopes of success and what the effect will be on the other fronts before it decides to send an expedition, say, to Gallipoli. No one will deny that it would have been a good thing for that Government if it had had such opportunities in 1915. Therefore, when the Commons debates the subject on Monday, it will be surprising if there remain any of the uneasiness and sincere apprehension which existed before Mr. GEORGE read the agreement. There may, indeed, be opposition, but that will proceed from other motives, motives with which we are familiar in our own politics. It is earnestly to be hoped, not only that the agreement will stand, but that in the course of the next few months its scope will be enlarged until the Allies have arrived at that real unity toward which this agreement is only a timid step.

THE RAILWAYS' PROSPERITY.

Mr. CLIFFORD THORNE rises to remark that the Eastern railroads "last year"—presumably 1916—earned 10½ per cent. upon their "capital stock," and to argue that it is wrong to allow them to impose a freight tax of $50,000,000 more, 5 per cent. on a billion dollars, on the million shippers whom he represents. There are those who doubt Mr. THORNE's ability to quote correct figures on railway rates. Waiving that aspersion, it is fair to point out that what the railways earn on their capital stock has nothing to do with their request for higher rates. The railways are entitled to earn a fair return on their investment devoted to the use of the public, and to take their risk of a profit on their shares. Between 1907 and 1915 the railways put five thousand millions of new capital at the use of the shippers, and their net earnings fell $32,731,000. Nearly $33,000,000 less than nothing was the railways' reward for supplying the facilities without which they could not serve the public as it is being served.

Mr. THORNE knows this, for he speaks of the thousand million dollars of railway surplus accumulated during the last twenty-five or thirty years by excessive rates. That is a dangerous argument because it is addressed to Commissioners who have decided to that effect. It is the theory of the Commission that the railways ought not to be allowed to charge rates which would afford capital for the betterment of the properties. The opinion of the Commission in this case holds that the property paid for from rates belongs to the customers of the railways or to the public, rather than to the railways, and that the railways ought not to be allowed to base any claim to higher rates on such betterments. How then is the public's need for betterments and enlargements of facilities to be supplied? The railways have stopped growing. More track is being torn up for junk than is being laid. More new track is being laid with American money on foreign than on domestic soil. The railways are wearing out while the country's needs for service are growing. Must the country stop growing because the Commission adheres to a theory of rate making which experience has shown to be impractical and unjust? Can the railways be expected to add another half-billion to their unremunerative investment on the argument that the return on their shares is excessive in Mr. THORNE's opinion, whatever the fact may be? Who are the million shippers who commission Mr. THORNE to object to the railways earning a profit equal to that of other enterprises, even to those of Mr. THORNE's clients whose profits are made at the expense of the railways? The actual ratepayers were conspicuous by their absence from the hearings at which Mr. THORNE was the sole objector.

Mr. THORNE's argument is useful because of the opportunity it affords to challenge both his facts and his arguments, and to assert that it is the particular duty of Government to protect the railways' interests because Government is responsible for the condition of the railways. Government responsibility arises, apart from the rate question, from the fact that Government forbids the railways to help themselves, and increases their burdens. Atchison's taxes averaged six millions in years preceding 1915. For 1917 they will be double. Union Pacific's mail revenue decreased 21 per cent. in a single year, although Government mail business was much larger. Every railway has a hard luck story due to Government control. So long as only the railways suffered there was no hope for pity. But now Government is suffering for lack of war accommodations, and no company in the country is able to get capital on any terms. Their shares are mostly below par. Their bonds are salable only at a prohibitive discount because Government monopolizes the investment market. The fact is that, whatever the arguments may be, the Federal regulators ought to take a leaf from the book of the West Virginia Commission. It has allowed an advance of rates specifically as a war measure. The Interstate Commission might do the same, acting as an aid to the war boards. That would save both the face of the Commission and the solvency of the railways.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS OF DISLOYALTY.

The Board of Education has transferred six teachers of the De Witt Clinton High School of whom the best that can be said is that they are imperfectly or "negatively loyal." That school, dishonoring a revered name, has been too long conspicuous as a seminary of sedition, anti-Americanism, socialism. There, and not there alone, in many public schools, which should be a nursery of Americanism and patriotism, which should impress upon pupils, largely foreign in origin, the essential ideas of representative self-government and free democracy, which should train children to be good citizens, true to and proud of their country, the pestilential vaporings of half-baked Socialists, of preachers of disloyalty, have been constant.

The teacher's desk has been made a soap-box platform. Pacifism, opposition to the war, attacks upon the Government, have prevailed. There has been a deliberate campaign of disorder; and the mutinous and violent demonstrations of so many public school pupils in the municipal campaign were only one crop of the seeds of treason sedulously scattered by teachers.

It is intolerable that the city should pay for its own demoralization, for the perversion of the children to false and fatal doctrines, for the denial and contemplated destruction of free government, for the education of traitors. It is intolerable that the schools should be turned into factories of internationalism, into annexes of Hohenzollernism; that, while our boys are fronting death for the United States, disloyalty should be a part of public education, and future citizens be taught to be enemies of their country.

It is said that the transferred teachers were not "actively disloyal." If they were not actively loyal they should have been dismissed. To allow them to carry to new districts the infection of their doubtful patriotism, of their neutrality, if they stopped at that, of their private opposition to Liberty bonds, is to disseminate their doubtful patriotism; and is it even doubtful? The De Witt Clinton High School has long been a notorious capital and centre of sedition. The Board of Education took a very mild view of the offenders. Henceforth, we are told, it will insist upon the thorough Americanization of the schools. That means the removal of teachers who are not thorough Americans.

Mr. THOMAS W. CHURCHILL, sometime President of the Board of Education, and the most eminent Tammany educator, was the one member of the board to vote against the transfer. He professed not to believe in the charges. Mr. CHURCHILL knows what the De Witt Clinton High School is. Is his vote an indication that, during Mr. HYLAN's administration, the disloyalty of teachers will be winked at? The Tammany orators said that disloyalty was not an issue in the municipal campaign. Well, here is more evidence that it was and is. Some of the public schools are breeding new recruits for Mr. HILLQUIT's German peace party and accessions to Tammany's disloyal allies. Does Mr. CHURCHILL's vote foreshadow the policy of Judge HYLAN's Board of Education?

GERMANY'S TRADE WITH SOUTH AMERICA.

The German people were told a few months ago by their newspapers that we were losing our trade with South America. A leading journal of Berlin asserted that this trade was "dwindling," and remarked that when it should "cease entirely," in the near future, this would be the "greatest triumph of our U-boat war over our new enemy." The same newspapers now not only admit the great and continuing growth of this trade, but permit their readers to know that it will be very difficult for Germany to regain what she has lost in the South American countries. Comment upon the Reichstag's bill appropriating $375,000,000 for the construction and purchase of ships includes questions about finding cargoes for them after the war. Almost daily the press points out that the recent contemptuous treatment of the southern republics by German diplomats, as well as the sinking of their ships, has excited resentment which may prevent rebuilding of trade. Consumers in those countries who are buying from us and selling great quantities of their products here will not eagerly turn back in commerce to a nation whose representatives call them "veneered Indians," and one of whose "principal aims" has been to set up a German State in Brazil.

Exports	146,515,000	220,288,000

Since the beginning of the present year there has been a continuing increase. The trade movement between the two American continents has not been restricted by submarine warfare, although the pirate boats have checked shipments to and from Europe by sinking Brazilian, Argentine, and Chilean ships. Brazil, in her reply to the Pope's peace proposal, says that "all the republics of the New World are in union of sentiment on the issues" which led her to declare war. German intrigue has not caused friction between Brazil and Argentina. This week a warship goes from Buenos Aires to Rio Janeiro bearing a message expressing Argentina's friendship. Chile and Peru have decided to forget their old quarrel. There is nothing in the present attitude of the southern republics to encourage Germans who fear that their trade with these countries will never be restored.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Sound Talk About Air Reprisals. Highly creditable alike to his head and heart were the remarks, printed in THE TIMES yesterday, of a Belgian staff officer on the subject of making reprisals in kind on German cities for the aerial raids on London made by the Germans. He went a little far, perhaps, when he compared the proposal of such activities to the suggestion that a man at whose mother a stone had been thrown should throw two stones at the mother of the man who did it. For even that might be morally justified in case of certainty, first, that thus the lapidation of mothers could be stopped, and, second, that less repulsive measures would not be effective.

The Belgian officer was on firmer ground when, apparently speaking from knowledge, he explained the far greater difficulty of raiding German cities in this way than the Germans find in raiding London, and asserted that to overcome these greater difficulties would involve the withdrawal from the western line of so many airplanes that the aerial supremacy of the Allies there would be lost. That, he said, would be playing the Germans' game—would be doing exactly what, in his opinion, it was the chief object of the German raids to make the Allies do.

The theory is plausible, and it has the merit of explaining, better than does the assumption not infrequently made that the Germans drop bombs on English towns without any military purpose and out of mere love of killing.

It was not the Belgian officer's idea, however, that, because reprisals in kind were inexpedient, nothing should be done to end the German raids. That highly desirable end, he thought, could be accomplished by persistent attacks in force from the air on what he called "the hornets' nests"—the bases in Belgium whence the German airplanes and dirigibles all start on their expeditions to ravage the British and French coasts. Such attacks he declared to be practicable, and he believed that they would be effective. That they were now made only in a desultory or spasmodic way he ascribed to the fact that the line officers conducting operations in the field are disinclined to divert attention and strength from the work directly in their hands and for which they are immediately responsible. Most of these officers, too, are elderly men, he said, while most members of the aerial corps are so young that their advice is apt to be valued lightly and heard with impatience. That also is plausible.

Making Two Bites of a Cherry. It is hard to see why, if or when good reason exists for withdrawing from a newspaper or other publication the common privileges of the Post Office as a means of distribution, the same reason would not suffice for suppressing it altogether and forbidding its sale anywhere. The explanation is, probably, that while the Federal Government unquestionably has an approach to complete control over the mail service, it must leave to the States and the communities in them the task of deciding most of the things that shall be done within their respective limits—of deciding, for example, what shall and what shall not be printed and sold there. This might explain why the Federal authorities would not interfere with the sale in its own office or from nearby stands of a publication which those authorities excluded from the mails, but it does not go very far toward explaining why a paper held to be seditious, and therefore deprived of the general mailing privilege, can still be posted if wrapped in a special way and addressed to individual subscribers. When, or while, that is the case, as it is with regard to the reprehended Call and several other organs of socialism and pacifism, the partial ban may serve only as a valuable advertisement, inspire public curiosity that would not otherwise exist, and so result in an increase rather than a diminution of circulation.

Some of the antagonists of national policies are openly claiming that the spreading of their doctrines has been facilitated by what they call the "persecution" to which they have been subjected. The claim in all probability is false, for if it were not, even the partial exclusion would not have been protested against vehemently, as it has been in every instance, and efforts to escape it through promises to be "good" would not have been made.

It is not a small thing, in a country like this, to suppress a newspaper or to interfere with its circulation. Occasions for taking such action do arise, however, and when they exist, as now, it would seem to be both judicious and justifiable to make the action complete and conclusive.

Venice a World Possession. Of all the cities in the world, probably none, with the single exception of Rome, has a claim so good to exemption from the hazards and ravages of war as has Venice. In a peculiar way and degree, its unique manner of construction, its beauty, its romantic and historic associations, make it a treasure belonging to the whole civilized world even more than it is the property of its own citizens, or even of Italy.

The possibility, therefore, that it will be captured and occupied by armies of the nation which has shown so much, and such conclusive, indifference, while conducting war, to any other than military considerations, has caused something like general horror. This feeling is especially strong among those who know how easily Venice can be destroyed—how frail its ancient buildings are and how little would be required to bring the majority and the best of them down into the water which they have dominated through so many centuries.

Most unfortunately, Venice is a fortress and a naval station, and any resistance to the invaders that is made there will give them the excuse for bombarding it that has been lacking in many other places with like, though less, rights to immunity from attack. But no excuses will be accepted for the destruction of Venice.

It will be, if done, a culminating crime, never to be forgiven on any plea of military necessity.

ART NOTES.

Jonas Lie is showing at the Knoedler Galleries a series of pictures of the Utah Copper Mine in Bingham Cañon. The mine has the aspect of a pyramid, the sides of which are cut away in terraces so that many of the pictures seem like a combination of the Egyptian pyramids with a Roman amphitheatre. Mr. Lie has had ample opportunity for his favorite contrast of blue and tawny yellow, and has used his color with restraint and force. Often the point of view chosen adds much to the picturesqueness of the composition, as where, in "Bingham," he looks down on the town and up at the mine. "The Garfield Converters" is a dramatic interior scene at the mine, and the whole series suggests the energy of man conquering the natural world.

The Yamanaka Galleries are opening their new building to the public today with a very notable exhibition, or, to speak more exactly, a series of exhibitions, after the tactful Oriental plan of showing only a few things in one place at a time. The cabinets and small rooms of the new galleries are well adapted to this purpose. The galleries themselves, by the Japanese architect, T. S. Rockrise, offer an aesthetic treat of an exceptional kind and one that can be appreciated rightly only by those familiar with the monuments and temples and history of Japan and China. The entrance hall is occupied by porcelains in single color glazes of fine type and worthy examples. One of the now unfashionable group of polychrome "famille verte" vases goes far to raise its class from the lower level of approval by connoisseurs to which it has sunk. A magnificent white ground is permitted to reveal itself liberally, the decoration is a branch of splendid green overhanging a boat, and the rest of the surface is ornamented only by an inscription in a fine chirography. The contrast with the usual overloaded famille verte vase is too striking to be ignored. On the upper floor are the greater wares of Han and T'ang, a duck that would stir the pulses of Jane Poupelet, a horse as dramatically emotional in expression as its rider is serene and contemplative. Here also is a little Ming Goddess of Mercy of peculiarly ingratiating type, her robe closing about her like the petals of a flower; here are two Sung bowls of glass in a superb blue, and a number of Chinese paintings abounding in the poetic sentiment of the race. The makers of exhibitions of Western art could learn much of the fine art of exhibiting from the harmonious environment in which the objects shown are placed.

At the American Art Galleries are several collections of furniture, tapestries, glass, jewelry, ceramics, and other objects of ornament and use. One collection is consigned by Amos R. E. Pinchot, and 20 per cent. of the proceeds of the sale are to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Pinchot to the tobacco fund for the trenches. The furniture is chiefly a group of eighteenth century Italian, French, and English pieces, with a few from the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

Mr. Dick's collection comprises such objects as could not be used by the Metropolitan Museum of Art, or were duplicated in their collections. It includes a large assortment of diamonds and other precious stones. In the collection of Condé Raguet Thorne are a set of "Kipling" service plates made at Limoges after the designs of Mary Bacon Jones, which have a spirited and decorative quality. The subject of the decoration on each plate is surrounded by a quotation from the jungle stories appropriate to it. The series was made to order by Kipling's permission and cannot be duplicated, but the idea is one that should be suggestive to modern craftsmen.

The prints division of the New York Public Library has put on view an exhibition of drawings by J. Carroll Beckwith, which represent a characteristic and interesting side of his activity. They were selected by the artist himself for the library.

TO KILL EVIL RUMORS.

John Spargo Suggests a "Loyal Legion" Among Travelers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The exposure of the vicious canard about Mr. Tumulty's alleged treason is a wholesome thing. It affords another convincing proof of the sinister methods whereby Germany seeks to impair the strength of her enemies by destroying their morale, and the most significant, as well as the most alarming, phase of this method of warfare is the fact that Germany uses always as her agents and tools the most loyal of our citizens as effectively as she uses the most disloyal and treacherous.

It occurs to me that our Government is confronted by a very real menace. At the same time it is confronted by an opportunity to effectually cope with that menace. I believe that it is entirely possible to mobilize the loyalty of the nation in such a manner as will provide an adequate defense against this insidious form of attack. I have observed that these stories are largely circulated by traveling men. It is my lot to spend a good deal of time traveling about the country, and in common with all people who so travel I have observed that the informal discussions of travelers on trains, and in hotel corridors, provide the best media for the distribution of rumors of all sorts.

Talking this matter over with an experienced traveling man, I was struck by a remark that he made to the effect that every traveling man in the country could be used by the Government to discourage and discredit all such stories. Amplification of his remark developed the thought that a sort of loyal legion might be established, its principal membership being found among the many thousands of commercial travelers and salesmen in the nation. Perhaps their organizations might undertake the necessary details connected with their enlistment for this special service. Each man so enrolled would be furnished with some badge or identification card which would give him status and identify him so as to insure co-operation by railway officials and the police. Whenever a man so enlisted heard any one tell a story of alleged suppressed disaster or of alleged fraud, as circumstantially told in the story of Red Cross goods being sold by Government officials for their own profit, or, in short, any story calculated to impair confidence in the Government, it would be his duty to demand the name and address of the narrator if this were not already known to him. In the event of the request for the narrator's card being refused, it would be a very simple matter for the member, with his badge, to secure such assistance as might be necessary to obtain the desired information. This information would, of course, be communicated to the proper authorities, presumably the Secret Service of the Department of State. Doubtless there are some difficulties in the way of the realization of such a plan, but its main proposals would appear to be entirely practicable.

The Government would thus have pretty effective control of the very channels through which these treacherous and insidious assaults upon our national strength are now made. In all probability, this kind of warfare would be effectively checked.

Buying German Prisoners.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

About the payments to possible German prisoners, I am sorry to see people disturbed at what appears at first sight to be a good investment. It will be a mighty temptation to the war-worn Hun facing the American front to come to and exchange his $3 or $4 a month and the hazards of war for thirty good round dollars a month in addition to peace and the quiet life. The cost of ammunition is high, and it takes a lot of it to kill a German in this war; and the German prisoners will have no opportunity to take pot shots at any of our boys, whose lives are of course worth much more than any sum we could pay to enemy prisoners. It might be a good idea to spread this propaganda through the German Army. Maybe we could induce a general emigration from the German trenches, and enjoy the spectacle of a line of jitneys conveying prisonniers de luxe to the hospitality of the Hotel Amerique.

Breaks in Water Mains.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It would seem to me that, with water mains breaking throughout the city at regular intervals on account of the increased pressure, or otherwise, it would behoove the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity to have the charts properly arranged, so that quick information could be secured from that source as to where gate valves are located in all districts of this city, and when breakage does occur the valves can be located readily without too much unnecessary delay and inefficiency, thereby saving damage to life, public and private property.

RUSSIA AS LAOCOON.

O'er Russia, Treason lifts on high its head
And from its eyes there flashes baleful light,
A serpent born of Chaos and of Night,
With Ignorance, both by centuried darkness bred.
Untaught, unknowing, by blind faction led,
These twain have palsied her great arm of might
That late was sternly raised her foe to smite!
In vain her sacrifice of myriads dead!
From out of Europe's war-tossed sea these rose
When Russia, huge and mighty, had o'erthrown
The Romanoffs, the source of all her woes,
And in their stead for Freedom reared a throne!
Then came these slimy serpents, huge and bold,
And round her wrapped their deadly coils and cold!
In mighty grasp of these foul serpents twain
See Russia writhing, like Laocoön,
While all the world, amazed, stands looking on!
No succor nigh, she struggles now in vain
To free herself from folds that like a chain
Pinion her arms, in dread embrace close drawn!
The light of Freedom from her eyes is gone,
And her late glory now begins to wane!
On verge of dark abyss behold her stand!
The smoke and flame of battle round her swirl,
The serpent's hiss is heard throughout her land!
Will they to ruin Russia downward hurl,
Or shall once more the now embattled world
See her flag of Freedom high unfurled?

THE GERMANS IN CHINA.

A Lesson in the Ways of Kultur with Pacifists.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your article of the 14th inst. on German looting in Peking during the joint expedition by the civilized nations against the Boxers, from the records of our War Department, reminds me of a visit, a few years later, to Europe. Walking in the beautifully kept park of the "old palais" at Potsdam, to the Orangerie and Sans Souci (atrocious appellations!) the conspicuous positions had to be noticed, in garden and rooms, assigned to these very Chinese trophies—loot from the ancient pacifists, borne away by Kultur's boasting champions. It had aroused the hot protest on the part of our General Chaffee; brought the brutal reply by his Excellency Count von Waldersee. The writer himself was near getting into serious trouble by some remark about "Prussian robberies" heard by a nearby guard.

This exhibition of bronze instruments, of terrestrial globes and astral conjectures, mute testimonials of old Oriental savants, old long before Prussianism came to light, what illustration more fit can there come of arrogance, of domineering, of barbarism? It as well forecasts the fate of Italy's art treasures, unless the Teuton advance be speedily checked—a new duty to which the Allies must awake, to speed the assistance which America owes.

With such precedents as Dewey's retort courteous in Manila Bay, of Chaffee's warning to the German overlord, does there remain any doubt of the Kaiser's benevolent intentions in any direction, east or west, north or south?

R. I.

Allendale, N. J., Nov. 13, 1917.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It was commonly known among the soldiers comprising the allied forces in China that the Germans were past masters of the art of looting and also that General Chaffee had protested against it in no uncertain terms. Not only did the Germans loot, pillage, and ravish at Peking, but they were also very fond of announcing their superiority over any other nation of the world, and it is indicative of their popularity among the other allies that in the frequent street fights which occurred there, one would see representatives of all the other nations, even the Japanese, fighting against the Germans but never a one fighting for them, regardless of how badly they might be outnumbered.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I lived in Germany at the time of the return of the German Boxer expedition and remember that the German Government was severely attacked and criticised by the German press and the Reichstag for permitting looting. The Government offered all kinds of explanations. At that time the convenient term, "military necessity" had not been discovered.

Sea Power Will Win.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The sea power of the Allies, led by the meteor flag of that "precious stone set in the silver sea," reveals to an anxious world the engaging spectacle of the slow strangulation of that power, which, in defiance of all equity and justice, first overthrew Belgium and shook France to her foundations, the while alleging that she so acted to save the world from the barbaric domination of Russia. The German military power drags its slow way to inevitable disaster, hastened by the lack of foods, metals, chemicals, oils, cotton, wool, rubber, leather, and all the multifarious needs of the modern army in the field, and at some time, sooner or later, a point will be reached where the failure of all supplies will so react upon the remorseless German military machine as to cause it to fall before the allied armies—unless Germany can beat on the sea the web-footed English, whose small island may almost be said to be everywhere within the sound of the breakers on her shores; and this she cannot hope to do, because it is true now, as it ever has been, that the wind and waves are always on the side of the ablest mariners. Unless Germany can break the allied sea power, what hope is there for her, checkmated on land and sea?

Dogs for the Red Cross.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

My article on the need for dogs in the Red Cross service, which appeared in the November number of the Red Cross Magazine, and which was quoted in THE TIMES this morning, appears to have created the impression that dogs are actually being asked for, and that the Red Cross is ready to undertake their training. This, unfortunately, is not the case. Obstacles have arisen which have brought the movement to a standstill, both with the United States Government and with the Red Cross, and while a number of individuals are active in an effort to arrange for the training and official acceptance of dogs for use with our soldiers and ambulance corps at the front, there is no one at present to whom dogs can be sent, and no official arrangements have been made for their training. The object of my article was rather to urge upon the Government and Red Cross officials the importance of beginning soon to train dogs and handlers for military and life-saving work on the front, as they are being effectively used by the other nations at war.

H. R. Butler's Opinion.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have been asked whether I like the statue by George Grey Barnard, claimed by him to represent Abraham Lincoln. I do not like it because it is not a statue of Lincoln. To me it portrays a brainless dullard who has never risen above the toil of rail splitting. I do not like it because it is un-American; there is no go to the fagged-out sufferer—none of the alertness that so characterised our pioneers and that must have distinguished Lincoln at that time of life. I do not like it because the face shows no sense of humor. Could a spark of intelligence, much less a flash of that delicious wit for which Lincoln was so famous, ever have emanated from the stolid, almost stupid, countenance created by Barnard? But his admirers claim that the face shows pathos; what it shows is vacuity.

But my principal reason for disliking it is that it exemplifies certain lamentable tendencies of modern artists—some of great ability—to glorify the grotesque, the ugly, the uncouth, the colossal, and the brutal—all leading to caricature. This tendency prevailed on the Continent before the war. The war will destroy it there. We want none of it here. To send abroad an example of such art, presumably as a gift of the American people and implying the approval of our artists and art organisations, is an act unworthy of the well-intentioned individuals who are unwittingly lending their names to an abuse of American feeling and patriotism.

Suffrage Disturbers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Isn't it almost time for the suffragist population to realize that the generosity and patience of our men and normal women may have a limit? I thoroughly approve of Mrs. Blatch's ideas and hope this class of disturbers will soon settle down to a dignified acceptance of their good fortune and devote their efforts to a more valuable work at this time than that in which they are now engaged, which attitude, most certainly, is not that of the average American woman.

NEW GERMAN PROPAGANDA.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have been honored with several communications subtly supporting the German case. The latest, dated Nov. 8, discusses the Soukhomlinoff trial and quotes opinions of H. N. Brailsford printed in the London Nation of Sept. 15, and also editorial comment in the supplement of The Nation October, 1917.

The mistake in the thinking of Brailsford and the London Nation is found in their failure to grasp the fact that Germany's condition of peace was that Austria be allowed to have her way in Serbia. Nothing short of surrender on that point could have prevented the Great War. Failure on Russia's part to mobilize promptly after Austria's attack on Belgrade would only have invited immediate disaster. The vacillations of the Czar had no significance. When the German Kaiser expressed a willingness to abstain from plunging Europe into war he made plain his terms, namely, unhampered action by Austria against Serbia. The favorite German phrase was "localize the war." And we know what that would have resulted in; the episode of Bosnia-Herzegovina and Germany's attitude in that crisis reveals it.

All the incidents accompanying the breaking out of the war and all that has followed since make it perfectly clear that Germany was ready for war, wanted war at that moment, and was fully aware of, if she did not actually inspire, the tenor of the Austrian note to Serbia, fully conscious that its extravagant demands made the maintenance of peace highly improbable.

Mobilization is not equivalent to war. Austria mobilized an important part of her army during the second Balkan war and yet did not declare war nor did the act bring a declaration of war against her by any other power. If Emperor William's professions had been sincere the Russian mobilization would have brought only counter-mobilization and not a declaration of war on the part of Germany.

The truth is that at this very moment (July 31) Sazonoff and Szapary (the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador at Petrograd) had reached an understanding by which the Austro-Serbian dispute was to be referred to a conference. The dispatch from the Russian Foreign Office of that date to London contains the following language:

> The Austro-Hungarian Ambassador declared the readiness of his Government to discuss the substance of the Austrian ultimatum to Serbia. M. Sazonoff replied by expressing his satisfaction, and said it was desirable that the discussions should take place in London with the participation of the great powers.

Pourtalès, the German Ambassador at Petrograd, must have had immediate knowledge of this and must have communicated that knowledge to his Government. The British Foreign Office was informed that Austria had also communicated direct to Germany her readiness "to consider favorably" Sir Edward Grey's proposal for mediation between Austria and Serbia. It was unquestionably fear on the part of Germany that this understanding would cause to slip from her the opportunity to bring on a war in which Austria's aid could be counted on with certainty that led Germany to throw the fat in the fire by presenting to Russia the insolent demand for demobilization within twelve hours and by declaring later that a state of war existed.

Any attempt to cast doubt on Germany's responsibility for the war is futile. Moreover, made under present circumstances, it discloses hostility to the Allies.

Loyalists of the Revolution.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A good many American journalists are at present comparing the "Tories of the Revolution" with the pacifists and pro-Germans of today. Against this I beg to record my emphatic protest. The so-called "Tories of the Revolution," remembered and honored by us Canadians as the "United Empire Loyalists," and the founders of our great Dominion, were a very different class of people from the sedition-mongering gang at present in your midst. They were patriotic citizens of the British Empire, irreconcilably opposed to its dismemberment and willing to wait for a peaceable solution of the differences with the mother country, which they felt sure would eventually come. They comprised at the breaking out of armed hostilities at least one-half of the entire population of the thirteen colonies, but being unorganized were at a great disadvantage. As it was, they fought and bled and died and suffered the spoiling of their goods and cheerfully went into exile for their principles. As a result of their devotion to a lost cause (or a cause that seemed to be lost) we have the Dominion of Canada today, with a population nearly, if not fully, three times as great as that of the original revolting colonies and covering one-half of the American continent. Your modern historical writers, such as Van Tyne, Sydney Fisher, and others, have frankly conceded the bona fides and patriotism of the American "Tories." Their patriotism, which put the whole above the part, was, I think all fair-minded Americans will admit, just as glorious and just as worthy of respect as that of their opponents. In justice to the memory of these heroic, high-minded (if from your own standpoint mistaken) men, I must enter a vigorous protest against comparing them with the aforementioned gentry. The Loyalists of America were men who fought and lost and won, and there is no better American strain today than their descendants in Canada. Their monument is the great Dominion of Canada, and you Americans have just as much reason to be proud of them as we Canadians.

For a Milk Fund.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

One of the most important branches in the social service work at Fordham Hospital is the supplying of milk to the poor of the neighborhood with whom it comes in touch. There is a milk station in that district, but of course that only supplies milk for infants and mothers; the older children even when ill, the convalescent, the invalids, and the aged must necessarily suffer without the assistance which the department can give. This help is especially needed now when the price of milk is so high. The part of the Bronx which lies about Fordham Hospital has grown so rapidly that it has not been possible for the various relief societies of the city to enlarge the scope of their work to correspond with the increase of population. Consequently more work falls upon the social service department of the hospital than would do so under ordinary circumstances. The population is largely Italian, and often families are found who, having been strong and healthy under the freer conditions of their earlier life in Italy, have become enfeebled under the strain of the struggle for existence in this new and crowded world. These are some of the cases which we want to help, to tide them over until they can better adjust themselves to their new environment, for everybody nowadays realizes the poor community policy of allowing any of its children to struggle up without proper nourishment. The fact that Fordham Hospital is a city hospital, which cannot extend relief beyond its doors, makes the responsibility fall on each and all of us.

We believe that this matter brought to your readers' notice would induce many of them to send a dollar or two to the milk fund of the social service department of Fordham Hospital. Any amount will be gratefully received by the committee.

Y. M. C. A. GETS HALF OF $35,000,000 FUND

Workers Encouraged, but Say Success of Drive Depends on Small Gifts.

PERKINS ISSUES WARNING

Chairman of Finance Committee States That There Must Be No Decrease in Activities.

More than half of the $35,000,000 which the Young Men's Christian Association is attempting to raise for its war work, or $17,503,759, had been collected by yesterday, it was announced last night at the offices of the Association's War Work Council at 118 East Twenty-eighth Street. Of this sum, $5,593,215 had been raised in the State of New York, the allotment of which is $9,000,000. New York City had contributed $4,710,215 of the State's total.

These figures were encouraging to the workers at headquarters, who felt that the goal of $35,000,000 by next Monday night, when the campaign ends, was in sight, but at the same time a good degree of caution and anxiety was mixed with the optimism when officials pointed out that much of the present $17,300,000 total was made up of large contributions, many of them arranged for before the campaign actually opened, and that it would be necessary to make up most of the last half of the sum to be collected from thousands of small gifts. The workers realized, it was said, that the hardest part of the campaign was just beginning.

Anticipating the speeding up necessary if the campaign is to be finished successfully the managers of the drive, including George W. Perkins, Chairman of the Finance Committee; A. H. Whitford, the Campaign Director, and C. S. Ward, International Secretary of the Y. M. C. A., met at the headquarters of the War Work Council yesterday afternoon to develop plans for intensifying the work.

Statement by G. W. Perkins.

After the meeting George W. Perkins gave out the following statement:

"A very real danger, in my judgment, confronts the thirty-five-million-dollar campaign at this hour. It lurks in our being too optimistic over results up to date. Thirty-five million dollars is an enormous sum of money to raise for even so worth while a cause as the War Work Council of the Young Men's Christian Association. The fact that $17,000,000 has already been raised is, in a sense, misleading, for it includes a number of very large contributions that were practically secured before the campaign actually opened. While we will doubtless receive other large contributions before the campaign closes, we can only hope to secure the remaining $18,000,000 by obtaining a very large number of contributions of various amounts, and this can only be done through the hardest sort of work and on constant canvassing of everybody in every community between now and next Monday night.

"'Many a mickle makes a muckle' should be our motto all through the rest of the campaign. Let us keep this in mind every moment. Such communities as have already secured their allotments should not relax their efforts, for success is contagious. We can only reach our goal by keeping everlastingly at it day and night between now and Tuesday."

Women Report $209,580 More.

The Women's Committee of the campaign, at their luncheon yesterday, reported contributions amounting to $209,580, making the total sum raised by the women to date $716,000. The principal contributions announced at the luncheon were:

Mrs. H. I. Pratt	$25,000
Mr. and Mrs. Percy R. Pyne	25,000
Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan Bulkley	10,000
Mr. and Mrs. Harry H. Flagler	10,000

Miss Phelps Stokes	5,000
Mrs. Bateson	5,000
Mrs. John Sherman Hoyt	5,000
Mrs. Lois Ewing	5,000
Mrs. Robert Bacon	5,000

At yesterday's luncheon of the Men's Committee $341,135 was reported, the principal contributors being:

Dr. James Douglas	$100,000
Anonymous	25,000
George Grant Mason	20,000
William Sloane	20,000
Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer Schiff	10,000
Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Schiff	10,000
James H. Post	10,000
C. B. Winslow	7,500
Francis L. Hine	5,000
Henry T. Sloane	5,000

The United Cigar Stores Company announced yesterday that 5 per cent. of the company's entire gross receipts from all of its stores next Monday would be contributed to the fund.

The campaign is being stimulated, it was said yesterday, by the rivalry developing between different localities. The following telegram from Robert E. Lewis, manager of the campaign in Cleveland, was received at the New York office of the council on Wednesday night, after it had been sent by Mr. Lewis to the campaign managers in Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia:

> Cleveland for Monday and Tuesday reported $1 per capita for every man, woman, and child of her cosmopolitan population and several hundred thousand beside. We will not report today, so that Chicago, Boston, or Philadelphia may have a chance to catch up on the per capital basis.

The village of Postville, Iowa, the birthplace of Dr. John R. Mott, Secretary of the National War Works Council, reported yesterday that, with a population of 800 persons, it had raised $1,500.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 15.—The war fund of the Y. M. C. A. was increased $206,706 in the Philadelphia territory today, making a total thus far in the campaign of $938,443. The quota is $1,300,000. Among the larger subscriptions announced today are John Wanamaker, $25,000; Mr. and Mrs. Caleb F. Fox, $25,000; T. De Witt Cuyler, Commercial Trust Company, and Berwind-White Coal Mining Company, each $10,000.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 15.—Subscriptions to the Y. M. C. A. War Fund today in the Pittsburgh area amounted to $448,884, making the total pledged during the campaign $975,884. The quota is $1,500,000.

BOSTON, Nov. 15.—Subscriptions of $2,952,441 toward New England's quota for the Y. M. C. A. War Fund had been tabulated at headquarters here to-night. Vermont reported $34,500, Maine $87,000, New Hampshire $100,350, Rhode Island, $181,931, Connecticut $843,883, and Massachusetts $1,704,770. The total for Boston tonight was $734,000.

$125,000 TO AID CHINESE.

American Red Cross Undertakes Relief of Flood Victims.

The American Red Cross announced yesterday that it has undertaken extensive relief work to aid the sufferers from the recent Tien-tsin flood in China which swept over 12,000 square miles of territory, made 1,000,000 persons homeless, and wiped out crops and other property to the value of $100,000,000. Relief funds to the amount of $125,000 have already been made available for special designation of the American Red Cross for use through a committee of which Paul C. Reinsch, United States Minister to China, is Chairman, and of which Roger Green of the China Medical Commission of the Rockefeller Foundation is the executive. A statement by the Red Cross officials said:

"Immediately on receipt of the first cablegram from Minister Reinsch, in Peking, stating the extent of the disaster as far as known, and saying that the Chinese Government was not able to cope with the situation, the American Red Cross asked Mr. Reinsch to organize a committee, and, under prescribed conditions as to its administration, authorized him to draw for $50,000 through the State Department. Subsequently a cablegram from Mr. Green, who had accepted the appointment tendered by the Red Cross, and had taken charge of the relief work, stated the more complete details of the disaster. On his recommendation authority was given to draw for $75,000 more to be used to meet half the labor cost of employing 10,000 refugees, representing 50,000 persons, on road building for four months. The other half of the labor cost, together with all expenses for machinery and engineering, will be borne by the Chinese Government."

The Red Cross also issued an appeal yesterday for all the knitted articles that can be furnished it, to be delivered at once. It pointed out that with the cold weather coming on the needs of the soldiers were urgent.

RED CROSS DRIVE OPENS.

Brooklyn Hopes to Increase Membership to 200,000 in Week.

More than 2,600 persons crowded into the Academy of Music last night at the second preliminary mass meeting held to start a campaign to begin tomorrow and to continue for a week to increase the membership of the Red Cross in Brooklyn to 200,000. The meeting was held under the auspices of the Brooklyn Chapter of the Red Cross, and the speakers were Dr. Henry van Dyke, Dr. Allen Mac Rossie, Baron Van der Noot, an officer in the Belgian Army, and G. O. Tamblyn.

The speakers in making appeals for increased membership in the Red Cross told of the need of funds for the work in France and the vast work undertaken by the Red Cross overseas. Eleanora de Cisneros sang the "Star-Spangled Banner" and the "Marseillaise," and David Bispham also sang several selections.

'DIAMOND JIM' HEIR WEDS A MANICURE

G. L. Cloran, Who Received $25,000 in Brady Will, Secretly Married Mary Burns.

Glendym L. Cloran, who received $25,000 in trust by the will of his late uncle, "Diamond Jim" Brady, yesterday admitted that he had been married secretly on Nov. 5 to Miss Mary S. Burns, a manicure, who is the proprietor of a beauty parlor at 12 North Broadway, Yonkers. The ceremony was held at the Roman Catholic Church of St. Denis, Lowerre, N. Y., by the Rev. Richard Ormond Hughes. The only witnesses were Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Casey of this city.

The couple obtained their marriage license several days before they were married, requesting Deputy City Clerk Kellock of Yonkers to withhold the record from the newspapers. Cloran first met his bride about a year ago at a shore resort. The former Miss Burns is well known in Yonkers, where she has lived for fifteen years. She was graduated from Morris High School in this city, and made her home with her two unmarried sisters, at 37 Lawrence Street.

Cloran is 28 years old and the son of Mrs. Harriet Brady Cloran, who also received a bequest of $25,000 from "Diamond Jim" Brady, while Cloran's aunt, Mrs. C. T. McArdle, received $10,000.

MISS McCAULEY A BRIDE.

Weds J. C. Tomlinson, Jr., in St. Thomas's Church—The Attendants.

The wedding of John Canfield Tomlinson, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John Tomlinson of 45 West Fifty-seventh Street, and Miss Katharine Hyde McCauley of Ridgway, Penn., a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. C. H. McCauley, was celebrated at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon in St. Thomas's Church, which was decorated with Autumnal flowers and palms. The rector, the Rev. Dr. Ernest M. Stires, performed the ceremony. The bride walked to the chancel with her brother C. B. McCauley, who gave her away. She wore a white satin gown cut on simple lines and having a court train bordered with ermine from the shoulders. Her tulle veil was held to her coiffure with a coronet of rose point lace and orange blossoms and a wide border of old rose point bordered the veil. She carried white violets and orchids.

There were two matrons of honor, Mrs. Edward Benedict Close of New York and Mrs. Andrew Weeks Anthony of Bristol, R. I., who were in pale pink satin gowns draped with biscuit colored lace with Nattier blue sashes, and lace hats covered with pink feathers and relieved with brown fur. The maid of honor was the bride's niece Miss Florence McCauley and the two flower girls were the Misses Eleanor and Adelaide Close. All wore ruffled organdy frocks with pink sashes and their white hats had pink flowers and blue streamers. All carried pink chrysanthemums.

Mr. Tomlinson's best man was his brother, Daniel C. Tomlinson, a Second Lieutenant in the United States Field Artillery, and the ushers were Captain Edward Benedict Close, Garrett B. Kip, a Lieutenant in the reserves; George P. Chittenden, MacPherson Kennedy, Eliot Lee and William W. Hoppin.

A reception for the relatives and intimate friends was held at the St. Regis. Following their honeymoon journey Mr. and Mrs. Tomlinson will make their home in this city.

M. Chubb of Grand Rapids, Mich. Miss Albert made her début in Baltimore a few seasons ago, after being educated in Germany, where her father was for several years United States Consul at Brunswick. She has a sister, Mrs. Howard Liggett of Philadelphia, and a brother, Talbot Albert, Jr.

The marriage will take place on Nov. 27 in Baltimore at Emmanuel Protestant Episcopal Church.

J. W. FOSTER, DEAN OF DIPLOMATS, DIES

ONCE MINISTER TO SPAIN

Authority on International Law—Represented United States in Negotiating Treaties.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—John W. Foster, former Secretary of State, dean of the American Diplomatic Corps and father-in-law of Secretary Lansing, died early today at his home, 1,323 Eighteenth Street, N. W. He was 81 years old. Funeral services are to be held tomorrow at the Presbyterian Church of the Covenant.

John Watson Foster had a remarkable career and won distinction in three professions, those of arms, law, and diplomacy. His career was unique inasmuch as he was the first professional diplomatist produced by the foreign service of the United States.

He was born in Pike County, Ind., March 2, 1836. In 1855 he was graduated at the Indiana State University and was admitted to the bar after a year's study at Harvard Law School. He began the practice of law in Evansville, Ind., in 1856.

At the commencement of the civil war Mr. Foster took an active part in the organization of the State troops and was appointed a Major in the Twenty-fifth Indiana Infantry. He was promoted to a Lieutenant Colonelcy after the capture of Fort Donelson, and was soon made Colonel of the Sixty-fifth Indiana Mounted Infantry.

After the war he entered the newspaper field and became editor of The Evansville Journal. In 1869 he was appointed Postmaster of that city.

Appointed Minister to Mexico.

His first diplomatic service began in 1873, when Grant appointed him Minister to Mexico. Here he showed his capacity for such duties by mastering the Spanish language and with it the friendship of the Mexicans and an insight into the most intimate questions of internal policy. President Hayes reappointed him in 1880, and in March of the same year he transferred him to the Court of St. Petersburg.

President Arthur appointed him Minister to Spain, where he remained from February, 1883, until March, 1885. While in Madrid he negotiated an important commercial treaty between Spain and the United States; but the Senate refused to confirm it, and President Cleveland withdrew it from reconsideration.

This was a reciprocal treaty suggested by Secretary Frelinghuysen, who first conceived the idea of practical trade reciprocity. The Senators who opposed the confirmation of the treaty contended that its effect would merely be to give Cuba $25,000,000, for which this country would get nothing in return. Mr. Foster was again sent to Spain to negotiate a modified treaty, but the negotiations failed, and he returned in a few months.

He again took up the practice of international law at Washington, in which he was engaged until November, 1890, when he was employed as a special agent of the State Department to assist the Secretary and President in negotiating reciprocity treaties.

Succeeds Blaine as Secretary.

In 1892 Mr. Foster was appointed to succeed James G. Blaine as Secretary of State. While in this office he had to consider such questions as the Chilean trouble, and the Bering Sea controversy with England. At the end of his term of office he was retained by this Government to make up the American case before the court of arbitration in Paris which finally adjusted the differences between the United States and Great Britain.

After 1894 he resided in Washington, though making frequent trips abroad as the representative of foreign Governments. He made a tour of the world and was received, especially in the East, with distinguished honors.

NO SUPPER AT THIS BALL.

Washington to Conserve Food at Dance in Aid of Ambulance Corps.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—While it cannot be denied that Washington has been a little slow in accepting the meatless, wheatless, and wineless menu suggested by Mr. Hoover and the Food Commission, the forthcoming dance at the New Willard in aid of the First Ambulance Corps of the District of Columbia, will set the pace for conservation of food, inasmuch as there will be no supper.

Saturday, Nov. 24, has been selected for trying out this plan of small and early ball which will be given under fashionable patronage with Washington's famous brass band orchestra to furnish the music. Dancing will begin at 9 o'clock and stop at midnight.

Only 800 tickets will be offered for sale with a special effort put forth to enlist the co-operation of parents and guardians of the young and the near young, as this particular ball is expected to mark the début of a dozen or more girls, who, under ordinary conditions, would be presented at as many different receptions in the coming Winter.

Miss Mary Duncan Gibson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richardson Gibson and Miss Margaret Deveraux, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Ryan Deveraux, are the young people directly responsible for the new order of a supperless dance.

AMBULANCE AID IN ALBANIA.

Americans at the Front in Recent French Advance.

PARIS, Oct. 30, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—American Ambulance men played an important part in the recent heavy fighting on the Albanian front. The light cars of the Americans forged ahead over almost impassable roads, keeping up with the victorious French armies and at one stage in the attack passing all units except the cavalry. Heavier machines found it impossible to traverse the roads until after they had been repaired.

The French advanced more than thirty miles in three days, a distance which they had planned to cover only after much resistance. Most of the heavy fighting occurred the first day, when French artillery cleared out nearly all of the enemy positions.

At one point in the attack the French were forced to build a small pontoon bridge under the heavy fire of Austrian guns. This completed, Algerian troops stormed ahead and could hardly be stopped. Many of them went two and three days without food, as it was impossible for the supply trains to keep up with the advance. Casualties were light and there were few wounded soldiers for the ambulance men to transport.

Many Austrian prisoners taken by the French surrendered without the slightest resistance. When interviewed by their captors, they were invariably strong in their condemnation of the Germans, whom they blame for prolonging the war. They reported that their rations had been restricted to meat, bread, and water, and welcomed the supplies, including vegetables and wine, which the French provided for them.

GIFTS FOR N. Y. U. SOLDIERS.

More than 400 Christmas cheer boxes have been sent to the New York University students in active service in France by Chancellor Elmer Ellsworth Brown's committee of the university, which consists of wives of Faculty members. In addition to the eatables, games, &c., in each box will be a blanket which was added at the last moment in response to a letter received from one of the boys of the New York University Ambulance Company, saying that these were needed. The young women students of the Schools of Commerce and Law at Washington Square made 1,500 trench candles, which were also sent. They have formed a trench candle brigade, which will supply the N. Y. U. men with candles during the continuance of the war. Christmas cheer boxes for the university boys in the home camps will be packed next week, making approximately 1,000 boxes in all.

10-MILE FIRE CHECKED.

Special to The New York Times.

ALLENDALE, N. J., Nov. 15.—The biggest forest fire in the history of the State, according to the Fire Warden, and which has been raging fiercely five miles from Suffern, N. Y., for the last week, was put under control today. The fire made more than 300 families homeless and did damage estimated at $250,000.

The fire extends over an area of ten square miles and can be seen for a great distance. The section in which the fire is burning is in the wooded part of the Ramapo Mountains. Two hundred men, under the Fire Warden, have been busy night and day for a week cutting down trees in the path of the blaze. Today the fire was confined to a desolate tract known as Bear's Swamp, and it is believed that it will spread no further.

HECKSCHER SUIT DISMISSED

Supreme Court Justice Dugro, who heard the $250,000 suit of August Heckscher, realty operator, against Edmund L. Baylies, member of the law firm of Carter, Ledyard & Milburn for damages because of a letter written by Mr. Baylies which caused George Backer, builder, to change his mind about buying the Havemeyer property at Thirty-eighth Street and Madison Avenue, dismissed the complaint yesterday.

Mr. Backer, who was the chief witness for Mr. Heckscher, admitted receiving the letter from Mr. Baylies warning him that the Havemeyer property was covered by the Murray Hill restriction and assuring him that J. P. Morgan and other property owners in the neighborhood would go to law if he carried out his plan to build a loft building there, but said he backed out because of the suggestion of the Morgan opposition and not on account of the alleged restriction which, he said, he didn't think would hold. Since the suit was based on the allegation that the restriction threat was the cause of the alleged damage, the court held that no cause of action was proved.

The defense was prepared to offer testimony that Mr. Heckscher really lost nothing, and actually gained when the sale to Mr. Backer fell through, because the property is worth more now than the price at which Mr. Heckscher planned to sell it.

Justice Davis Improving.

Continued improvement in the condition of Supreme Court Justice Vernon M. Davis, who has been ill with pneumonia at his home, 194 Lenox Avenue, was reported last night. It was said that the crisis had been passed and that Justice Davis is apparently on the road to recovery.

He was stricken ten days ago. Mr. Postelwaite was 67 years old, and entered the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad in 1863. He became Assistant to the President in 1897, during the administration of Frank Thomson. Latterly he had charge of all matters relating to the handling of mails by the railroad, and in that capacity he spent much of his time in Washington.

INJUNCTION GRANTED DU PONT BONDHOLDERS

New Jersey Court Restrains Use of Corporate Assets to Retire Capital Stock.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 15.—Francis S. Hoyt and other bondholders of the du Pont Powder Company of New Jersey obtained an injunction today from Vice Chancellor Backes to restrain the use of the corporate assets of the firm to retire capital stock, which, it was asserted, would impair the rights of bondholders. Retiring of the capital stock was to be part of a plan for reorganizing and financing the concern.

The Vice Chancellor pointed out that until 1906, when it began making explosives and similar products, the company was simply a holding corporation. In that year it floated a thirty-year bond issue of $16,000,000 secured by a trust deed, imposing a charge in favor of the trustee upon all of its property, present or future. Then, the court's opinion shows, following the outbreak of the war the company made huge sums until, in 1915, it had grown from a holding corporation with possessions of $37,500,000 to a concern having assets in excess of $200,000,000.

In the reorganization plan, the Delaware du Pont Company was organized with a capital of $240,000 and purchased the New Jersey company's property and business for $120,000,000, paying $59,500,000 of debenture shares, $59,000,000 in common stock and $1,500,000 in cash. the New Jersey company used the cash to take up mortgage liens, divided the common stock among its shareholders, and planned to use the debenture shares to retire all of the New Jersey firm's liabilities, consisting of $14,000,000 bonds, $15,000,000 preferred stock, and $29,500,000 common stock. This plan was stopped by the courts and the company then proposed to use $26,000,000 of the debenture shares to retire a like amount of common stock, and proceedings are under way to decrease the common stock to $3,500,000. The Vice Chancellor shows that the accomplishment of this plan would leave $5,000,000 of the debenture shares and cash to secure the unredeemed bonds and preferred stock.

Illustrating the reorganization plan as a dissipation of securities pledged to stockholders, the Vice Chancellor says:

"No better illustration can be had than the rise in market value from $85 to $102 of these very bonds the moment the reorganization was announced. That such an event was probable and contemplated by the New Jersey company is evinced by the stipulation in the trust deed that at any time before maturity the bonds were redeemable at $110. Of this prospect the bondholders, obviously, cannot be deprived."

John D. Crimmins, a distinguished citizen and for thirty-four years a valued member of this board, has been called from the scene of his long, active, and useful life. It is difficult for us to give adequate expression to our esteem for the man and our sorrow at his departure. His connection with this bank began when he opened an account in 1877, and from that time he always had the keenest interest in its welfare. In 1883 he became a Director, his wide acquaintance with men of affairs and his intimate knowledge of the growth and history of the City of New York gave him a particularly valuable equipment as a Director of the bank, and his ability contributed largely to its success.

His devotion to his family, his philanthropic spirit, his genial personality, and the wholesome simplicity of his tastes all joined to make him a citizen of unusual value to the community and one whom it will be difficult indeed to replace.

Individually and as a board, we tender to his family our sympathy in their bereavement.

ACCIDENTS IN THE GARDEN RING MAR FOURTH DAY'S SPORT AT HORSE SHOW

TINY RIDER THROWN AND BADLY INJURED

WOMEN RULE IN THE RING

Little Becky Lanier, the daring twelve-year-old riding sensation of the National Horse Show, was seriously injured at Madison Square Garden last night. She was guiding the noted hunter Down East over the hurdles in the event for the Maclay trophies, when, while taking the third fence in the tanbark ring, Down East balked and charged into the rails. The child rider was thrown heavily, but fell clear of the horse, which dropped down to its side, grazing the little girl by inches.

The Garden at the time of the accident was filled and women screamed and the veteran horsemen about the ring gasped as the girl was thrown. The frightened high-spirited horse became tangled in the falling bars, and the grooms rushed to the hurdles and the girl was pulled from beneath the horse's feet in the nick of time. Charles D. Lanier of the Fairfield County Hounds, the father of the girl, rushed from his box with Mrs. Lanier and reached the scene of the accident with the judges.

Pale and unconscious, the skillful little horsewoman was carried to the judges' stand. She was badly stunned and bruised from the shock of the fall, and it soon was found that she was not dangerously injured. Mr. Lanier carried his daughter from the ring. For a time the judging of the event was delayed and spectators hurried in every direction anxiously fearing the worst for the girl rider's safety. Physicians found that no bones were broken, and soon after being carried from the ring she recovered consciousness.

Riding the other two entries in the event of the Fairfield County Hounds team were Miss Ivy Madison, on Equality, and Miss Joan Mickler, on Rock Cress. Seldom has there been so much excitement and so many accidents crowded into one evening at the Horse Show, and the spectators were kept keyed up to a high pitch of excitement during the long list of women's events.

Several Narrow Escapes.

In this same competition Mrs. E. Winston, riding Strawbridge, cleverly kept her seat when her mount smashed into the fourth barrier and knocked down the fence. Miss Dorothy Ives on Katrinka and Miss J. McLean on Delbeck also found their horses balky. Although they both went crashing through the fences, they luckily escaped injury.

When the excitement following the accidents had calmed down, the competition was resumed and the event was won by the Glen Arden Hunt team, with Mrs. A. Robertson riding Winchester, Miss Lida Fleitmann on Palmetto, and Mrs. E. H. Carle on Longwood. Second prize went to the Westminster team owned by Sir Adam Beck. Sir Edward was ridden by Miss Marian Beck, Lady Beck rode Melrose, and Mrs. Reginald Gault was up on Sir Thomas.

Another serious spill happened early last evening in the competition for the Commodore Cup for hunters and jumpers over triple bars. Tom Smith, head of Sir Adam Beck's Westminster Stable, got a bad fall while riding Melrose, last year's champion hunter, over the barrier. The horse landed on its side, with Smith underneath, and when the animal rolled over, Smith was knocked unconscious on the tan bark. He was carried out of the ring by the grooms, and it was several minutes before he was revived. The injured rider was badly bruised and received a bad cut on the head. After his wounds were dressed by a physician, Smith was taken to his hotel.

The Commodore Cup, presented by John McE. Bowman, was won by Robinhood, owned by the Meadows Stables and ridden by Jack Hamilton, who rode the same jumper when it carried off the high-jumping honors on Wednesday night. Second place went to Delbeck of the same stable and also ridden by Hamilton.

Thrills followed each other in rapid succession in this event, which is a combination broad and high jump. Miss Kitty Smith of Philadelphia, riding Jolly Good Fellow, owned by Isaac H. Clothier of Philadelphia, was heavily thrown over the horse's head, but miraculously escaped injury. Miss Helen Hitchcock, riding Cavalier, was also thrown, but pluckily remounted and finished the course. Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock, on Coniston, had a narrow escape when her hunter balked at the second fence, and only her clever riding enabled her to keep her seat.

Horsewomen reigned supreme last evening, the fair riders and drivers occupying the ring in a number of features which attracted the closest attention. The largest gathering of the show witnessed the events and the most enthusiastic reception of the week greeted Miss Belle Beach, riding Aviator, exhibited by Franklin B. Jourdan, when she won the blue ribbon in the Townsend Cup event for women saddler horses ridden by women on side saddles.

It was one of the prettiest events of the show as the riders guided their horses about the ring, while the Old Guard Band played lively airs. The women, in their riding and hunting habits, presented a stirring picture as their mounts responded to the different gaits.

The fashionably gowned society women in the boxes followed the well-behaved animals with marked attention and the usual cool reserve was forgotten in an outburst of applause with the judges' awards. While going through the various gaits the horses were in perfect rhythm with the band music. The riding of the women has been one of the features of the show, and all the riders have come in for high praise.

The women riders again received flattering attention with the qualified hunters, when Miss Marian Beck, daughter of Sir Adam Beck rode Sir Thomas to victory. Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock with Coniston was second, while Miss Kitty Smith of Philadelphia took third place with Bally Heather.

Badly behaved cavalry horses enlivened the competition for officers in the Grafton broad jump. When Coco leaped into the ring, ridden by Captain C. C. Benson, the horse galloped through the inclosure so swiftly that the barrier was broken when he smashed into the fence. Turk was also greatly agitated, and caused a lot of trouble. The officers got the horses under control, however, and they made the jumps in excellent form. The Cup was won by Coco, with Turk reserve.

ARMY MOUNTS SHOW MERITS.

Share Attention with Thoroughbreds in Show Ring at Garden.

Thoroughbreds and horses suitable for army purposes played leading parts in the early program of the Horse Show yesterday, though there were many interesting developments in the rivalry that has been in progress all the week for the ribbons in the harness and saddle classes.

Judge William H. Moore has made a cleanup, with nine firsts on Wednesday, which brought his total of blues up to seventeen, and gave him a lead over all other competitors that will again place him in the van of the winning exhibitors. A close race for second lies between Hamilton Farms, owned by James Cox Brady, and Walter H. Hanley of Providence, with the chances rather in favor of the Massachusetts owner.

In the afternoon session Judge Moore had to yield on two occasions to the entries of Miss Constance Vauclain, and one of the victories scored by the clever horsewoman from Philadelphia indicates that at least one of the coveted championships will fall to her chestnut mare, The Whip, which carried off the tricolor ribbon a year ago. The Whip was beaten in a breeding class on Wednesday by Judge Moore's Bountiful, but when this pair met yesterday in the appointment class to phaetons, The Whip had the advantage of Miss Vauclain holding the ribbons. Miss Vauclain's efforts to obtain her first blue of the show were appreciated by the crowd, with which she is always a favorite, and the spectators approved the decision of the judges in placing her first, and thus marking up the first defeat for Bountiful at this show.

Miss Vauclain Wins Again.

Having broken the ice, Miss Vauclain scored again in a pretty tandem class. P. O'Connell drove The Whip in the lead and Supreme Polonius on the wheel with great effect. It was again a battle between Miss Vauclain's entry and that of Judge Moore, and again the Philadelphian triumphed. Her pair acted in concert throughout, and gained the blue over Lord Seaton and Mathias Pick Em Up, which represented Judge Moore. That left only one blue for the leading exhibitor in the afternoon classes, and this was captured from good opposition in a class for pairs by Micah and Bountiful, with Hamilton Farm's Frailty and Argo taking the red, and Walter H. Hanley's Rainbow and Sunshower the yellow ribbons.

General F. L. Lessard of Ottawa, one of the leading turfmen of Canada, volunteered to judge the thoroughbred stallion class in the absence of John E. Madden, who has officiated since 1913. There was an international flavor to the competition, as E. D. Morgan showed Brettenham, a horse of the Irish hunter type, which is by Winkfield, one of the best Irish sires, and also the sire of Winkfield's Pride, a noted racer on the other side.

Brettenham is 10 years old, and had been raced under the name of Default, but he was beaten by an American-bred horse, Uncas Chief, which was a good performer on the turf for the late T. L. Watt, and which has scored in a similar class before. Uncas Chief is a son of the great racer, Ben Strome, and is now owned by J. Macy Willets, who is using him at his Cassills Farm for breeding artillery and other utility horses from hackney and half-bred mares. Uncas Chief had more substance than Brettenham, and fulfilled the conditions which call for horses suitable for breeding animals good for general purposes.

Brettenham Gets Blue.

Though defeated in the thoroughbred class Brettenham showed that his owner had made no mistake when he imported the Irish horse, as after a competition which resulted in an umpire being called in to break the tie between the two judges in selecting the winner, Brettenham was awarded the blue in the class for stallions suitable to get field artillery horses of the size and type required by the Government. All the competitors were thoroughbreds, A. J. Davis's Ingaled being placed second.

There was a turnout of eleven to compete for the prize presented by The Jockey Club for horses suited to become cavalry mounts. A dramatic scene preceded the judging as Captain F. de Juge Montestiuc stood at salute while the band played the "Marseillaise." The French officer, as well as Colonel T. A. Bate, had been asked by General Lessard to assist in the judging, so that the Allies played a prominent part in selecting a type of horses for our cavalrymen.

Only two officers had mounts, Colonel Sir Adam Beck and Captain Harry La Montagne, and the rest of the field had women and hunting men as riders. Strange to say it was a woman who owned the most likely candidate for war work, for Miss Joan R. Mickler's four-year-old chestnut mare Romance, standing 16.1 hands, was chosen for the blue. Sir Adam Beck was second on his Sir Edward, a horse of hunting type, and Miss Lida L. Fleitmann was third on Winchester, another hunter.

Other spectacular classes in the afternoon were for polo mounts, and both of the first awards fell to Howard Phipps, the Meadowbrook player, who has made a name for himself on the polo field. Mr. Phipps rode himself, and his clever manner of handling his mounts on the turns had much to do with his success.

In the lightweight division he scored with the bay gelding Wee Kirk, an eight-year-old, while in the heavyweights Old Cobweb, the noted international mount, showed that he had lost none of his alertness with advancing age, and added another blue to his long string. J. C. Cooley, another well-known Long Island polo player, also did well by riding several of the lesser prize winners.

For the first time at the show Mrs. Robert E. Tod's Sceptre was intrusted to a rider other than her owner. Even the change to J. Schweiger was not sufficient to influence the judges to displace the reigning king of the saddlers, and Walter H. Hanley's Driftwood Blaze took his fourth blue of the show in Class 92, while Sceptre stepped up into second place.

GORGEOUS DISPLAY IN BOXES.

Cosmopolitan Crowd Rubs Elbows at Garden Show.

Nearly every seat and all the boxes were occupied last night at the Horse Show, the gowns and wraps of the women making a scene of striking color. There were many visitors noticed from out of town, and it was apparent that war had not modified their costumes, as some were gorgeously arrayed. Among the novelties of fashion noted were the jeweled Spanish combs and the small gilt tinsel hats. Several women, on the eve of leaving for the hunting season in the South, wore straw hats with roses.

The cosmopolitanism of the assembly was very noticeable, a condition brought about by the war. It was more like a Continental crowd in the days of peace, showing how representatives of all the allied nations and the neutral countries are flocking to New York.

There were British officers in their smart uniforms in the boxes, and Japanese and East Indians in the arena seats. Mingling in the throng on the promenade were noticed Belgian and French soldiers, some members of the Canadian overseas forces, aviators of the Royal Flying Corps, Spanish girls in picturesque attire, an American Indian, a Texas cowboy, wearing his sombrero, several Chinese, Italians, a group of Brazilian women, and officers of the United States Army and Navy.

The majority of the boxholders entertained large parties. Mrs. Joseph W. Harriman and Mrs. Oliver Harriman were hostesses in Box 55. Mrs. C. C. Rumsey had a party in Box 41, which her mother, Mrs. E. H. Harriman, occupied at the afternoon session. Mrs. William Lowe Rice entertained in Box 43, Mr. and Mrs. E. Francis Hyde had Mr. and Mrs. Herbert M. Hyde as their guests in Box 39.

Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs was a visitor at the afternoon session, also Mrs. Herbert Shipman and Mrs. Burke Roche. Mrs. Roche carried her Pom poodle. Major Lord Robert Innes-Ker was a guest in the Harry D. Holloway Box No. 17. Mrs. Ambrose Monell, Mrs. Lewis L. Clarke, Mrs. William T. Carrington, Mrs. T. Ashley Sparks, Mrs. Harry H. Flagler, Mrs. Rufus L. Patterson, and Mrs. Albert H. Wiggin gave box parties.

QUAKERS REHEARSE UNTIL AFTER DUSK

Coach Folwell Drives Eleven Through Final Paces for Michigan Encounter.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 15.—Bob Folwell put the finishing touches on the Penn football squad today for its meeting with Michigan next Saturday on Franklin Field. Heinie Miller, end and Captain of the Red and Blue team, has an attack of grip, and watched his men run through their final paces. It is not likely, however, that his illness will keep him from the Wolverine game.

Howard Berry was not in uniform today. He saw his teammates work out, and gave as his excuse that he had some studies to prepare. Carl Thomas has not improved, and only the remotest chance exists that he will oppose the formidable Michigan eleven. Otherwise the squad was intact, and, outside of Berry and Miller, took the posts they will occupy Saturday.

There was no scrimmage held, the staff of coaches sending the athletes through a stiff drill on the elementals. Folwell kept after his warriors through the entire two-hour practice, and when dusk finally put an end to the workout all were willing to shed their togs. The Red and Blue eleven will enter the important game with Michigan trained to the second and will be ready with an excellent knowledge of football tactics.

A long shadow practice took up most of the period today. The scrubs were arrayed against the regulars. The team tried the same plays against the scrubs that Folwell has taught it for the Maize and Blue.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 15.—The University of Michigan football squad of twenty men, and its coaching staff and trainers, left here today for Wayne, Penn. The squad will remain there until Saturday, when it will proceed to Philadelphia to play its annual game with the University of Pennsylvania. Sparks is the only back field man in poor condition, and it is probable that Cohn will start at left half.

FORDHAM SENIORS VICTORS.

Defeat Freshmen in Interclass Series at Football.

The seniors defeated the freshies in the interclass football series at Fordham yesterday by 13 to 0. Both touchdowns were made by Scanlon. The upper classmen displayed a general mental and physical supremacy. The seniors are now tied with the sophs for the lead. The line-up:

Seniors, (13.)	Position.	Freshmen, (0.)
De Groat	L. E.	Barry
McCarthy	L. T.	Melvin
H. Kehoe	L. G.	Curry
Delehanty	C.	McGovern
Kingsley	R. G.	McCann
Maguire	R. T.	Robertson
Shankey	R. E.	McGuirk
McQuade	Q. B.	Donnelly
Dwyer	L. H. B.	Murray
Scanlon	R. H. B.	J. Kehoe
Farley	F. B.	O'Hara

Touchdowns—Scanlan, 2. Goal from touchdown—McCarthy. Substitution—Armend for Curry. Referee—B. Wefers. Umpire—R. Kelly. Periods—Ten minutes.

FINAL DRILL FOR FORDHAM.

Team Completes Preparation for Battle with Cornell.

The Fordham eleven had a light practice yesterday as the final drill for tomorrow's clash with Cornell. The proceedings opened with a blackboard talk, in which Coach McCaffery gave instructions to the squad. A punting and signal drill completed the work.

There was not an overabundance of dash in the practice. Crovat was at quarter, but he is not likely to play against Cornell, as his side still is giving him trouble. Frisch also will be unable to play. Abbott has been playing well at guard, and will start the game on the left side of the line. Nineteen players will be taken to Ithaca when the team leaves this morning.

COLUMBIA LOSES HOULAHAN

Houlahan, the Blue and White's clever full back, will be on the side lines during the game tomorrow with Wesleyan. Houlahan has borne the brunt of the Columbia line bucking and punting, and as a result of overwork will not be able to don his uniform before next Monday for the final week's practice before the N. Y. U. game. Soup Campbell and Tommy Farrell, the tackles, who have been suffering with charley horses this week, will be able to play the entire game.

In the scrimmage with the eleven from Clinton High School yesterday, Don Memmott took Houlahan's place at full back, and gave a creditable performance. Against Hobart Memmott scored three touchdowns and one field goal. Weinstein guided the 'Varsity, and is making such rapid strides in learning the duties of a quarter back that the Morningsiders are looking on him as a second Howard Miller.

The Wesleyan 'Varsity, which plays here tomorrow, will outweigh the Blue and White team by three or four pounds. Their attack has been based upon line plunges, interspersed with some open play. As the local eleven has been especially strong against teams using short line bucks, the Blue and White is expected to come out on top at least by a safe margin.

SPEED SLOGAN OF VIOLET.

N. Y. U. 'Varsity Goes Through Plays at Rapid Pace.

The New York University football team was put through a fast and thorough practice on Ohio Field yesterday. Coach Wall throughout the afternoon laid great stress on team work and speed. He drove the players relentlessly until darkness.

A short scrimmage was held by the 'Varsity and freshmen. All through this fray speed and team work were the slogans. Christopher and Johnson, as half backs on the regulars, skirted the freshmen ends for good gains on several occasions. Once Johnson broke away from the rookies and ran 90 yards for a touchdown.

Besides making both teams line up fast and get the plays under way in a hurry Coach Wall gave the 'Varsity plenty of opportunity to break up aerial attacks by letting the 1921 men use many forward passes. Before the close of the scrimmage period the regulars seemed quite proficient in breaking up these plays.

BILLINGS BREAKS 96 BIRDS.

Has Four Straight Strings of 24 Each at Bayside Traps.

C. W. Billings, shooting with machine-like precision, broke 96 out of 100 clay birds in an invitation shoot at the Bayside Yacht Club traps yesterday. Of the nineteen contestants the New York Athletic Club and the professional fraternity were liberally represented.

Billings had four strings of 24 each. The high handicap prize in the 100-bird event was won by G. F. McCutcheon after two shoot-offs, F. E. Williamson, C. Stein, H. H. Shannon, W. S. Silkworth, J. Vandeveer, W. B. Ogden, and C. W. Billings tieing with him.

The results follow:

G. F. McCutcheon, 82, 25—100; C. W. Billings, 96, 10—100; F. E. Williamson, 85, 25—100; C. Stein, 93, 7—100; H. H. Shannon, 88, 12—100; W. S. Silkworth, 93, 10—100; J. Vandeveer, 91, 12—100; W. B. Ogden, 81, 12—100; G. F. McCutcheon, 82, 25—100; C. Doty, 85, 16—100; Dr. Culver, 91, 8—99; C. A. Merritt, 87, 12—99; D. E. Smith, 88, 10—98; W. Delehanty, 78, 20—98; H. S. Wells, professional, 95; J. F. Fanning, professional, 95; C. Summerson, professional, 89; H. A. Taller, professional, 86; E. O. Zealey, professional, 85; W. C. Paerner, 84, 25—61.

U. S. G. A. NAMES WHEELER.

Nominating Committee Chooses Apawamis Golfer for President.

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—The nominating Committee of the United States Golf Association made public its nominations, headed by Frederic S. Wheeler of the Apawamis Club for President today. Nomination is generally equivalent to election, and it is assumed that the slate will be confirmed at the January meeting. Other nominations follow:

Vice Presidents—Dr. Walter S. Harban, Columbia Country Club; Sterling E. Edmunds, St. Louis Country Club. Secretary—Howard F. Whitney, Nassau Country Club; Treasurer—Mortimer N. Buckner, Garden City Golf Club; Executive Committee—Frank E. Miller, Old Elm Club; J. F. Byers, Allegheny Country Club; Asa D. French, the Country Club; W. P. Stewart, Audubon Golf Club. Nominating Committee for 1919—David R. Forgan, Onwentsia Country Club; C. J. Sullivan, Garden City Golf Club; Alexander Britton, Chevy Chase Club; W. S. Gilkey, Mayfield Country Club; Parker W. Whittemore, Myopia Hunt Club.

For the first time in the history of the United States Golf Association, a President of that organization is to serve only one term in the executive office, according to the list of names offered by the Nominating Committee yesterday and to be voted on at the coming meeting of the association in Philadelphia during January. Howard W. Perrin, the present incumbent, will not succeed himself, as has been the custom in the past wherein every President has served two terms.

Frederick S. Wheeler of Apawamis, President of the American Can Company, has been nominated as President by the committee, headed by Silas Strawn of Chicago. Dr. Walter S. Harbon of Washington and Sterling E. Edmunds of St. Louis are named as Vice Presidents. Howard F. Whitney, present Secretary, is nominated for the third successive year for that office. Mortimer M. Buckner of Garden City is the nominee for Treasurer.

That the old guard of the association is to keep complete control of the national golf body almost is assured from the officers selected. Mr. Wheeler long has been an officer of the association and was a member of the Executive Committee which voted the new amateur rule into existence and which caused the only outward insurgency in the history of the association.

The men chosen for positions on the Executive Committee are Frank E. Miller of Old Elm, J. F. Byers of Allegheny, Asa D. French of the Country Club of Brookline, W. P. Stewart of Audubon, New Orleans, and Thomas B. Payne of Atlanta. Each of these men has been aligned with the old guard and against the propaganda and publicity of the kind used by the Woodland Golf Club last year in its fight for reinstatement of Francis Ouimet to amateur standing.

The nominations made, local golfers aver, mean the continuation of the present amateur rule until after the war at least. Mr. Perrin repeatedly has said that he favored a less stringent rule, one which would contenance the playing of men engaged in the business of selling sporting goods, reversing the rule which at present bars Ouimet.

The Nominating Committee for 1919 is listed as David R. Forgan of Onwentsia, Cornelius J. Sullivan of Garden City, the nominee for President of the Metropolitan Golf Association; Alexander Britton of Chevy Chase, W. S. Gilkey of Mayfield, and Parker W. Whittemore of Myopia.

YALE FRESHMEN PREPARED.

Conclude Workouts for Annual Gridiron Game with Harvard.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 15.—The Yale freshman eleven today closed its preparation for the match Saturday with the Hartford 1921 eleven by scrimmaging half an hour with the Yale informals. The freshmen are badly battered by their strenuous match last Saturday with Andover, the entire back field being lame.

For the first time this season the informals have been able to defeat the freshmen, the absence of the regular 1921 back field turning the scale in favor of the upper classmen. Coach Arthur Brides of the freshmen said today that Yale's almost certain lineup against Harvard 1921 next Saturday would be as follows:

Two positions have been in doubt till today, when it was announced that Scully had left end from Ed Shevlin, cousin of the late Tom Shevlin, and that Jim Neville had been selected for quarter back, succeeding John Baker.

The Yale informals will entertain Trinity here Saturday in the only game the informals will play this season with a college rival. The informals had hard work to defeat Loomis Academy, a small preparatory school, 7 to 0, three weeks ago.

SAACKE DECIDES DUAL SWIM

De Witt Clinton High School's swimming team registered its second victory of the local scholastic season yesterday by defeating the High School of Commerce 32 to 21 in a dual meet at the West Sixtieth Street Interior Baths. Rudolph Saacke was the principal factor in the victory. He won the 50 and 100-yard swims and was second in the diving contest.

The first four events found the teams of both schools struggling along with the points almost equally divided, but in the closing two events, the plunge and 100-yard swim, Clinton swimmers finished first and second.

A meet was scheduled for the Fourth Avenue Baths, Brooklyn, between Erasmus Hall and New Utrecht, but when the full New Utrecht team failed to put in an appearance, the meet was forfeited to Erasmus.

Four Red Sox Report as Yeomen.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 15.—Four members of the Boston American baseball team reported for duty as yeomen at the Navy Yard today. Manager Jack Barry and Charles Shorten, the utility outfielder, were assigned to the office of Commander George G. Mitchell, head of the Naval Reserves for this district, and Michael McNally, another utility player, and Pitcher Ernest Shore were put to work in the Paymasters' department.

INDIANS TO MEET GIANTS IN SPRING

Cleveland Will Take Place of Detroit on Training Tour of South.

When the Giants finish their training season at Marlin next Spring they will make a tour of the South with the Cleveland Club of the American League, which will cover about two weeks and will begin at Dallas and end at Columbus. The clubs will travel on a special train on the trip, and Secretary Foster of the Giants announced yesterday that several cities have requested dates which could not be filled.

Last Spring the Giants made a tour of the South with the Detroit Tigers, and when the tour ended at Kansas City the Detroit Club practically consented to repeat the tour next season. There was considerable surprise among the New York officials when Detroit later announced that they would not play the series as they had promised. During the Giants-Detroit tour the rivalry between the two teams became so warm that it resulted in an engagement at fisticuffs between Ty Cobb and Charley Herzog.

This outburst of hostilities is said to be the cause of the Detroit Club's refusal to tour with the Giants again next year. It is understood that President Ban Johnson stepped in and advised the Detroit Club not to play the Giants, as it was feared that the old feud between Cobb and Herzog might break out into a flame again. Manager McGraw, and, in fact, all the New York players, maintain that Cobb was entirely to blame for the outbreak last season, but Cobb and the Detroit officials insist that the Giants tantalized the Georgia Peach to the breaking point. The blame for the upheaval has never been definitely settled.

When Detroit refused to stick to its agreement the Giants booked Cleveland for the tour. The clubs will open the trip in Dallas and will play in Houston, New Orleans, Birmingham, Chattanooga, Indianapolis, Louisville, and Columbus.

Henry Fabian, the groundkeeper of the Giants, will go to Texas soon after the first of the year and will get the Giants' camp in shape for the arrival of the players there late in February or early in March. There is much doubt about whether the major leagues will cut their seasons down to 140 games, and many of the clubs are going ahead with their Spring plans on the supposition that there will be no change in the 154-game schedule. The Cleveland Club will train at New Orleans.

MINORS WEATHER STORM.

New League Clouds Blow Over and Magnates Disperse.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 15.—Baseball magnates who have been here attending the annual sessions of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues scattered to their homes tonight following one of the most important sessions in the history of that organization.

When they gathered they were faced with proposals for the formation of a new league to be composed of clubs taken from the American Association and the International League and for a general realignment of minor league territories. Both of these proposals were defeated.

At the final session today Peoria, Ill., was selected as next year's meeting place. The National Board of Arbitration was continuing its work tonight, and expects to be able to hand down its decisions in about a hundred cases tomorrow.

YALE 'VARSITY CREW WINS.

Leads Second and Freshman Eights in Fall Regatta.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 15.—Yale's Fall rowing season closed today with a regatta in which three 'Varsity and four freshman crews competed. The first event showed the regular 'Varsity crew in rhythmic form as the result of the two months' coaching of Professor Mather Abbott. The eight led the second 'Varsity and the first freshman boat by a length in a mile brush. The second 'Varsity octet appeared likely to prove trouble makers till they ran aground on a mud flat.

The third 'Varsity eight defeated the second and third freshman crews in the second race by about a length. Till the last 100 yards the two freshman crews appeared distanced, but pluckily spurted at the finish.

The fourth freshman crew won from a combination crew in the third race. The combination cut down the length handicap given the 1921 oarsmen to a narrow quarter length in a hair-raising finish. No time was taken. The two latter races were over a three-quarter-mile course.

The regular 'Varsity makeup was as follows:

Evers Unconditionally Released.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 15.—Johnny Evers, the veteran second baseman, has been handed his unconditional release by the Phillies. President William H. Baker made the official announcement tonight over the telephone from New York. He said so far as he knew Evers had not settled plans for the future, but hoped to obtain a position with some team as manager.

COCHRAN DRAWS FAR AWAY.

The youthful Chicago billiard expert, Welker Cochran, so greatly increased his advantage over Leonard Howison last night in the 2,000-point 18.2 match which they are playing that the laurels are all but within his grasp. With his total now standing at 1,600, while that of his opponent is only 1,216, there is apparently nothing to stay his progress to victory.

To retrieve his fallen fortunes Howison will have to outplay Cochran nearly two to one in the final match of the series tonight. Last evening the score in favor of Cochran was 400 to 294, and for a time it appeared as if the contest would be even more one sided. In the thirteenth inning Howison gathered in a pretty cluster of 103 which brought his count up to a considerable total.

On the part of Cochran there was an exhibition of sparkling billiards. The Chicago player was in much better stroke, and the deftness of touch which he perfected while touring the country with Casignol was in pronounced evidence at all times. There was pretty nursing along the lines and confident gathering of the ivories in the open table work.

Cochran did not set sail for the standard of high caliber billiards until the fourth inning, when he garnered a count of 52. This was mainly the product of open table work, but it gave an inkling of the superior balk-line billiards which was to follow. In the succeeding inning Cochran clicked off 86 caroms and his average went soaring when he followed with another nicely executed run of 37.

Howison in the meantime could not get his stroke. His work was labored, and single figure counts were his only reward. It was not until the eleventh inning that Howison broke away from the spell of worse than mediocre playing. Then a run of 61 helped his score immensely, but Cochran was so far away in the lead that there was not a very encouraging outlook.

The Chicago player was a little careless in the latter innings of the match, and his average slipped downward, but Howison, even though he now brought into the fray his run of 103, never seriously threatened the lead of his rival. This run showed Howison at his best. He was stroking the ivories with more confidence as a result of his cluster of 61 two innings before, and held them under perfect control in a short-table game. The run terminated not because Howison lost the ivories, but because he failed to complete a carrom on a simple draw shot along the end rail when the balls were in perfect position for a continuation.

The score:

Cochran—13 1 0 52 86 37 0 32 51 26 12 13 5 3 42 0 1 24. Total, 400. Average, 22 4-18. High runs, 86, 52, and 51. Total for four nights' play, 1,600.

Howison—1 3 2 0 3 45 0 12 3 9 61 3 103 24 4 5 16. Total, 294. Average, 17 5-17. High runs, 103, 61, and 45. Total for four nights' play, 1,216.

What a pity — to live in the country these glorious autumnal days and be content with skeleton trees and denuded lawns, when you can have the rich beauty of Japanese Barberry, studded with red berries as a hedge-tapestry around your lawn or in wisely-set clumps near gateway or porch — all aglow to greet you on your home coming two days after you phone or write us to go ahead — 25c a bush (2 ft. high) $2 for ten — full-grown with the berries right on them! — Phone or write your order today.

INSURANCE MEN SEEK BAN ON TEUTON FIRMS

Appear at Treasury Department to Oppose Granting of Licenses to German Companies.

UNSAFE AND UNPATRIOTIC

Point to Quick Action by Britain and France and Complain Against Delay Here.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Opposition to granting licenses to enemy alien insurance companies to continue doing business in this country took form today in a special hearing before Assistant Secretary of the Treasury W. S. Rowe. A delegation of insurance agents and experts from various cities was present, for whom Richard M. Hurd, Chairman of the Trustees of the American Defense Society, as spokesman, made the following statement:

"As citizens of the United States and members of the American Defense Society, we oppose the granting of any licenses to do business in the United States to any enemy or ally of enemy fire insurance company for the reasons that such insurance is,

"First—Unsafe.

"A—President Wilson prohibited German marine insurance companies from writing risks in the United States owing to the fact that these companies obtained information regarding cargoes of ships and dates for sailing which facilitated the work of the German submarines in destroying American ships.

"It is still more important that German fire insurance companies should be prohibited from the United States because, whether doing a direct or a reinsurance business, such companies are members of national or State boards of underwriters, have access to the work of their engineers and inspectors and can send their own inspectors to make thorough inspections of any property on which they carry risks, including munition works, flour mills, storage warehouses of all kinds, docks, wire factories and, in fact, every type of factory or storehouse which contributes directly to the work of the United States in its war with Germany. Such information enables enemy aliens to know exactly the most advantageous points in a factory or storehouse at which to start fires or place bombs or turn off the sprinkler system, and the frequency of such fires and explosions and the efficiency with which they are carried out evidences the accurate inside information which these enemy aliens possess.

"B—It is also unsafe for the United States to permit income and profits to reach the hands of our enemy aliens, since they can there be used for disloyal purposes, not only the obtaining of information for spies and bombers, but also to finance the insidious German campaign of propaganda which is now so widespread in the United States.

"Germany's two weapons are now alarmingly clear to the world. First, her massing of troops to knock out one nation after the other; second, her campaign of propaganda designed to undermine the morale of a nation so successful in Russia and Italy and every day becoming more threatening in the United States. It is true that the larger part of the premiums paid to these German companies in America flows into the hands of trustees or State insurance authorities, and is held to cover the outstanding risks, but some 30 or 40 per cent. is held free to cover expenses, profits, &c.

"If it is argued that the operation of the German companies in this country cannot hurt us because money cannot be remitted to Germany, the answer is that the money can be used to help Germany better in this country than if it were remitted to Germany. If it is argued that the insurance written by enemy or ally of enemy companies is for the benefit of American citizens, the answer is that these companies are not philanthropic institutions. They are companies organized to make money, and they are doing business in America for profit and at a profit, and it is clearly not for the benefit of the American citizens to have our enemies make a profit from us. If it is argued that many American citizens, clerks, &c., would be thrown out of employment, the answer is that if they are not of draft age they can easily find situations, as there is a shortage of insurance clerks.

"Second—Unpatriotic.

"It needs no argument to demonstrate that while we are engaged in a life and death struggle with Germany, it is an unpatriotic act for any American citizen to accept fire insurance in any enemy or ally of enemy company, or for any American citizen to represent any such enemy company or to have any relations whatsoever with them. It is a fact that the American people are becoming awake to this situation and have canceled possibly two-thirds of the $3,500,000,000 of risks held Jan. 1, 1917, by enemy or ally of enemy insurance companies in the United States.

"The American fire insurance companies have cancelled all their reinsurance treaties with German companies, but a few American companies still have reinsurance treaties with Austrian or Bulgarian companies. If the United States Government should refuse to license German reinsurance companies, but should admit Austrian, Bulgarian, or Turkish companies, the German reinsurance would come to America through these sources.

"In France and England at the beginning of the European war, the German insurance companies were promptly ousted, and it is difficult to see why they have been suffered to continue so long in the United States. Obviously there is no argument permitting enemy or ally of enemy fire insurance companies to do business in this country which would not apply equally to banks, mercantile companies, manufacturers, or steamship companies of Germany or her allies.

"A very important consideration, in view of the worldwide campaign of German propaganda, is the sentimental effect of tolerating German companies in this country, which Germans can use and doubtless will use throughout the world as an argument that the people in the United States are not opposed to the Germans, do not dislike them, and are willing to do business with them, as is shown by their friendly support of German fire insurance companies in the United States, and that hence it may fairly be reasoned that America's war is a capitalist's war, instigated by the rich who desire to make a profit from munitions contracts and financing.

"As has been stated, the American people are just beginning to realize what it means to accept insurance policies with German companies, and it is only a question of time when this business will be eliminated by the action of the mass of the American people. It is highly desirable, however, that the United States Government back up this sentiment and expedite the ousting of the German companies by refusing them licenses. As evidence of public feeling we would refer to the letters already received by the Secretary of the Treasury on this subject from all parts of the United States and to additional letters, which we herewith tender.

"Third—Unsound.

"There are four direct-writing German insurance companies now operating in the United States and seven insurance companies of which four are German, one Austrian, and two Bulgarian. The statement of their assets and risks in the United States is as follows:

DIRECT WRITING COMPANIES.

Co. & Home Office.	Assets in U. S.	Risks in U. S.
Aachen and Munich Fire Ins. Co., Aix-la-Chappelle	$2,850,000	$264,972,000
Nord-Deutsch Ins. Co., Hamburg	1,201,000	129,280,000
Prussian Nat. Ins. Co., Stettin	2,420,000	225,294,000
Total	$8,373,000	$827,218,000
REINSURANCE COMPANIES.
Balkan Nat. Ins. Co., Sofia	$2,637,000	$261,494,000
Bulgaria First Nat. Ins. Co., Rustchuk	2,159,000	238,628,000
Cologne Reinsurance Co., Cologne	1,419,000	204,428,000
Frankona Reinsurance Co., Berlin	1,280,000	138,791,000
International Reassurance Co., Vienna	1,272,000	110,943,000
Munich Reinsurance Co., Munich	9,126,000	964,668,000
South German Reinsurance Co., Munich	1,515,000	111,872,000
Total	$19,398,000	$2,026,152,000

"From the above statement it appears that the eleven enemy and ally of enemy companies in the United States have assets of only $27,772,000, as against risks of $2,853,370,000, or less than 1 cent for each dollar of risk. The danger to American citizens holding policies in these German companies is that in case of a conflagration, which is an ever-present danger, these German companies would be bankrupted, and the policies would not be paid. It is obvious that no money can come from Germany to the United States to support these German companies, and judging by the experience in the San Francisco conflagration no money would come from Germany to enable the German companies to pay their legitimate American losses, even if Germany were able to send the money. As bearing on the moral hazard of the German fire insurance companies in this country, it is worth while noting that in the San Francisco conflagration the German companies distinguished themselves as welchers. The settlements of some of these companies were as follows:

"Nord-Deutsch, Rhone and Moselle, Austrian Phoenix, and Transatlantic denied liability; Hamburg, Bremen, and Prussian National paid 75 per cent., and the Aachen and Munich paid 75 per cent. and in a few cases higher.

"It may be argued that in case of a great conflagration many American companies would be bankrupt, but history has shown that American companies, first, have a sense of honor and value their business reputation, and, second, have a valuable annual premium income, and hence they could and would assess their stockholders for any money necessary to make good their losses.

"Germany is bankrupt, and German fire insurance companies, as far as their home funds go, are now either bankrupt or semi-bankrupt. The German fire insurance companies, which have been compelled by the German Government to sell their good securities and to take the bonds of the German Government in place thereof, must face a severe scaling or possibly an entire repudiation of these German Government bonds.

"Fourth—Unnecessary.

"Possibly the only argument which enemy or ally of enemy insurance companies can advance is that the protection of their underwriting capital is necessary to the United States. It is easy to prove that there is nothing in this argument since, as has been stated, not a single American fire insurance company has any reinsurance contracts with the German companies. In other words, the enemy reinsurance business is practically wiped out.

"As to the four direct writing German companies their premiums have amounted to about one per cent. of the total premium income in the United States and this is diminishing constantly and is now probably not over one-half of one per cent. The small balance of their business can be easily and gladly absorbed by the American companies in conjunction, if need be, with the English and French companies.

"The highest authorities in the insurance world bear testimony both by letters and by those present that there will not be the slightest difficulty on the part of the American companies in absorbing all the insurance shifted from the German companies. Among those who so testified are the largest fire insurance brokers in the United States, Messrs. Wilcox, Peck and Hughes, Messrs. Johnson and Higgins, Messrs. Marsh and McLellan, etc. Such an experienced expert in the insurance world as Mr. Henry Evans, President of The Continental Fire Insurance Co., expresses the same opinion. In other words, both the insurance brokers and the insurance companies stand ready to handle all the insurance business offered to them.

"We submit that we have demonstrated that it would be unsafe, unpatriotic, unsound and unnecessary to license enemy or ally of enemy fire insurance companies to operate in the United States and we respectfully request that such licenses be refused."

Evening Wraps Much in Vogue.

Evening wraps are said to have had a particularly good season this Fall, both here and in other sections of the country. The Chinese mandarin coat seems to have exerted a strong influence on styles this year, and other oriental designs also have been unusually popular. Solid colors, however, have not been neglected, and a wide variety of rather startling shades have been sold. The fabrics most favored are said to be velvets, satins and taffetas, the silk weaves being used mostly in the oriental designs and effects.

Sweater Buying Improves.

After a period of inactivity which lasted two or three weeks, sweaters for women are again attracting attention in the local department stores. The slip-over type seems to be pretty high in favor, particularly with women from out of town, though the coat sweater also is said to be fairly well taken. The most popular garments, it is said, are those of solid colors in the brighter shades with white sailor collars and cuffs. Where the slip-over type is taken, the pearled waist is almost invariably favored. Prospects for the holiday trade in these lines are said to be good, and a new high mark is expected in sales records.

Convertible Frocks Selling.

As a direct result of the war, and of the economies which it necessitates, dresses which are convertible and may thus serve two or three distinctly different purposes have been developed by ingenious local designers. They are said to be getting a very good reception wherever they are shown. One of the local department stores offers a particularly attractive assortment of convertible frocks combining tea and evening gown in a clever arrangement of materials which defies detection of its dual purpose. There are others of the three in one type (for morning, afternoon and evening) which are also proving very popular.

Elaborate Gowns Not So Popular.

The prediction made by several of Fifth Avenue's leading dressmakers earlier in the year that this Winter would see as many elaborate evening gowns as ever, does not seem to be materializing. Reports from the trade would indicate that, while sales have been fair, they have not been up to the mark reached last year. The trend, apparently, is toward semi-formal and less elaborate frocks for evening wear, though as yet it is said not to be so pronounced as to make the full dress gown a back number. In those that are sold, velvet seems to be the most popular fabric, with satin a close second. Black predominates, though some brilliant shades and color combinations are in demand. There has been a fairly wide variety of styles this Fall, permitting women much originality in dress and giving them ample opportunity to cater to their individual personalities.

Plaids Lead Dress Goods Demand.

Plaids are far and away the leaders in the current business being done by the dress goods wholesalers. There appears to be no fabric that stands out strongly enough to be given second place, for the demand that is now in evidence is quite widely spread through the other cloths that are offered for the Fall season. Advance orders for Spring that are being received from men now on the road with the new season's lines continue to run well ahead of last year's from a monetary point of view. In some cases, however, the aggregate yardage of goods now under order for Spring delivery is not as large as was the case at this time in 1916.

Shows a Novel Riding Habit.

In keeping with the annual Horse Show at Madison Square Garden one of the Fifth Avenue shops is exhibiting a novel riding habit. Both the jacket and the "knickers" of this habit are of white broadcloth, with cap to match. The jacket, which is cut quite flaring below the waistline, is designed along strongly accentuated military lines, and is finished off with brass buttons of a martial type. It also has two breast pockets, after the manner of military jackets, while the side pockets are of the "patch" order and large. The riding boots are of white kid.

For Winter Resort Wear.

For resort wear this Winter the millinery manufacturers are using, for the most part, silks of various kinds, many of which show Japanese designs. Many soft straw bodies are also shown. Many of these hats are made up in large shapes, some in soft effects with parasols, bag, and neckpiece to match. These are the shades that will dominate in the showing of Milan hemp goods for the regular Spring season: Mouse, ochre, squill, blue, oasis, reseda, peacock, digitalis, Egyptian, hydrangea, and American Beauty.

Coarse Cottons Had a Good Day.

Coarse cotton goods in the gray had a good day here yesterday, sales embracing quite good sized quantities of both drills and sheetings. In the business on the former were included January delivery sales of 3.25-yard goods at 16¼ cents, this being about the most noticeable thing done in these cloths. January-February deliveries of four-yard 56-60 sheetings were sold at 13¾ cents, and some houses are now asking 14 cents for them. Four-yard, 48-squares brought 13¼ cents for spots, as well as for December and January in certain quarters. For five-yard sheetings, for shipments running through the remainder of this month and next, 11 cents was paid. Large sales of all widths of sateens and twills were again put through in spite of the steady rise in prices on these goods.

Printcloths Sell Freely Here.

Active buying of printcloths was one of the features of the local gray goods market yesterday. With many houses holding for at least 11⅛ cents for spot 38½-inch 64-60s, January - February goods of this construction were sold at 11 cents. For November-December shipments of 64-56s in that width 10¾ cents was paid, while for delivery in February and March the same goods brought 10½ cents. Spot 38½-inch 60-48s brought 9¼ cents again, with some sellers declining 9⅜ cents for January-February lots. January-March deliveries of 38½-inch 44-40s moved at 7¾ cents, and some houses declined bids of 7 cents for January 27-inch 56-52s. March 39-inch 68-72s sold at 12¼ cents. Spot printcloth prices closed this way:

SUES CITY FOR $600,000.

State Seeks to Recover 20 Years' Accumulation of Escheated Estates.

ALBANY, Nov. 15.—Litigation designed to compel New York City to pay into the State Treasury $600,000, representing the escheated estates of persons who died without next of kin in the city during the last seventy-seven years, was instituted today by Attorney General Merton E. Lewis. This fund is made up of about 33,000 small estates for which no claim has been made in twenty years. Demand for the transfer of this money was made last year, but the New York City officials declined to comply.

The action begun by the Attorney General is predicated upon the theory that the State is the ultimate owner of all personal property in cases where there are no next of kin and upon the provisions of the State finance law, which directs the payment of the city into the State Treasury of funds unclaimed for twenty years.

City Chamberlain Milo R. Maltbie, who is named as defendant in the suit filed in Albany County, said last night that the action has been brought to obtain a ruling as to whether these funds should continue to remain in the hands of the City Chamberlain awaiting claimants indefinitely or should be turned over to the State under legal authority now.

"The city makes no claim for these funds," said Chamberlain Maltbie, "and the refusal of the city authorities to turn over the funds when demand for them was made last year was due to a ruling by the Corporation Counsel that the city should not give them up without a court order directing the Chamberlain to do so. The question as to how long these unclaimed funds should remain on deposit before being taken over by the State has never been determined. The fund is invested according to the provisions of the law safeguarding all funds deposited with the City Chamberlain, and owing to the interest rate received the amount is increasing rapidly."

BUSINESS NOTES.

In a notice on Tuesday of the Exhibition of American Art Designs for Silk Fabrics the prices were quoted in error as ranging from $25 to $50 each. They should have read "from $25 to $75 each."

Representatives of various millinery associations have agreed on the formation of a national trade body. Further plans will be discussed at a dinner on Dec. 4 in the Hotel McAlpin. Under the new plan each association will retain its identity.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stock Transactions the Smallest in a Long Period — No Limitations on Sales.

It would be interesting to know what direct relation, if any there was, between the extension of the Stock Exchange's ruling requiring the furnishing of figures as to the amount of short selling to include that done by floor traders and the marked contraction in activity yesterday. The sales were the smallest in several weeks, and substantially less than transactions on the previous day. As a matter of fact, the market has given plain indications of approaching dullness with the cessation of liquidation and the continued aloofness of investment buyers. Price changes were highly irregular, although the active issues gave an impression of strength in direct contrast to the tendency shown by many of the inactive stocks. The list was featured by strength in the shipping shares credited to the surprisingly good showing made in the British Government's weekly report of losses.

A remarkable demonstration of the efficiency of the Federal Reserve system in doing away with difficulties that formerly attended a period of heavy transfers of cash was given yesterday in the handling of the 18 per cent. payment on the Liberty Loan without any signs of disturbance in the money market. Preparations which had been made for facilitating this huge payment with the least possible shifting of cash were eminently successful, so much so that the installment of perhaps $700,000,000, which fell due at this centre, was settled without upsetting the 4 per cent. rate for call loans which has prevailed for some time past. It is true that the banks' money committee came to the aid of the brokers by putting out $27,000,000, but the arrangements under which a large part of the payment for the 4 per cent. bonds was effected by the transfers of credits on the books of the depositories proved well nigh perfect. Both issues of the Government's war loans were again very active on the Stock Exchange, with the 3½s selling slightly above their previous close. The 4s declined at one time to 99.24, and ended the session at 99.50, off .20.

So far as can be learned, the Committee on Business Conduct of the Stock Exchange has taken no action, as yet, based on the reports made to it of stocks borrowed by members. It was assumed yesterday that the supervision of floor traders would result in an immediate curtailment of their activities if the volume of professional selling proved large enough to be considered a factor in bringing about heavy declines. The authorities have placed no restrictions of any kind upon short selling, although their demand for information concerning its extent carried the plain intimation that safeguards would be imposed whenever the situation warranted them. The facts brought out by the committee's inspection of brokers' accounts have not been made known, outside of the Governing Committee, although there is a feeling in some quarters that the public has a right to know what proportion of the transactions reported on the ticker arise through short selling. To some extent the figures of stocks borrowed are misleading as showing the extent of such dealings, since it is a common practice of firms to borrow stocks to be used as collateral in securing loans at the low rates obtainable in the call market.

BETTER TONE IN LONDON.

War News Is Regarded as More Satisfactory.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—The stock market had a better tone today, as dealers regarded the news as more satisfactory. Gilt edged securities showed little change, but Scandinavian, Russian and French bonds were firmer, and shipping shares were strong and active features. Several industrials and iron and steel stocks received increased attention, but mines and other speculative issues were dull.

Money was in increased demand, and discount rates were quiet.

Trading Quiet on Paris Bourse.

Oil Companies Plan Merger.

It is understood that plans are being matured for the merger of the Osage-Hominy Oil Company and the Oklahoma Producing and Refining Company. The latter company already owns a controlling interest in Osage-Hominy, and President Crawford has sent out a letter to the stockholders of both, describing the plan whereby stock in the Osage-Hominy Company will be exchanged for that of the Oklahoma Producing and Refining Company, share for share, certificates to be deposited at the Bankers Trust Company on or before Dec. 14.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

City Bonds Recede.

New York City bonds on the Stock Exchange displayed unusual weakness yesterday under small transactions. The 4s of 1957 declined 1½ points to 90, and the 4½s of 1963 receded ⅜ to 99¼. These issues have been retreating of late, with the movement more marked since Election Day than before. This fact has given rise to the supposition that the impending change of the city administration has influenced investors to let go some of their bonds. At the same time, the decline has been in keeping with the course of other high grade funded issues whose movement is believed to represent in large part the rising cost of credit.

Broader Market for Liberty Bonds.

It is believed that as soon as the Treasury completes the delivery of bonds of the first and second Liberty Loans a broader market will develop in these securities. Considering the large amount of the issues, trading on the Exchange has thus far been relatively small. Last week the total sales of the 3½s, of an authorized issue of $2,000,000,000, amounted to only a little more than $6,500,000; and the aggregate sales of the 4s for the fifteen days since trading began totals only $8,653,000. Of course, in the case of the new 4s transactions have been limited to the cash bonds of which there are outstanding probably not more than $100,000,000. Deliveries of the bonds will begin tomorrow, and as the work of distribution advances there will, no doubt, develop greater activity in these issues.

Those Marine Stocks.

Shipping shares continue to furnish their share of fireworks in the market. Marine preferred, after selling down to 89⅜—a point and three-quarters above the total value of its back dividend—took a fresh grip and climbed up in the last hour to 93⅜, while Atlantic, Gulf and West Indies advanced from 94¾ to 97¼ in barely two or three jumps. American International at the same time gained 5⅛ points, rising to 55⅛, this stock's movement apparently reflecting the general belief that this corporation has large holdings in both the big shipping companies. As to the plan to pay off the back dividend in Marine preferred, reports that it had been abandoned were, as was expected by the best informed, officially denied. It was stated that the special committee which had the matter in charge was still at work, although proceeding slowly because of various complications, legal and otherwise, and had not yet reported.

Not in Violation of Sherman Law.

Thomas B. Paton, general counsel of the American Bankers' Association, in response to a request, has rendered an opinion that the campaign designed to induce various trade associations to pass resolutions recommending to their members to substitute trade acceptances for open book accounts is not in contravention of the Sherman Anti-Trust law. After examining the text of the resolution that associations will be asked to adopt, Mr. Paton said: "The substitution of trade acceptances for open accounts and the establishment of uniform and better terms of credit where goods are paid for with trade acceptances would, in my opinion, tend to promote rather than restrain interstate trade, and the result would be beneficial; but even were the contrary true, the effect of such an organized effort for change of methods would only have an indirect bearing upon interstate trade and commerce would not, in any event, be in violation of the act."

Utah Shareholders Startled.

The drop of more than 3 points in Utah Copper, with a subsequent recovery of more than half the fall, attracted considerable attention because of the unexpectedness of the movements. In trading gossip the quarterly report of the company was blamed for the decline. In the form it first appeared on the news tickers it was startling to many holders of the stock, as in place of a substantial balance after dividends a deficit of $3,663,000 was disclosed. Later study of the report indicated that the deficit could be looked at from two angles. The company's bookkeeping considered only actual earnings from copper sold and an arbitrary value for copper on hand when the quarter ended. The value of the unsold metal being placed at a much lower figure than the value of the copper disposed of, the result was a sharp setback from what stock-owners had looked for. If the entire production had been sold at the fixed price of 23½ cents, the gross income for the quarter would have been more than $5,000,000 larger than it was.

Copper Output Sold to Jan. 1.

The Utah Company's third quarter production has been sold since the period ended, according to the statement. The other porphyry companies report that their metal also has been contracted for to the end of the year. The apparent setback in the three months ended Sept. 30 will, therefore, be offset in the current quarter. The result of the year will be the same as though each quarter's production had been sold as rapidly as produced. Utah, Chino, Ray and Nevada all carry their unsold metal at 13½ cents a pound. As Utah calculated earnings on a basis of 14 cents a pound, compared with nearly 28 cents in the preceding quarter, the natural inference was that the company had disposed of comparatively little of its production from July 1 to Sept. 30.

The Submarine Failure.

It was remarkable yesterday to see the cheering effect throughout the financial district of the British Government's best submarine report. Not merely in shipping circles, but on the cotton market, which was already cheerful over the huge domestic consumption and the easier shipping situation caused by the release of neutral tonnage; on the Produce Exchange—everywhere, in fact, people seemed to be calling to one another's attention that the Germans had only been able to sink one sizable ship in a whole week. It seemed fairly evident that neither Russia nor Italy was comparable in importance with the submarine campaign, at least in American eyes.

SHORT SALES CURB POTENT.

New Rule Apparently Cuts Trading to 354,000 Shares.

Governors of the Stock Exchange said yesterday that the rule passed on Wednesday requiring that the names of short sellers who covered their sales without borrowing stock be reported to the Committee on Business Conduct apparently had a marked effect on the volume of business. The turnover of approximately 354,000 shares was the smallest for any business day, except Saturdays, since Aug. 27. On Wednesday the sales aggregated 394,000 shares.

While the Governors are not willing to make public the amount of short selling which is done daily, nor the sources from which the selling comes, it was believed that the decline in business represented curtailed operations among floor traders. The resolution of Wednesday was directed particularly to the end that the transactions of members who act chiefly for their own account be recorded with their names.

ADAMS EXPRESS DIVIDEND.

The Adams Express Company has declared a quarterly dividend of $1 from accumulated surplus, payable Dec. 1 to shareholders of record Nov. 19. This compares with the regular quarterly dividend of $1.50 declared three months ago. A statement of the company's recent earnings shows a deficit for the last seven months, and that accounts for the reduction in the dividend.

Directors of the Hocking Valley Railroad declared yesterday a dividend of 3½ per cent., an increase of 1½ per cent. over the last disbursement made six months ago.

Readjustment of Security Prices

The tremendous demand for capital by all the great nations, and the economic conditions created by the war, have made the markets for securities abnormal. Investors who are able to take advantage of present-day prices, can get intrinsically better investments than they could a year ago, and also far better interest returns.

PROFITS FOR COPPER SHOW BIG DECREASE

Porphyry Companies Feel Effect of Negotiations Over Government Needs.

SALES GREATLY REDUCED

Utah Profits Drop $7,859,406, Chino $2,773,798, and Ray $2,992,897 in the Quarter.

The quarterly reports of the Utah, Chino, and Ray Consolidated Copper Companies yesterday showed the radical effect which negotiations over the future requirements of the United States Government and the other Allies had upon copper buying in the three months ended Sept. 30. The figures indicated that comparatively small quantities were sold during the period, as the producers were not able to accept domestic contracts until the extent of war buying had been determined. At the same time the task of setting a fixed price for copper kept the market unsettled.

The Utah Company reported net profits of $1,030,222 from sales of the metal, against $8,898,628 in the June quarter and $10,283,878 in the September quarter last year. Income from investments and miscellaneous sources added slightly more than $1,800,000 to the operating income, making the total available for dividends $2,832,225, a decline of $7,729,316 from the preceding quater and of $9,215,235 from the corresponding period in 1916. As $6,497,960 was disbursed in dividends, the quarter brought a deficit of $3,665,735, compared with a surplus of $7,175,990 a year before.

The statement issued by the company showed that earnings had been based on a price of 14.030 cents a pound, against 27.977 cents in the previous quarter. The reason for the large difference was explained as follows:

Unsold copper on hand and in transit is, according to established custom, carried in our inventory at 13½ cents a pound. This is the first quarter for over a year in which there has been any substantial increase in the quantity of copper available for delivery and unsold. This accumulation of unsold copper which is inventoried at 13½ cents a pound is responsible for the low average carrying price shown for the quarter, and, taken together with increased operating expenses, accounts for the decrease in calculated earnings. The increase of unsold copper is due to the fact that during this particular quarter negotiations between copper producers and the United States Government were in progress to determine upon future handling of copper sales, and, as a result, sales at definite prices were practically suspended, not only to the Government, but to other users. Since the end of the quarter, the price having been fixed by the Government at 23½ cents, the Government committee is daily placing contracts with various producers, and your management is advised by its sales agent that all copper due for delivery to the end of the year has been sold, and therefore the unsold copper appearing in this report is a purely temporary condition. Earnings for the fourth quarter will therefore show in addition to those arising from production of that quarter the profit from sales at 23½ cents of the unsold copper carried in this quarter at 13½ cents.

Gross production amounted to 54,999,468 pounds, against 56,845,059 pounds in the June quarter. The average cost per pound was 10.860 cents, an increase of 1.369 cents for the quarter. Increased State and Federal taxes accounted for part of the advance, although the report stated that reservation had not been made for the new war taxes.

The Chino Company's total profit was $1,044,524, a decrease of $2,773,798 from the preceding quarter and of $2,400,767 from the September quarter last year. The deficit was $1,478,417 after dividends were paid, compared with a surplus of $1,643,372 in the quarter before. Earnings were based on a price of 17.14 cents a pound, against 27.86 cents in the June period, production being 21,887,390 pounds, against 20,546,593 pounds. The higher selling price indicated that the company disposed of more of its output comparatively than did the Utah, as its unsold metal was also carried at 13½ cents a pound.

The Ray Consolidated had net profits of $687,001, against $3,679,898 in the June period and $3,299,400 in the September quarter last year. The deficit was $1,205,613, in contrast with a surplus of $2,102,719 the quarter before and of $2,116,516 a year before. The company produced 22,972,156 pounds of copper, against 23,532,119 pounds in the June quarter.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

Samuel Weiss was elected to membership on the New York Stock Exchange yesterday. At the same meeting of the committee Jacques Weinberger was authorized to act as a substitute for Stuart Waller. Application was made for permission for J. S. Ferguson to substitute for H. F. Benjamin.

Henry P. Bird, for six years chief clerk of Gude, Winmill & Co., has been admitted to general partnership in that firm.

At the annual meeting of stockholders of the Seaboard Air Line Railway held yesterday in Petersburg, Va., no change was made in the Board of Directors excepting the election of Pierpont V. Davis as successor to W. A. Kinsman.

WHY STOCKS ARE FALLING.

No Purchasing Power in Market, Francis H. Sisson Says.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 15.—The present depression in securities and the falling stock market are due to three factors, according to Francis H. Sisson, Vice President of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, who delivered an address tonight before the Buffalo Association of Credit Men on "Guarding the Nation's Credit."

"The simple fact of the situation is that there is no purchasing power in the market to stay the downward trend," said Mr. Sisson. "That lack is caused, first, by governmental competition; second, by private needs, and third, by uncertainty as to future developments. These causes are all entirely outside the possibility of any one, or of any group, to control.

"The bankers of New York have done their utmost to stay this tide, but without great effect, for the very simple reason that neither they nor any other group can stay the operation of economic laws or alter the effects arising from causes which they cannot control. They have done all in their power to help maintain and stabilize values, and their splendid work in floating the second Liberty Loan certainly speaks for itself."

Mr. Sisson said that the value of railroad stocks had declined $1,000,000,000 in six months and that railway bonds had depreciated $1,000,000,000 in ten months.

NEW COTTON RECORD

Prices Reach Highest Point for Season in Day of Active Trading.

The local cotton market yesterday continued the process of adjusting itself to the conditions so unexpectedly revealed by the huge consumption report of Wednesday, and in a day of very active trading prices went steadily forward, once more making new high records for the season in all the active months. It was evident that the huge domestic consumption had discounted the fears of diminished foreign buying due to the lack of freight space, and the market was much broader than has recently been the case. The short interest has been apparently pretty thoroughly squeezed out in the last two days, and realizing at the close brought a little irregularity, the net advance for the day ranging from 18 to 41 points.

The report on vessels sunk by submarines for the last week encouraged a more hopeful view of export possibilities, which doubtless contributed to the advance. It seemed, also, that overnight consideration of the Census figures on domestic mill consumption had strengthened the bullish view of this country's requirements, and the buying was encouraged by the continued bullish averages of Southern spot advices. Uncertainty as to the showing of the Census ginning report next week doubtless promoted a tendency to take profits on the advances, particularly after a rumor reached the ring that preliminary returns to the National Ginners' Association indicated a ginning of 1,390,000 bales for the last period. On the whole, however, local brokers said that offerings were very readily absorbed, and that the market made a very steady showing considering the extent of recent advances. After opening 1 to 15 points higher, active months soon sold 20 to 49 points above Wednesday's closing figures. Reactions of 20 to 30 points followed, but the market developed renewed firmness during the afternoon, with near months making new high ground, while later deliveries fully recovered their losses. The close was a few points off from the best under realizing.

The rumored ginning of 1,390,000 bales between Nov. 1 and 14 was at first compared with last year's returns of 991,000 bales for the same period. Later the disposition was to compare with returns for 1915, when 1,392,000 bales were ginned for that period, with the total on Nov. 14 representing 79.2 per cent. of the season's outturn. Exports for the day were 11,547 bales, making 1,425,772 so far this season, according to the figures of the New York Cotton Exchange. Southern spot markets, as officially reported, were unchanged to 25 points higher, the feature being the large business reported at Houston. The price there was unchanged at 28c for middling, with sales reported of 11,754 bales.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

Domestic receipts of wheat were again smaller, but the fact that Northwestern mills are running at record capacity shows that they are getting all the wheat they need and less is heard regarding dissatisfaction over the distribution. Crop advices from Argentina, India, and Australia were very favorable. The official French report, however, indicated a yield of only 144,000,000 bushels, compared with 208,000,000 last year and a normal yield of 320,000,000. A sharp advance occurred in the Buenos Aires market owing to reports of crop damage in Argentina by recent frost.

RYE.—Market barely steady; No. 2 Western, $1.87½, cost and freight, New York.

CORN.

The attitude of the Food Administration in regard to speculation and high prices continues to be a barrier to bullish operations in corn. Traders are inclined to be very cautious on the buying side, regardless of what they think in regard to the merits of the supply and demand situation, and prices yesterday were easy, closing net unchanged to ½c lower. In the local cash market prices were still very irregular; new yellow being quoted at $1.65 to $2 and No. 3 mixed at $1.53¾, cost and freight, to arrive.

OATS.

The market for oats was slightly easier in sympathy with corn and owing to light country offers and smaller receipts. Export sales were placed at about 300,000 bushels, but it was said that exporters were showing more hesitation about making purchases owing to the recent advance in prices. The local cash market was firm. Standard quoted at 72@72½c; No. 2 white, 72¾c; No. 3 white, 71½@72c; No. 4 white, 71@71½c; fancy clipped white, 73@74c; ordinary clipped white, 72½@73c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The provision list was again irregular, but after showing some early decline on a lower opening in the hog market, prices rallied and closed about steady. Packing interests were credited with buying, and offers were light. Reports that the Food Administration will recommend stabilizing the hog market at 16c minimum, and that there is little chance of lower prices on account of a scarcity of hogs, had a tendency to sustain values. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 30,000 head; estimated for Friday, 25,000 head; Kansas City received 5,000 head and Omaha 5,600 head.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The market for cottonseed oil was extremely dull, total sales amounting to only 700 barrels. There was a little early selling for Western account, but interest in the market was very limited, and as a result final prices were practically unchanged from those of Wednesday. Crude oil was about steady, with some bids reported on the basis of $1.25. Range of prices:

COFFEE.

A cable received from Brazil by the New York Coffee Exchange yesterday said that reports on clearances and shipments had been officially suppressed, presumably for the duration of the war. The daily reports on stocks will be based on receipts and shipments, and will consequently afford a basis for probably accurate estimate of the clearances, but the trade here will naturally be left without foundation as to the proposed destination of the coffee. This news may have had a somewhat unsettling effect on sentiment around the ring, while the trade still seems to be more or less confused over the question of ocean freights, and after an early decline prices rallied on covering. The close was net 1 point higher to 2 points lower. The local spot market was quiet and unchanged at 7¾c for Rio 7s and 9½c for Santos 4s. Range of prices:

SUGAR.

The local market for raw sugar was steady and unchanged at 5⅛c for Cubas, cost and freight, equal to 6.90c for centrifugal, and 6.02c for molasses. There were no sales reported, although it was rumored that there might have been some more Cubas sold to the committee at the prevailing price of 5⅛c, cost and freight. Yesterday's business totaled about 5,000 tons of various grades to the committee, which will be allotted to the various refiners.

In refined prices remained unchanged at 8.35c for fine granulated, with only two refiners in the market at all, and these taking only limited orders. The Refiners' Committee was still busy allotting the recently acquired sugars.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER—Receipts yesterday, 5,690 packages. Continued shortage of fine and fancy fresh creamery and prices for these grades were further advanced with a firm feeling at the close. Medium and prime grades still in considerable accumulation and pressed for sale at irregular prices. Renovated neglected. Ladles still very dull and easy and packing stock is hard to sell. Creamery, higher than extras, per lb., 45½@46c; extras, (92 score,) 45c; firsts, (88 to 91 score,) 42@44½c; seconds, (83 to 87 score,) 40@41½c; thirds, 38@39c; Creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 46½@47c; extras, 45¼@46c; firsts, 43@45c; seconds, 41@42½c; Creamery, held, higher scoring than extras, 43@43½c; extras, 42@42½c; firsts, 40¼@41¾c; seconds, 39½@40½c; thirds, 38@39c; State, dairy, tubs, finest, 43@44c; good to prime, 40½@42½c; common to fair, 35@40c; Renovated, extras, 41c; firsts, 39½@40c; lower grades, [illegible]c; Ladles, current make, firsts, 33½@34½c; seconds, 33c; lower grades, 22@32½c; Packing stock, current make, No. 1, 33@33½c; No. 2, 32@32½c; lower grades, 30@31½c.

EGGS.—Receipts, 6,435 cases, not including 500 cases in transit for export. The scarcity of new laid qualities continues, and any lots of fresh gathered stock showing a good to large proportion of such are commanding extreme prices. The offerings are still of very irregular quality and widely ranging value, according to the proportions of the different qualities contained. Storage eggs are lower, unsettled, and irregular, with values not clearly defined. Some holders are refusing to sell at the reduction quoted, others are pushing goods on the market, and the demand is comparatively light. Nearby eggs continue scarce. Fancy qualities rule firm, but very few such are fine enough to reach our top quotations. Fresh gathered extras, per dozen, 54@55c; extra firsts, 52@53c; firsts, 48@51c; seconds, 42@46c; thirds and poorer, 36@40c; fresh gathered dirties, No. 1, 34@35c; No. 2 and poorer, 28@33c; fresh gathered checks, good to choice, dry, 32@33c; undergrades, 25@31c; refrigerator, special marks, fancy, storage and insurance paid, 34¼@35c; firsts, storage and insurance paid, 32@34c; seconds, storage and insurance paid, 31½@32½c; lower grades, storage and insurance paid, 28@31c; refrigerator, nearby whites, 40@44c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 75@80c; ordinary to good, 60@72c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 58@75c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby whites, pullets, 52@60c; Western and Southern, gathered whites, 52@65c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby hennery browns, 55@61c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 46@55c.

"Eyes Front"

The Second Liberty Loan has been a great success. In looking back on the strenuous campaign which was waged to accomplish this unprecedented piece of work it is difficult to recall just how despondent we all were at one stage of the fight.

Success itself is a great stimulus and the wonderful results, surpassing as they did the maximum predictions and expectations, are enough to banish the blues. A feeling of confidence has supplanted that of despondency. But the successful conclusion of the campaign has a deeper significance of optimism than that which causes the natural exhilaration of the moment.

The first loan represented somewhat more than the total amount of free investment capital. The bonds were taken by those who had the money in hand or who could sell securities to raise the amount of their subscription. The result was liquidation of some proportions.

But we are learning by experience. We reasoned that if the raising of $2,000,000,000 had caused liquidation the raising of $4,000,000,000 would cause twice as much liquidation. We knew if that were so, we could never finance the war. But we felt that we could and would finance it. The campaign for the Second Loan has been one of education, and one thing we have been taught is that if we cannot borrow outside of our national boundaries we can at least borrow within them. We have learned that our sound cash position is more than just that—it is the basis for a large amount of credit, which will have no limit save what we wish to make it.

Realizing to what an extent this expansion of credit may be carried, we can look forward to the loans which are to come with a confidence we could not feel before.

Having met this obstacle and believing as we do that there is nothing more to raising loans than "going the limit," we can and will turn our attention to other matters. Our eyes will be open to things which have not been seen because we have been looking in the other direction.

We shall see in the first place that the full measure of financial support of our Government will include the backing with our money of those industries on which the Government must depend for its supplies—transportation, farming, mining and manufacture.

We shall see that while our security markets were undergoing heavy liquidation, our industries were, as a class, in an unusually sound condition.

We shall realize that the industry of the country has not as yet begun to feel the effects of the money which is being spent and which will be spent to stimulate a production which will exceed anything we have ever known.

We shall realize that our individual experience in the matter of saving and our surprise at the amount we find it possible to save is shared by an ever widening circle; and in the contemplation of what the lesson of Thrift will mean for us as a nation, we find ourselves lost in the realms of imagination.

The knowledge of a big task well done—the sense of team work—of co-operation between government and business—the realization of the extent and value of our resources—these and the lesson of Thrift will give us the will, the heart, and the self-confidence with which to work miracles.

Let us then resume our normal tasks with the determination to keep our eyes to the front—to work cheerfully, to save splendidly, to the end that our country's undertaking may be carried out efficiently, expeditiously and successfully.

STANDARD OIL ELECTS W. C. TEAGLE PRESIDENT

A. C. Bedford Made Chairman of the Board—Successor Not Yet 40 Years Old.

The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, the largest oil company in the United States, yesterday acquired a new President, who has not yet reached his fortieth birthday, in Walter Clark Teagle. Mr. Teagle was chosen by the Board of Directors to succeed A. C. Bedford, who was elected Chairman of the board. Mr. Teagle also succeeds H. M. Tilford as Director, the latter having resigned. The change, it is understood, was necessitated by the pressure on Mr. Bedford of his duties as Chairman of the Petroleum Committee of the Council of National Defense, which compel him to spend most of his time in Washington for the present.

The new arrangement will be analogous to that of the United States Steel Corporation, Mr. Bedford, like Judge Gary, as Chairman of the board, being the executive head of the company and in general charge, while Mr. Teagle, as President, like Mr. Farrell, will remove much of the burden of detail from the Chairman's shoulders and have direct charge of operations. Mr. Bedford will thus be enabled to devote his energies to the work with the Council of National Defense.

Mr. Teagle was born May 1, 1878, in Cleveland. His father was a member of the oil firm of Scofield, Schurmer & Teagle, his mother was a daughter of Morris B. Clark, the first partner of John D. Rockefeller, and he himself has been in the oil business virtually all his life, most of his career with the Standard.

Mr. Teagle was graduated from Cornell with the degree of bachelor of science. After leaving college he received his business training with the oil firm of Scofield, Schurmer & Teagle, gaining a thorough knowledge of the various details of the business, and in 1900, when this firm, with others, was merged into the Republic Oil Company, he was elected Vice President of that company.

After remaining the active manager of the Republic company for about three years, Mr. Teagle accepted a position in the Standard Oil Company's export department in New York and was placed in charge of the marketing of the Standard's products in certain foreign countries and in the carrying out of this work the greater part of his time was spent abroad. Eventually he became the head of the Standard's export department. In 1910, Mr. Teagle was elected a Director of the company and later became one of its Vice Presidents, resigning this office in 1913 to accept the Presidency of the Imperial Oil Company, Limited. He has also been President of the International Petroleum Company since its formation in 1915.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

The volume of trading on the Consolidated Stock Exchange was little more than half the total transactions of Wednesday. The lack of definite advices as to Russia and other critical features of the international situation combined to reduce trading and to narrow the market. Very much of the business was professional and, except in the last hour, when strength appeared and prices moved upward in an orderly fashion, the market did little more than seesaw.

Incapacity and independence go just about as well double as single, but with patience, perseverance and a good coach may develop into an undespised four-in-hand in the STABILITY of securities found in the list of standard dividend payers.

Judge and judging, single and double are requisite virtues in the selection of investment securities. The broker with whom your executions are to be entrusted should add to the success of your undertaking. If you are in the SHOW-me class, your inquiry will receive prompt attention.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

Property owners and real estate brokers will be interested in the action taken by the Real Estate Board, yesterday, to increase brokerage commissions on sales in Manhattan, the Bronx and Brooklyn.

At a meeting of the joint committee of the Board of Governors and the committee on ethics and commissions held in the board rooms, the step was taken whereby commissions for the sale and exchange of property are changed from the customary rate of 1 per cent. to a rate of 2½ per cent. on all sales up to $40,000, and 1 per cent. on sums above that amount.

The rate adopted is similar to that prevailing in Pittsburgh, Chicago and other large cities and is expected to stimulate brokers to become more energetic in the sales branch of the business. It will apply to contracts executed after January 1, 1918.

Renting commissions now in force will not be changed, the Board voting not to alter the existing rates.

Warehouse Section Project.

Baker & Williams, warehousemen, bought from the Gouverneur Mortgage Company, the southeast corner of Greenwich and Leroy Streets, a plot 100 by 100, on which they contemplate erecting a fireproof warehouse to take the place of their present warehouse on Washington Street, between Spring and Charlton, which has been acquired by the New York Central Railroad Company.

About a year ago Baker & Williams purchased a plot of 12,000 square feet on Morton Street, running from Greenwich to Washington, and erected a nine-story warehouse, which was rented by the United States Government, upon its completion. This necessitated the acquisition of this new site.

Title passed yesterday, subject to a mortgage of $45,000. William A. White & Sons were the brokers in the sale.

Leases in Old Shopping Centre.

More than 100,000 square feet of manufacturing space in the former Simpson-Crawford Building at 311 to 319 Sixth Avenue, southwest corner of Twentieth Street, have been taken by three large concerns, each to occupy two floors. The new tenants are the American Uniform Company, contractors for Government clothing; Siegel Brothers & Goodman, and Adelberg & Berman.

The Brett & Goode Company negotiated the lease. The first two tenants were represented, respectively by Spear & Co., and M. & L. Hess, Inc. The leases will involve rentals aggregating more than $200,000.

File Apartment Hotel Plans.

Plans were filed yesterday for the fifteen-story apartment hotel to be erected on the plot 133.6 by 102.2 at 141 to 153 West Seventy-third Street. The site is now occupied by a row of private dwellings, and was acquired recently from a syndicate in which A. L. Mordecai & Son were interested. The Hotel Hamilton Corporation is named as the owner in the plans. The cost has been estimated by the architects, Schwartz & Gross, at $400,000.

Buyers for Tenements.

Jacob Blanner sold to the Elemeo Realty Company, 298 Monroe Street, a six-story tenement on a plot 37.7 by 97.10.

$45,000 for Subway Corner.

DR. MOSKOWITZ GETS WIDE MARKET POWER

Can Buy and Sell Food and Fuel in the City Under State Regulation.

DUTIES DEFINED BY BOARD

Commissioner Will Also Be in Charge of Community Kitchen —Asks Release of Sugar.

In accordance with a plan to prevent duplication of work and for co-ordination of service, the State Food Commission defined yesterday certain of the duties which are to come under the jurisdiction of the City Commissioner of Markets. Commissioner Moskowitz is to have charge of the management and operation of all public markets, and is to buy and sell food and fuel within the city, subject to regulation of the State Commission. He also will operate the community kitchens and have control of all community feeding departments. So far there is but one community kitchen in the city, located at Lexington Avenue and Twenty-third Street. An official connected with the commission said he understood that there was a plan to open up more community kitchens this Winter.

The duties of Dr. Moskowitz were decided upon at a conference between the State Commission and Dr. Moskowitz. The State Commission also conferred with P. C. Walcott of the United States Food Administration, and plans were discussed for bringing about a closer relation between Federal and State food authorities. There was another conference between Mr. Walcott, Calvin J. Hudson, Director of the Bureau of Food Production; Cyrus C. Miller, Director of the Bureau of Transportation and Distribution, and Professor Howard E. Babcock, Director of the Bureau of Food Conservation. Arthur Williams, City Food Administrator, also met Mr. Walcott, and later conferred with John J. Dillon, State Commissioner of Food and Markets.

Commissioner Moskowitz sent a letter to George M. Rolph, Chairman of the International Sugar Committee, asking, on behalf of the city, that he obtain the release for local consumption of the 10,000 tons of sugar now held by W. R. Grace & Co. for the account of the Russian Government.

"This can be done by the power vested in the President to commandeer the sugar," Commissioner Moskowitz wrote. "I am informed that on account of the unsettled political conditions in Russia the real owners are powerless to act. I have been informed that were they in a position to they would be very glad to come to the relief of the people of this city and country. The effect of this release would be to relieve the situation in New York City immediately, as its share of this 10,000 tons would amount to many thousands of hundred-pound bags of sugar for immediate consumption."

Sugar Distribution Plan.

A committee of refiners conferred with Commissioner Moskowitz on a plan for a more equitable distribution of sugar. It was suggested by the wholesale dealers that sugar be distributed by a general committee, representing all refiners.

Administrator Williams has taken up the complaints of consumers that dealers are compelling them to purchase other goods in order to obtain sugar. Mr. Williams said that his office had received 308 complaints, and that half of them were from persons who had been forced to make other purchases before they could get sugar. In one case a man, whose child was sick, said he had been unable to obtain sugar, being told that the only way he could get it was to buy other groceries. In this case Mr. Williams had a storekeeper supply the complaint.

Another complaint was that of a retailer who said he had been charged 12 cents a pound by a wholesale dealer for 200 pounds of sugar. Mr. Williams had the bill photographed and a copy sent to the dealer with the request that he refund the overcharge. He threatened to have the wholesaler's Federal license revoked if his request was not complied with.

Mr. Williams said at first he had been in favor of the retailers compelling other sales with sugar, for, he declared, he had found that some families were sending their servants in automobiles to buy up sugar. The plan, however, he does not think is practicable, and now believes that the retailers should sell sugar without demanding that other articles be bought. Mr. Williams said he was considering the establishment of a bureau where those who could not get sugar could come, and, if their stories held up under investigation, they could be supplied with limited amounts of sugar.

Commenting on the reduction in prices of some foods Mr. Williams gave credit to Mr. Hoover. Without Federal regulation he said that flour would now be higher and sugar would be beyond the means of many. He said that the dealers must come to the knowledge that the rule of supply and demand is not operative for the period of the war. He said that he made a tour of the stores and butcher shops of the poorer sections of the city last Saturday night and was pleased with the decline in prices, especially in meats. He said that turkeys for Thanksgiving should not exceed 35 cents a pound.

May Compromise Sugar Price.

The Sugar Committee is still endeavoring to get the Cuban sugar growers to consent to the Government price for their goods. Mr. Willi ms said he had heard that there is prospect of a compromise. The Cuban planters demand 4¾ cents a pound for raw sugar. The Government, he said, is willing to give 4½ cents. The compromise price, Mr. Williams thought, might be 4⅝ cents a pound.

Beginning today the office of Commissioner of Markets in this city will be a clearing house for all co-operation between the city departments and the State Food Commission. The Commissioner of Markets is to make a study of the market needs of the city and, if new markets are needed, he will develop, in co-operation with the State body, plans for new markets.

The central information bureau is to be established by the State Food Commission at its office in the Metropolitan Tower, from which information will be given regarding food problems and market conditions.

Announcement is made of a meeting to be held next Tuesday afternoon to organize a central food council to work in co-operation with the Federal, State and City Food Administrations. It is intended by the State Food Commission that this council will serve as an advisory body and will eliminate duplication and confusion in the volunteer activities of private and social agencies.

Comparison of prices at Washington Market yesterday and a year ago was made at Mr. Williams's office as follows:

Cauliflower, bunch	15 to 20c.	12 to 18c.
Cranberries, quart	15c.	10c.
Tomatoes, pound	15c.	10c.
Onions, pound	5c.	5c.
Sweet potatoes, quart	15c.	10c.
String beans, quart	20c.	11 to 12c.
Cabbage, head	10 to 25c.	10 to 25c.
Lettuce, bunch	5 to 10c.	5 to 10c.
Fresh eggs, dozen	57 to 59c.	54 to 57c.

How New York is conserving food is shown by the decrease in garbage collections. The first six months of this year 386,009,000 pounds of garbage were collected in Manhattan, Brooklyn and the Bronx, a decrease of 40,000,000 pounds, more than 9 per cent., as compared with the same period last year.

SPECULATION ENDED IN BUTTER AND EGGS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Speculation in butter and eggs has been ended, according to an announcement made today by the Food Administration. The program under which this was brought about was worked out at conferences attended by representatives of the Butter and Egg Exchanges. The Food Administration feels that a great end has been accomplished by obtaining the co-operation of the exchanges in this matter. The situation will be watched carefully, and should any seek to avoid the restrictions imposed the full powers conferred in the food control law will be brought into play to punish the alleged profiteers.

Here is the announcement concerning the rules adopted:

"Rule 1 provides that any goods bought on the 'call' cannot be offered for resale during the same session.

"Rule 2 provides that goods sold on the 'call' must be of the grade offered and actual deliveries must be made.

"Rule 3 provides that a request for any grade or quantity may be made during the 'call' provided no price is specified by the party making the request; but bids at a price for grades and quantity not offered are prohibited. The intent of this rule is to prevent anybody bidding for grades of goods not offered, or that are scarce, with the intent or effect of boosting prices, as heretofore made possible because the scarcity of the goods allowed excessive bids to be made to establish fictitious prices.

"Rule 4 provides that no purchases shall be made on the 'call' except by persons actually engaged in the distribution of the commodity purchased, and the same must be purchased for actual distribution in the ordinary course of his business and only in such amounts as are necessary to enable the purchaser to efficiently and economically carry on his business and furnish an even and regular supply to his trade. It also provides that all purchases made on the call must conform to the rules and regulations of the United States Food Administration governing handling or dealing in any food commodity and licenses, in so far as they may be applicable to the particular transaction."

It is believed that the man was the only survivor of the Cork steamer Ardmore, which was either torpedoed or mined.

WIFE'S PATRIOTISM OUTWITS DWIGGINS

She Reveals His Whereabouts as Act of Justice to Those Who Lost in Bond Deal.

BELIEVES HE WILL EXPLAIN

Elmer Dwiggins, the New York agent of the Bankers Life Insurance Company of Des Moines, Iowa, who disappeared last Saturday after the discovery of discrepancies amounting to $70,000 in his accounting for Liberty Loan subscriptions collected by him, is on his way here from Montgomery, Ala., in the custody of Federal officers. At his home, 204 West Seventieth Street, a frail-looking little woman, hollow-eyed from worry and loss of sleep, is anxiously awaiting her husband's return to explain her reasons for giving the police the information which led to his arrest.

Dwiggins was arrested in Montgomery yesterday, at the Exchange Hotel, according to a statement issued here by Assistant United States District Attorney John C. Knox. He was stopping there under the name of E. A. Dunham, and the officers recognized him when he claimed a decoy express package sent from here. When arrested, Dwiggins was purchasing a ticket for New Orleans. He had with him seventy-seven Liberty bonds worth $6,800 and $1,900 in cash.

The story of his chase and capture involves the decision of his wife, Mrs. Ora Dwiggins, whom he left here, to aid what she considered the cause of justice. It was a letter from Dwiggins to his wife that Mrs. Dwiggins turned over to the detectives that put the police on his track.

"I did it as a matter of simple justice to the people who had trusted him," she said last night when asked why she had revealed her husband's whereabouts.

Watched His Home.

When Dwiggins didn't return to his office after lunch last Saturday and the police began to fear he had run away, Detective Sergeant F. F. Franklin from the First Branch Bureau was assigned among others to look for him. Sergeant Franklin and another policeman late Saturday went to Dwiggins's home and tried to learn from Mrs. Dwiggins where her husband was. She was astonished and frightened when they told her who they were and why they had come to her home, but she declared she did not know where her husband was. Franklin then made arrangements to stay close by the apartment to watch in case the missing man returned.

On Monday after a wait of thirty-six hours, he again went to the apartment and had a long conversation with Mrs. Dwiggins. He told her that her husband had collected a lot of money from people who could not afford to lose it, and had disappeared, leaving no trace of the money. He pointed out that Dwiggins had used the name of the Government and the cause for which the nation was fighting in obtaining this money. Mrs. Dwiggins then said she would help all she could, regarding her assistance as a matter of patriotism. She gave the detective a telegram from Dwiggins sent from Washington worded vaguely and telling her to go to a house on Amsterdam Avenue, near 190th Street, where some friends lived, where there was a letter for her. Sergeant Franklin told her to get the letter and give it to him which she did.

In the letter Dwiggins asked his wife to write him, inclosing her letter in a letter to a friend in Los Angeles, who would forward it to him at the Exchange Hotel, Montgomery, Ala. Also, Mrs. Dwiggins was instructed by her husband's letter to pack up some Summer clothes, Palm Beach suits, low shoes, &c., and send them to the hotel. Sergeant Franklin at once communicated with the Post Office inspectors. A warrant was issued, charging Dwiggins with misuse of the mails, and Inspectors McQuillan and Williams of Chief Inspector Mayhew's staff started for Montgomery.

Package Sent as a Decoy.

Before they went, however, Mrs. Dwiggins packed the box as her husband had directed and sent it to him. The inspectors traveled on the same train as the express package. Arriving at the hotel in Montgomery, the inspectors watched the hotel desk where the package had been delivered. In a short while they heard Dwiggins call for it. A little later he went out of the hotel and went to a railroad office, where the inspectors arrested him just as he was buying a ticket for New Orleans. Dwiggins waived examination and left Montgomery with the officers last night.

In the meanwhile, Mrs. Dwiggins is torn between remorse for her act in, as she sees it, betraying her husband and her desire to do her duty to the nation and to the people who trusted Dwiggins.

"I want to tell him why I helped the police," she said last night. "I can hardly wait for him to come home. I aided the authorities all I could as a matter of simple justice to the Government and to the people who trusted my husband. I can hardly realize yet what it all means. It is all a mystery to me, which I hope my husband will clear up. The authorities, whom I aided all I could, promised to tell me the moment they found my husband, but they didn't keep that promise, for the first thing I knew of it was when I saw in the paper he had been arrested in Alabama."

E. W. Nothstine, field manager for the Bankers Life Insurance Company, arrived yesterday morning from Des Moines to take charge of the agency here pending an appointment of Dwiggins's successor. Mr. Nothstine was as reticent in regard to saying the course the company would take toward making good any losses the investors in Dwiggins's Liberty Loan proposition may suffer.

It was revealed yesterday that Dwiggins has been receiving in earnings from the Bankers Life more than $15,000 a year. It was said by officials of the company that in the nine months he had charge of the office here he turned in $4,000 000 in business.

The Dwiggins case will go before the Grand Jury today on a State charge of grand larceny. Assistant District Attorney Bohan, who is handling the case for District Attorney Swann, said that six complainants against Dwiggins would be examined.

DWIGGINS ADMITS SHORTAGE.

Confesses He Lost About $70,000 in the Stock Market.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 15.—Elmer Dwiggins, New York manager for the Bankers Life Insurance Company, arrested here, made a full confession to the Federal authorities before being taken back to New York tonight, after having waived examination. He declared that his operation in the New York stock market accounted for his shortage of about $70,000. He said in his statement:

"I do not know the exact amount of my shortage. I needed money to defray the expenses of my office, as there were a great many agents at work, and when the payments for bonds at $1 down and $1 a week began coming in, I knew I had a commission coming, and sought to use the early payments to my own account. I looked about for bonds paying a high rate of interest and bought Anglo-French bonds and French city securities. They slumped. My Anglo-French bonds dropped from $1,000 to $900. Going the wrong way wiped out much of the money I had appropriated. Three weeks ago I knew how things stood with my accounts, and when Inspector Hugh McQuillan began making an investigation I knew that they would get the goods on me.

"If the Inspector had remained with me a few minutes longer I would have told him the whole story, but he apparently was not sure whether I had been committing within the law, and let me get away. I had no idea where I was headed for when I left New York, and came South simply because I as not known here. I could not leave the country because it is impossible to get passports except in your own name. I made a very careless mistake in ordering my clothes shipped on.

"I was really making a very feeble effort to escape. I was simply putting off my arrest. The Bankers Insurance Company will owe me something like $40,000 in renewals and I am willing for it all to go on my shortage."

WON'T GET FOODSTUFFS YET

Negotiations with European Neutral Countries Still On.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Agreements between the United States and Northern European neutral countries for the release of American foodstuffs have not been finally completed, the War Trade Board announced tonight.

"No such arrangements have been made," said the statement, "although negotiations toward this end are still continuing, and it is hoped that they will result in effecting a satisfactory arrangement."

The neutrals have promised to put into American service immediately a large amount of tonnage on the assurance of this Government that their actual food requirements will be met.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 15.—The publication of a Washington dispatch that the tonnage negotiations were approaching a settlement has given rise to hope in Danish circles that the food and economic difficulties caused by the interruption of supplies from America may also be well on the way to settlement.

In the dispatch printed here there is reference to the possibility of continuing a certain amount of exports to Germany, which is taken as indicating acceptance of the Danish standpoint described by the phrase "commercial neutrality" or the right and necessity of continuing trade with both belligerent groups.

The Danish Foreign Office is unwilling to express an opinion on the subject matter of the dispatch or give any information on the negotiations in the absence of any official confirmation of the press messages. The hope was expressed, however, that this would indicate a spirit on the part of the United States to recognize the justness and correctness of Denmark's contention.

AUTO HITS GELETT BURGESS

Gelett Burgess, the illustrator and writer, was knocked down by an automobile while crossing Broadway at Ninety-fourth Street yesterday and taken to Knickerbocker Hospital, where it was found he had a dislocated left hip.

Later Mr. Burgess was removed to New York Hospital. He lives at 250 West Ninety-fourth Street. The automobile, the police reported, was driven by Mrs. Charles N. Ingraham of 225 West Sixty-ninth Street.

Strike on Government Work.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Nov. 15.—Work on Government contracts at the plant of the Morse Twist Drill and Machine Company was virtually at a standstill today as a result of a strike of a majority of the 1,200 employes for a 25 per cent. wage increase and shorter hours.

MRS. WARREN WILL BE SENTENCED TODAY

Wife of Architect Pleads Guilty to Falsely Declaring the Value of Gowns.

HER LAWYER ASKS LENIENCY

Judge Says Defendant's War Work Was the Only Part of the Plea That Appealed to Him.

Mrs. Charlotte A. Warren, wife of Whitney Warren, an architect, appeared before Judge Manton of the Federal District Court yesterday, withdrew her plea of not guilty to an indictment charging her with having made a false declaration as to the value of wearing apparel, which she brought from France in November, 1915, and pleaded guilty. She will be sentenced today. Judgment was not immediately pronounced because Frank E. Carstarphen, special Government prosecutor, said that in 1905 Mrs. Warren had committed a similar offense. John W. H. Crim, counsel for the defendant, said he knew nothing of the 1905 matter referred to and asked for time to investigate Mr. Carstarphen's statement.

Mr. Crim begged the Court to be lenient with his client, saying that with her husband she had been busy since the war in relief work for French widows and orphans. He declared that if Mrs. Warren had violated the customs law she did it without intention. Mr. Carstarphen answered by saying that for forty years Mrs. Warren had been traveling between this country and Europe; that she was a woman of brains and experience, and that it was difficult to believe that she had, on this particular occasion, placed a value of $1,500 on goods that were worth, with duties added, more than $11,000. He said that the personal property she brought here in 1905 was worth $2,600, but that its value was stated in the declaration to be less than $400.

Mr. Crim, in order to show how easily his client might have lost track of her possessions in 1915, said that on that occasion she was returning home from a trip to France, where she had been on work connected with a relief organization of which she was Treasurer; that her mind was taken up with the pressure of this work, and that her trunk had been packed by her maid. Besides, he said that the gowns that have made so much trouble for her had been bought at war bargain prices. The modistes in Paris had cried to all for help, counsel asserted, and Mrs. Warren was one of those who could not resist the call. Duty on three of the gowns had been paid once, he said, and had been sent back to France to be refitted.

"How about Mrs. Warren's previous experience with the customs authorities?", Judge Manton asked.

"I am perfectly astonished at Mr. Carstarphen's statement, replied Mr. Crim, "but I do know that mistakes are made in good faith in baggage declarations, but that the matter ends when any mistake is corrected."

Judge Manton wanted to know if the alleged incident of 1905 should not have been a warning to Mrs. Warren, and asked Mr. Crim if he thought his client was relieved of responsibility by saying that her maid was responsible. Mr. Crim said he knew nothing of anything that happened in 1905, but that when a grandmother was under such charges time should be given to her counsel to answer them. In postponing the sentence until today Judge Manton said that the only part of the plea for leniency that appealed to him was that touching on Mr. and Mrs. Warren's work among the war victims in France.

BROADWAY DARKENED, BUT STILL NOT SOMBRE

Big Advertising Signs Go Out at 11 P. M., But Wanderer Can Still Find His Way.

The order of Fuel Administrator Garfield affecting the lighting of the display advertising signs on Broadway went into effect last night, but despite it Broadway was not sombre. The big signs were not lighted until 7:45 o'clock and were darkened promptly at 11 o'clock. The order of the Fuel Administrator affected only display advertising signs. The lights that point the way into cafés and restaurants and that advertise theatres and plays were as bright as usual. Broadway was light enough after midnight to find the way about in.

The Edison Company which supplies the current for the advertising signs had prepared for the enforcement of the "lights out" order by applying to the Public Service Commission for power to change its contracts. So did the companies in Brooklyn and other parts of the city. Under the law all companies have to file copies of their contracts with the Public Service Commission, and these cannot be changed without permission of that body. This permission was granted on Wednesday.

Arthur Williams, City Food Administrator and Vice President of the New York Edison Company, said that the new order would not affect the service of the company except in the matter of time, and to this extent the contracts will be modified. The company contracts to furnish light between certain hours. The customer pays for the amount of current used, and when the current is turned on or off is not a matter for concern by the Edison Company.

Mr. Williams thought that the curtailment of the lights might mean a coal saving of about 500,000 tons all over the country in a year. Many persons returning home from the theatres stopped in Times Square last night to see the lights go out. There was some cheering.

The artists and poets of Greenwich Village are to celebrate the dimming of Broadway with a Moon Dance, to be held tonight at Webster Hall. The invitations read, "Come at Moon-up and stay till Sun-up."

The villagers, who dwell in candle-lighted studios, have long bewailed the garish lights of Broadway.

Frederic E. Gunnison, Fuel Administrator of Brooklyn, issued orders yesterday putting in effect the instructions of Dr. Garfield. The Brooklyn Edison Company issued orders to its patrolmen to turn on and off all the signs under their control. Private firms having large signs were also notified and the order was obeyed.

Makes J. P. Leary a Police Captain.

Police Commissioner Woods yesterday promoted Lieutenant John P. Leary of the Greenwich Street Station to a Captaincy. Leary has been in the department twenty years and was at the head of the eligible list. He will stay at the Greenwich Street Station.

PRESIDENT SAYS KAISER WILL RUE CHALLENGE TO US

In Two Messages Reiterates Determination to Fight War to Victorious Finish.

CABLES TO KING ALBERT

LAUDS NORTHWEST'S STAND

Tells Loyalty Meetings at St. Paul That This Is a War for Every Straight-Out American.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—In two messages today, one cabled to the King of the Belgians and the other telegraphed to citizens from six States of the Northwest gathered in patriotic meetings at St. Paul, Minn., President Wilson reaffirmed the determination of the United States to fight the Kaiser to a successful finish.

Following is the text of his cablegram to King Albert:

I take pleasure in extending to your Majesty greetings of friendship and good-will on this your fête day.

For the people of the United States, I take this occasion to renew expressions of deep sympathy for the sufferings which Belgium has endured under the willful, cruel, and barbaric force of a disappointed Prussian autocracy.

The people of the United States were never more in earnest than in their determination to prosecute to a successful conclusion this war against that power and to secure for the future obedience to the laws of nations and respect for the rights of humanity.

To the gatherings in St. Paul the President wired:

Northwest Loyalty Meetings,
St. Paul, Minn.:

R. W. Hargadine, Secretary:

Nothing could be more significant than your gathering to express the loyalty of the great Northwest. If it were possible I should gladly be with you. You have come together as the representative of that Western empire in which the sons of all sections of America and the stocks of all the nations of Europe have made the prairie and the forest the home of a new race and the temple of a new faith. The time has come when that home must be protected and that faith affirmed in deeds. Sacrifice and service must come from every class, every profession, every party, every race, every creed, every section.

This is not a banker's war or a farmer's war or a manufacturer's war or a laboring man's war—it is a war for every staight-out American, whether our flag be his by birth or by adoption. We are today a nation in arms, and we must fight and farm, mine and manufacture, conserve food and fuel, save and spend, to the one common purpose.

It is to the great Northwest that the nation looks, as once before in critical days, for that steadiness of purpose and firmness of determination which shall see this struggle through to a decision that shall make the masters of Germany rue the day they unmasked their purpose and challenged our Republic.

WOODROW WILSON.

NORTHWEST BACKS WILSON.

Pledges Support to President in "Deeds, Sacrifices, and Service."

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 16.—As a demonstration of the loyalty of Minnesota and the whole Northwest, representatives from every county of this State and the other Commonwealths gathered here tonight and affirmed their purpose to stand back of the Government in its prosecution of the war against Germany. The audience, through adoption of a resolution, pledged its support in "deeds, sacrifices, and service," as a message from President Wilson, read at the meeting, suggested.

T. P. O'Connor, Irish Member of the British Parliament, taking as his text an American flag, which he held in his hand, dwelt on the opportunities afforded emigrants to this country as the basis for a loyalty that should be untarnished by a divided allegiance.

"Washington warned against entangling foreign alliances, a warning not unnecessary in his time," Mr. O'Connor said. "Divided allegiance is 'European entanglement,' in it worst form."

Either America had no right to enter the war, Mr. O'Connor said, or she must stay in the war until the things that brought her into it were destroyed.

"When," said United States Senator Frank B. Kellogg, "a United States Senator tells you that the United States went to war to protect munition manufacturers and the Morgan loans he slanders your honor and patriotism. This is the time to give the lie to that statement."

Senator Kellogg declared that there were only two parties in the nation in this time of war. "One is with the nation and one against it," he said. "God has written down the outcome of the war and it is our duty to carry out the decree."

United States Senator Knute Nelson said Germany began to brood over the world war from the Agadir episode, "and Germany has been plotting against us since Admiral Dewey called time on Admiral Diederichs in Manila Bay," he added.

The meeting voted to organize "The America First Association," with F. W. Murphy, of Wheaton as President."

Bomb Frightens Audience at Chicago Grand Opera

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 16.—What the police declared was an attempt to explode a bomb in the Auditorium Theatre at the opera tonight was disclosed by a flash and flare from the centre of the orchestra seats.

Mme. Galli-Curci and Octave Dua were in the middle of a duet in "Dinorah" when occupants of seats on the right-hand side of the theatre smelled sulphuric smoke. An instant later flames spurted from under one of the seats. Those near by leaped to their feet. One man stamped on the flames and sparks scattered over the floor. Then the fire died out.

Signor Campanini leaped to his place in the orchestra and directed his musicians to play "The Star-Spangled Banner." Mme. Galli-Curci swung into the song and was followed by the other singers. This halted the incipient panic. Meantime the ushers had found a twelve-inch pipe, sealed with a cap at each end, and with fragments of a fuse attached.

The bomb was taken to the house of Fire Engine Company 10. The fuse had been lighted, according to Captain Scanlon, but had been snuffed out before it exploded.

There is a suspicion that the bomb was placed by a person disgruntled because the Chicago Grand Opera Company had barred German opera on account of the war.

COLONEL FOR WAR ON KAISER'S ALLIES

Tells Princeton Men That America Must Also Smash Austria and Turkey.

FLAYS THE PROPAGANDISTS

And Calls the Hearsts, the La Follettes, and the Hillquits Foes of Democracy.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 16.—A pledge to "make the world safe for democracy" is a solemn engagement to smash the two nations which most conspicuously make democracy unsafe within their own borders, said Colonel Roosevelt here tonight. "Unless we resolutely intend to break up both Austria and Turkey and insist on liberty for the subject races in the two countries, our talk about making the world safe for democracy is a sham," he declared. The Colonel spoke on "National Strength and International Duty," under the Stafford Title Foundation of Princeton.

He lamented America's slowness in getting into the war, and declared inexcusable our present state of "broomstick preparedness." "We have yet to pay for it," he declared, "and the Allies have already paid for it in blood." Pacifists and pro-Germans here were compared to the disintegrating forces in Russia today. Taking as the text President Wilson's statement that "we must make the world safe for democracy," Colonel Roosevelt made it plain that this demanded not only war upon Germany, German plans and purposes, but upon Austria and Turkey.

"We announced that our purpose was to make the world safe for democracy," he said. "This pledges us to immense sacrifice, in a hard, usingerous crusade, eminently righteous, but for an object in which our own concern was slight. Personally, I was and am eagerly ready to enter into such a crusade, if our people seriously intend to put it through, but our people ought thoroughly to understand what it means. Our grievance was against Germany, and we could with honor have joined with our allies to war against her until she was overthrown and then make peace in such fashion as to guarantee justice to them and to us, and to make the world a little safer for all of its inconsequence. But a pledge to 'make the world safe for democracy,' is a solemn engagement to smash the two nations which most conspicuously make democracy unsafe within their own borders, Austria and Turkey."

Colonel Roosevelt insisted that the United States should have gone into the war after the sinking of the Lusitania, "for," said he, "if the sinking of the Lusitania was no special grievance to this nation then the rape of a woman is no special grievance to the men who are her close kin."

The Colonel was very far from sharing the optimism with Secretary of War Baker as to the results the country had accomplished in these ten months. As a matter of fact, he said, even now our men in the training camps were not yet equipped, having only one rifle to every eight recruits and only cotton underwear and light suits, in many cases, to protect them against the weather.

He urged that the country take some action toward establishing a permanent policy of preparedness, and compared pacifists and pro-Germans in America to the disintegrating forces in Russia today.

"And in Russia," he said, in conclusion, "on the day after the forces of despotism were overthrown the forces of anarchy and disorder, under the leadership of demagogues and sinister or impractical doctrinaires, became the foes of liberty and democracy. So it is here. The Hearsts and La Follettes and Stones and Bergers and Hillquits, the agitators of the I. W. W. and the Germanized-American Socialists are of precisely the same type as the men who seek to tear free Russia to pieces; whose excesses and follies have thrown great tracts of Russa under the feet of the German aggressor, and who continuously threaten either to render for a byword of failure or else to re-enthrone some form of the old tyranny. Let us shun, as we would shun the plague, both the white terror of reaction and the red terror of revolution."

Colonel Roosevelt this afternoon reviewed the undergraduate battalion, as well as the large number of student aviators who are attending the Government "ground school" here. He seemed well pleased with the spirit which the Princeton undergraduates are showing, and made a short address at the request of Major Herbert H. Sargent, U. S. A., retired, who is Professor of Military Science at Princeton.

President and Mrs. Hibben gave a dinner in honor of Colonel and Mrs. Roosevelt this evening, and following his formal address in Alexander Hall the Colonel attended a smoker in the Russell Sage Dining Hall.

CONTROL OF ROADS ON BANK PLAN, VANDERLIP'S IDEA

Suggests Legalizing Combinations Under a Board Similar to Reserve System.

HIGHER RATES ONLY AN AID

WARBURG SOUNDS WARNING

Sees Nation's Vigor Impaired by Drastic Shrinkage of Railroad Securities.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Combinations of railroads to effect economies and solidify their securities was casually proposed by Frank A. Vanderlip, President of the National City Bank of New York, when he appeared before the Interstate Commerce Commission today in advocacy of an increase in freight rates. Mr. Vanderlip declared that such a development in the railroad policies of the United States seemed necessary to prevent Government ownership, and suggested that the country be divided into districts like the Federal Reserve system, with a central control board.

While explaining that he had not carefully thought out a plan to meet the situation confronting the railroads, Mr. Vanderlip was very emphatic in saying that the proposed increase in rates would not effect a cure; that it would only be a poultice on the wound.

"Something more; a radical change in the system, fashioned along the plan of the Federal Reserve system, with representatives of labor and the Interstate Commerce Commission on a central governing board, which board could decide when combinations could be formed and when increases should be granted in traffic as well as in wages, might be a solution," he said. Unless the present system of regulation and no combinations of railroads was modified along broad lines, Mr. Vanderlip saw Government ownership as the only remedy to the serious railroad problem existing today.

With Paul M. Warburg, Vice Governor of the Federal Reserve Board, and George W. Norris, Chairman of the Farm Loan Bank, Mr. Vanderlip appeared before the commission at its request. Mr. Vanderlip said that he had been unable to prepare any statement and would merely give his general opinion and gladly submit himself to examination.

"I fear Government ownership of railroads," said Mr. Vanderlip at the outset. His entire argument was based upon the premise that there was a strong trend to Government ownership. "I say I fear Government ownership," he added, "unless something radical is done to convince the public that railroad shares and bonds are good securities."

Mr. Vanderlip said there were five ways that a railroad had of obtaining money—the issue of bonds, disposal of junior securities, equipment notes, issuing of more stocks, and by short-term notes. None of them presented possibilities at this time because of conditions abroad.

Need a Billion Dollars Now.

"The outlook is that the railroads will need a billion dollars of new capital," he added, "and it is not possible to obtain this. The investor is the judge of his investment, and he today is turning away from railroad securities to industrials and other forms of investment. He does not have confidence in railroad securities.

"I do not think that the money which would come from the rate increase sought would cure the situation. The cure lies much deeper than that. We are trying to control the railroads by two systems—one which prohibits combinations and the other which regulates through the Interstate Commerce Commission. So long as the railroads are regulated as to rates they should have the advantage of combinations. I feel that before we cure the railroads of the present sickness they will either go into the hands of the Government or the fundamental plan must be changed to permit railroads to consolidate and thereby get advantages of economies and averages which would accrue from combinations.

"I am not sure that the railroads cannot learn something from bankers. The railroads are in much the same position that bankers were years ago. They are not thinking along national lines, but devoting themselves solely to their own problems. Just what was done in the banking world might be performed for the railroads of the United States. I would suggest, and I want to say in doing so that it is a mere suggestion, that the country be formed into districts as under the Federal Reserve banking system. Upon the central board I would put representatives of the Government, members of the Interstate Commerce Commission, representatives of labor and representatives of the public, the investor. Such a commission or board could decide when freight rates could be increased and also have a say as to wage increases, and it also could decide when combinations might be formed of the carriers. But while an increase in rates at this time would not be a cure, it would bring back the confidence lacking in the mind of the investor as to railroad securities."

Buys No Railroad Paper.

Upon cross-examination Mr. Vanderlip said that he had shown his lack of confidence in railroad securities by not having any personally and "by not

Crown Prince May Seek to Depose von Hertling

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 16.—The German Crown Prince recently had a long conference with Prince von Bülow, the former Imperial Chancellor, at the Prince's Berlin hotel. All the Berlin newspapers make note of the conversation, and some comment on the Crown Prince's call and the Prince's candidacy for his old post as being a noteworthy event.

Undoubtedly it is a little too early to regard the Crown Prince, whose visit to Berlin was accounted for by the christening of his youngest daughter, as again attempting to play the rôle of overthrower of Chancellors. Prince von Bülow is believed to be in accord with the Crown Prince regarding Germany's political and war objectives, while Chancellor von Hertling is the exponent of a policy to which the Crown Prince is opposed.

ACCUSE JAILERS OF SUFFRAGISTS

Lawyer and Others Charge 30 Prisoners at Occoquan Are Treated Brutally.

MANACLED TO CELL BARS

Miss Burns Threatened with a Straitjacket, It Is Said—Two Refuse Bail.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Matthew O'Brien, a Washington lawyer, who visited the District of Columbia Workhouse at Occoquan, Va., today, declared at the headquarters of the Woman's Party tonight that militant suffragists imprisoned in the workhouse for picketing the White House were being brutally and inhumanely treated. In addition to having Mr. O'Brien relate what he had learned, the Woman's Party gave to the newspapers a statement of Miss Lucy Burns of New York, who was sentenced this week to serve six months at Occoquan, that indignities had been inflicted on her and other militants serving workhouse terms.

In a letter which those at militant headquarters asserted was smuggled out of the workhouse Miss Burns declared that she was manacled to the bars of her cell and threatened with being placed in a straitjacket and gagged if she persisted in talking with her fellow-women prisoners. Miss Burns, being more athletic than the others, refused to don the prison garb, and she said that all her outer garments were stripped from her by force. She wrapped herself in a blanket. All the other women are said to be wearing the prison uniform, as their clothes were taken from them.

Mr. O'Brien tomorrow will appeal to the courts for remedy against what he describes as "most brutal and illegal treatment" of the thirty suffrage prisoners. Every effort was being made to place the women incomunicado, he said. The Government, it was charged, had sent a detachment of United States Marines from their camp at Quantico, Va., to guard the grounds and prevent friends of the suffragists from getting inside the prison grounds.

Pickets Visitors Barred.

All communication with the outside world was refused, and Superintendent Whittaker at first declined to admit Mr. O'Brien, who went there with an order from the Court to confer with his clients, Miss Burns, Mrs. Lawrence Lewis of Philadelphia, and Mrs. John Winters Brannan of New York. Miss Katherine Morey of Brookline, Mass., accompanied Mr. O'Brien to the prison this afternoon. She demanded of Superintendent Whittaker to see her mother, Mrs. Agnes Morey, and was refused. She was ordered to leave the grounds. Failing to comply with this request promptly she was escorted to her automobile by a marine.

"I am sorry to do this," the marine told her; "but we are under military orders."

"What would you do if I refused to obey your orders? Would you shoot?" Miss Morey asked.

"I cannot say what I would do, but I have strict orders, Madam," she quoted the marine as saying.

Mr. O'Brien described the alleged treatment of the women on his return tonight. He said that nothing like this treatment had been administered to the most hardened criminals and that he intended to force a Congressional inquiry.

"My clients reported to me," said Mr. O'Brien, "that from the time of their arrival every effort was made to terrorize them; that they were not allowed to state to the Superintendent their desires; that when an attempt was made by Mrs. Lewis, speaking for all of them, to tell Superintendent Whittaker that they expected to be subjected to no indignities, thirty women were seized by eighty guards, flung off their feet and dragged from the room.

"My clients informed me that because they refused to give their names the Superintendent ordered his guards to seize them and they were taken to punishment cells in the men's quarters. On their arrival there Mrs. Lewis and Miss Burns were threatened with being placed in straitjackets and gagged if they persisted in talking. Both the ladies refused to cease talking to each other and Miss Burns was then manacled to the bars of the cell used to confine prisoners suffering from delirium tremens.

"Other indignities were offered the ladies, and when they asked for counsel they were told they would not be permitted to see counsel during their entire incarceration. The only reason given by Superintendent Whittaker for trans-

Washington Looks for Bombardment and Capture by Naval and Land Forces.

By The Associated Press.

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, Nov. 16, (delayed.)—The floodgates of the Piave and Sile, or Old Piave, Rivers have been opened by Italian military engineers and the enemy is now faced by another Yser of inundation.

The flood was loosed at the point where the enemy succeeded in crossing the Piave near Grisolera, (four miles from the coast,) and the whole region where he gained lodgment is now under water. The inundated territory forms a huge triangle about twelve miles on each side, with the apex at Dona di Piave.

The water effectively holds the enemy at most exposed points and for fifteen miles on the west bank of the Piave. The flooded area is about seventy square miles and the water is a foot to five feet deep, and twelve miles in width at some points, making the district impossible of occupation or movement by enemy troops. The enemy clings to the west bank at Zenson, but is crowded into a small U-shaped position and relying on batteries across the river to keep the Italians back.

Austro-German efforts to bring over large forces by pontoons have not succeeded, according to latest reports, either at Zenson or at points further north where the invaders are feeling their way in an effort to get across.

The booming of Italian naval guns could be heard distinctly here this morning, showing that the navy as well as the army was doing its part. The fire of the naval guns was directed against enemy positions on the lower Piave.

The chief menace at that point was that the enemy might be able to approach Venice through the lagoon or bombard the city from his position between the rivers.

The action of the Italians in opening the floodgates of the Piave and Sile Rivers probably means an attempt to drown out the Austro-German forces which crossed the lower Piave several days ago at Grisolera, about seventeen miles northeast of Venice. The flooding of the triangle formed by the two rivers and the Adriatic also probably would make ineffective any German attempt to debouch in force against the right flank of the Italian Army along the Piave.

ITALIANS CHECK ASSAULTS.

Mountain Front Intact Thursday—Foe Takes Cismon and Prisoners.

ROME, Nov. 16.—All along the mountain front from Asiago to the Piave River the attacks of the Austro-German forces, which are seeking to crush in the Italian line, have been repulsed, it is announced officially. All the positions attacked yesterday remained in the hands of the Italians.

On the Venetian plains artillery batties of intense severity across the Piave River are in progress.

Following is the text of the official communication:

On the mountainous front, from the Asiago plateau to the Piave River, combats have developed and are continuing. Yesterday the enemy kept our positions under intense fire and launched violent attacks. Our troops, supported by artillery, resisted everywhere with great courage, and counterattacked with boldness, inflicting losses on the enemy and capturing prisoners. All the positions remained in our possession.

The Regina Brigade, Ninth and Tenth Regiments, fought with its usual valor at Meletta d'Avanti and Monte Fior. At Monte Tondarecar, where three successive attacks were repulsed, the Monte Marmolada Battalion of Alpini showed firmness. At the defensive line of San Marino, in the Brenta Valley, enemy parties were driven back with heavy losses.

At Monte Prassolan a party which had retired from Monte Roncone made a counterattack, having received reinforcements, and repulsed the enemy, who had followed close on its heels during the withdrawal. At Monte Cornelle our troops, with stubbornness and admirable élan, victoriously resisted the formidable effort of the enemy, lasting from afternoon until midnight.

Enemy troops massed north of Asiago and in the Gallio Wood were bombarded by our airplanes.

On the plains intense artillery activity continued across the Piave River.

From the Stelvio to the Astico some artillery firing is reported. There were local infantry actions in the Giudicaria and Ledro Valleys.

Yesterday and last night airplanes and airships repeated their bombard-

Wilson Inspired the Recent London Naval Conference, Desiring a Program for Joint Warfare at Sea

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Lord Northcliffe's letter to Premier Lloyd George was the means of bringing to the surface some of the latent feeling existing here over the allied conduct of the war.

It is now no secret that the recent naval conference in London, attended by Admiral Mayo, Commander in Chief of the Atlantic Fleet, was called at the instance of President Wilson, and not, as generally supposed, by one of the European allies. The conference was the outcome of questioning in Washington whether there was a genuine allied plan of naval operations against the Germans. It was felt by the President and others that a conference was necessary to determine upon a program that would enable the naval forces of Great Britain, France, the United States, and perhaps Japan and Italy, to act together to the best advantage. While some naval experts here sympathized with the criticism heard from Europe concerning the inactivity of the British Grand Fleet, it would be going too far to say that those in high position shared this dissatisfaction. They merely felt that not enough was known of the naval plans of our European allies to justify the United States Government in determining the disposition of its naval forces or taking steps that would be most helpful in the effort to defeat Germany.

What Admiral Mayo learned at the conference and what plans for the employment of American naval forces were evolved from it have not been disclosed and could not be. Apparently, however, something was left to be arranged, and this situation brought about the calling of an allied conference in Paris.

It became known today that three separate conferences, in all of which the United States will participate, would be held in Paris. The general conference, in which Colonel House will represent the United States, will be devoted to the whole question of co-ordinated effort in the conduct of the war. Another conference will be devoted to plans for military co-operation, with General Bliss, Chief of the General Staff, as the American representative, and the third to plans for naval co-operation, with Admiral Benson, Chief of Naval Operations, representing this Government.

PICHON FOREIGN MINISTER

Premier Himself Will Be Minister of War—Several Men of Little Note.

PARIS, Nov. 16.—Georges Clemenceau has completed a cabinet in succession to that headed by Professor Painlevé. The new Ministry is as follows:

Premier and Minister of War—GEORGES CLEMENCEAU.
Minister of Foreign Affairs—STEPHEN PICHON.
Minister of Justice—LOUIS NAIL.
Minister of Interior—JULES PAMS.
Minister of Finance—LOUIS KLOTZ.
Minister of Marine—GEORGES LEYGUES
Minister of Commerce—ETIENNE CLEMENTEL.
Minister of Public Works—ALBERT CLAVEILLE.
Minister of Munitions—LOUIS LOUCHEUR.
Minister of Instruction—LOUIS LAFFERRE.
Minister of Colonies—HENRY SIMON.
Minister of Labor—M. COLLIARD.
Minister of Provisions—VICTOR BORET.
Minister of Blockade and Invaded Region—CHARLES C. A. JONNART.

Deputy Durand refused the post of Minister of Agriculture, and that department has been attached to the Ministry of Provisions, under M. Boret, with M. Villegrain as Under Secretary, specially charged with general service connected with corn.

Senator Jeanneney, Chairman of the Senatorial Committee on Army Appropriations, has been appointed Under-Secretary of State to Premier Clémenceau with a seat in the Cabinet. Deputy Albert Favre has been appointed Under-Secretary of the Interior, and Deputy Cels Under-Secretary of the Navy, specially charged with questions concerning the submarine warfare.

M. Clemenceau presented the Ministry to President Poincaré at 4:15 o'clock this afternoon.

The Temps financial correspondent says the Bourse was favorably influenced by the new Ministry, and that buying orders were more numerous.

Much interest attaches to M. Clemenceau's attitude toward the censorship, he having suffered from its severities to the extent of being compelled to change the name of his newspaper from The Freeman to The Man Enchained.

Although no official announcement has yet been made, it is understood the new Premier will suppress the censorship entirely, putting newspapers and correspondents on their honor not to infringe rules which will be drawn up for their direction, and any transgression of which will lead to immediate prosecution.

The new Cabinet represents a concentration of the Republican groups, excluding the Conservatives, Royalists, and Socialists. The Radicals predominate.

A committee of Radicals and Radical Socialists by a vote of 59 to 26 approved of members of the party participating in the Ministry. The attitude of the Socialists after the resignation of Premier Painlevé prevented M. Clemenceau from inviting any member of that party to hold office.

The rapidity of the formation of the Ministry establishes a record in French politics. Premier Clemenceau began his task at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon and completed it within twenty-four hours.

REPORT KERENSKY AGAIN IN FLIGHT

Had Agreed to Go to Petrograd After Defeat, but Got Away in Disguise.

HIS FORCES TWICE BEATEN

PETROGRAD, Nov. 16.—General Dukhonin has assumed temporarily the post of Commander in Chief of the Kerensky forces, following the disappearance of Premier Kerensky, who is reported to have fled disguised as a sailor.

General Krasneff, arrested with other members of Kerensky's staff, has been released on the ground that he was only obeying the orders of his superior.

Premier Kerensky when told that his officers were against him and the men were at the point of deserting, agreed to come to Petrograd, but while a guard was being arranged he disappeared.

Light on Recent Events.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The first word received direct from Petrograd for several days, with the exception of brief daily wireless statements announcing the absence of communications from Army Headquarters, came today in the form of an official wireless message mentioning Colonel Mouravieff, the Bolshevikl military leader, as in command of the Petrograd military revolutionary district.

The message says that Colonel Mouravieff has commanded the Kissinov [Kishinev?] Soldiers' and Workmen's Council to take the most energetic steps to liberate their comrades in the Kissinov prison who are serving terms at hard labor for revolting against "the deposed Provisional Government."

A cable message dated yesterday says: "Seven thousand military cadets and 3,000 troops are besieged in the Kremlin at Moscow by 18,000 Bolsheviki, who are battering the ancient walls and buildings with heavy artillery, according to a well authenticated report received this afternoon."

The Government troops are said to have a fairly plentiful supply of food and ammunition and to be capable of holding out for some days.

According to the informant of The Associated Press, a semi-official American returning from Moscow, the stories of wholesale looting and burning there have been exaggerated. There has been indiscriminate firing throughout the city, but aside from the havoc at the Kremlin there has been little damage done to property.

The loss of life since the beginning of the insurrection is estimated at from 2,000 to 5,000.

General Kaledines, upon whose help the defenders of the Kremlin are counting, is reported to have cut the railway southward to prevent provisions arriving while he is moving toward Moscow.

Other messages by cable, all delayed, are beginning to filter in from the Russian capital. One, dated Wednesday, says:

"Premier Kerensky's forces, which advanced from Gatchina to Tsarkoe Selo, have been defeated by the Workmen's and Soldiers' forces between Tsarkoe Selo and Pulkova, twelve miles from Petrograd. The Kerensky contingents have retreated to Gatchina."

A Reuter's limited dispatch, dated Tuesday, says:

"Tsarkoe Selo has twice changed

LLOYD GEORGE IS BLAMED

Air Board Head First Told of Premier's Plan by Editor's Letter.

WANTS TO QUIT RIGHT AWAY

London Stirred by Northcliffe's Criticisms—Some of the Press Applaud Him.

WASHINGTON IS CAUTIOUS

Sees Allies' Faulty Methods, but Has No Idea of Trying to Manage the War.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—As a direct result of Lord Northcliffe's letter to Premier Lloyd-George yesterday declining to accept the post of head of a new Air Ministry, Viscount Cowdray, the Chairman of the present Air Board, has resigned.

In a letter to the Premier today, tendering his resignation, Lord Cowdray protested against receiving through Lord Northcliffe's letter the first intimation that the Premier desired a change in the Air Ministry. The Viscount added that he hoped the resignation would be accepted as speedily as possible.

This action by Lord Cowdray was the most tangible result of the great sensation caused by the newspaper proprietor's sharp criticism of the Government for lack of co-ordinated effort and for retention in office of men whom he regarded as unfit.

The afternoon newspapers commented extensively on Northcliffe's letter. Many of them took occasion to point out the nation's demand for steadiness and composure on the part of statesmen and the need for more vigorous administration.

Both The Globe and The Pall Mall Gazette expressed regret at Northcliffe's refusal to accept office.

The Globe said that the gravest of all Lord Northcliffe's warnings was that concerning the temper of the American nation, that the American people think, and think rightly, that Great Britain's rulers have muddled the war. This newspaper asserted that the letter, while addressed to the Prime Minister, was in truth written to the nation. It added:

"If we do not heed it, we shall deserve any fate that may befall us."

The Pall Mall Gazette remarked:

"The present Government has been almost a year in office, and it would not be too soon for the Premier to see whether it cannot be revised in the interests of greater energy and clearer perception of what is meant by war."

The Westminster Gazette said:

"Other distinguished men have felt like this, but none of them hitherto have expressed their sentiments in this blunt vernacular or made refusal of such high office the occasion for lecturing the Prime Minister on the shortcomings of his administration. * * * Those who make others scapegoats are always in fear of being made scapegoats themselves."

Viscount Cowdray was appointed Chairman of the British Air Board Jan. 2 of this year in succession to Baron Mydenham. He accepted the post on the condition that he should receive no salary.

Lord Cowdray is one of the greatest business men of England. As Weetman Pearson he acquired large interests in Mexico and Central America. He is noted as an engineer, as well as a financier.

HOUSE SEES EDITOR AND THEN PREMIER

He Tells Correspondents Mission's Labors Are Helping Vitally Toward United Effort.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Colonel E. M. House, head of the American mission to the allied conference, had a two hours' conference this afternoon with Lord Northcliffe, who declined an appointment yesterday as head of the new Air Ministry. This evening Colonel House took dinner with Premier Lloyd George.

The work of the American mission to the interallied conference is proving most satisfactory from both the American and the British standpoint. The conferences of experts have resulted in an exchange of much fuller information concerning the resources and needs of the Allies in both the military and the economic fields, and America's ability to aid, than has been obtained heretofore.

Colonel House tonight substantially stated the foregoing opinion to the American correspondents. He indicated his belief that the results of the mission's labors would prove invaluable in bringing about a co-ordination of effort among the nations opposed to the Central Powers.

The experts among the members of the mission have made a strong impression on the British officials by their energy and grasp of various problems.

"They are discussing both sides and have laid all their cards on the table," said one member of the British Government, "and we are working together with the greatest harmony."

Members of the mission took luncheon today with the King and Queen at Buckingham Palace.

Among those present at the reception to the mission were Premier Lloyd George, Arthur J. Balfour, Foreign Secretary, and members of the royal household.

All the arrangements were simple and informal, in accordance with the strict method of rationing constantly practiced by the King and Queen. There was no music or special floral decorations. Members of the American mission commented afterward on the excellent example set to the nation and expressed satisfaction that no exception had been made in their favor.

NO IDEA OF AMERICA 'MANAGING' THE WAR

But Washington Thinks Criticism of Allies' Lack of Unity Somewhat Justified.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Lord Northcliffe's letter to Premier Lloyd George declining appointment as head of the new Air Ministry created widespread interest in official circles in Washington, and while those connected with the Government were reticent, enough of their attitude is known to justify the statement that some of the statements made in Lord Northcliffe's communication to the Prime Minister concerning the conduct of the war evoked a sympathetic feeling. It would be an error to assume, however, that this sympathetic feeling reached to the point of harsh criticism of the British Government. It arises more from the desire to obtain adequate answers to some of the questions suggested in Lord Northcliffe's letter as to what is being done by the Allies in the way of co-ordinating effort to insure the defeat of Germany.

At the same time opinion is not unanimous here as to the justice of Lord Northcliffe's criticisms of his Government. There was a disposition among some well-informed persons to attribute Lord Northcliffe's dissatisfaction with the Lloyd George ministry to his experiences while in this country as head of a British mission. Other British missions were here at the same time, each devoted to some form of war activity, and it is believed that Lord Northcliffe felt that as a result of the lack of co-operative action among these bodies they lost much of their usefulness, all to the detriment of the common cause. In this lack of co-ordination Lord Northcliffe found cause for dissatisfaction, according to one opinion expressed today, and blamed the British ministry for that situation.

Outside of this view of the reason for Lord Northcliffe's criticism and another idea that he felt irritated over evidence of the lack of systematic co-operation of Great Britain with the United States, the statements made by the newspaper proprietor are regarded as having, perhaps, greater significance than is apparent at first glance. His complimentary reference to Lord Reading, Lord Chief Justice of England, have not been lost on Washington, where it is known that there is a fast friendship between the two men, and that they returned to England on the same steamship. It was recalled today that when Lord Reading, as Sir Rufus Isaacs, was a member of the British Government and active in politics he was ardently supported by Lord Northcliffe's newspapers. In these circumstances some observers here found it easy to read into Lord Northcliffe's refusal to serve in the British Government a notice to Lloyd George of his intention to take up the cudgels for a reorganization of the Ministry, with the object of making Lord Reading Premier.

In informing the Prime Minister that he knew from "countless conversations with leading Americans" that lack of swift improvement in British methods of conducting the war might cause the United States to "take into its own hands the entire management of a great part of the war," Lord Northcliffe expressed too strongly a view found in several quarters. Those high in the councils of the President have carefully refrained from saying in any unguarded way what Lord Northcliffe asserted was the view of leading men in this country. Nothing has come to light to indicate that this Government has any thought of suggesting that it follow its own course in conducting military operations against Germany.

But if Lord Northcliffe's words are to be construed as voicing American opinion that the burden of the war may fall on the United States, he is not wide of the mark. That opinion is frequently heard not in criticism of our allies, but as indicating the determination of President Wilson to remain in the contest as long as there is one fighting man or an ounce of fighting material left in this country. It has been said frequently here as elsewhere that the United States may be obliged to furnish the bulk of the forces that will win the war for the Allies.

Officials do not believe that conditions justifying such sacrifices ever will come about, but they have made up their minds that if a situation of that character does arise this Government must not falter in its decision to go through to the finish, even if it is the only nation left to fight Germany and her partners. The belief is general here that the nation must make sacrifices greater than were expected when we entered the war.

Lord Northcliffe's criticisms of the British censorship caused mixed feelings in Washington. On the censorship question in general there is decided lack of interest among Washington officials. This is attributed in part to the fact that the American press has leaned so far backward to avoid publishing information that might be useful to the enemy that some officials feel that they have no cause to fear the exposure of their shortcomings in the conduct of the war. It is a common remark here that the danger of rigid observance by newspapers of the voluntary censorship lies in the encouragement it gives to some officials to assume a self-satisfied attitude in the belief that they are doing efficient service in the war. Therefore, it is contended, the complaint of Lord Northcliffe against the strictness of the press censorship of Great Britain applies also to the voluntary censorship observed by the American press.

WANT REICHSTAG TO DEBATE LENINE PEACE

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The Independent Socialist group in the German Reichstag has requested the President to convoke an immediate session of the Reichstag to discuss the peace offer of Nikolai Lenine, leader of the Russian Bolsheviki, the Amsterdam correspondent of the Central News cables.

The Independent Socialists also ask that the Reichstag take up consideration of the new state of affairs as regards Courland, Lithuania, and Poland.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 16.—The German Majority Socialists, not to be outdone by the Radical Socialists, have issued an appeal urging the greatest activity in holding meetings to proclaim solidarity with their Russian colleagues in a demand for an immediate armistice and a speedy peace. This will be made a special note at meetings held in accordance with the resolution adopted at the party's convention at Wurzburg to demonstrate for peace without annexations or indemnities.

The German civil administration in Lithuania and the Baltic provinces now is being formed. Baron von Falkenhausen, Under Secretary of the Prussian Ministry of Agriculture and a son of the Governor General of Belgium, has been selected, according to the Lokal-Anzeiger, as Governor of the district, which embraces the territory the annexation of which to Germany was discussed at last week's Crown Councils and the conference with Count Czernin, the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, at Berlin.

TO ENTER WAR BOARD ON SPECIAL BASIS

America's Participation in Allied Council Not Like That of Others, Col. House Indicates.

HAS NO POLITICAL AIMS

Overthrow of Autocracy Her Only Purpose — Our Commission Making Good Progress.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Colonel House, head of the American Mission, today corroborated his statement of yesterday that The Evening Standard's announcement regarding American participation in and representation at the Allied War Council was unauthorized. That council remains at present more in posse than in esse, although little doubt is felt here that after Monday's discussion in the House of Commons something of the kind will be put in working order.

America's participation in such a war council cannot be doubted, but it is unlikely that it will be entirely on the lines laid down for British, French, and Italian representation. These three countries are to be represented by their Premiers. The President, being the head of the American Cabinet, similar American representation on the war council is out of the question and there would be difficulties in the selection of any person to take his place.

The United States, moreover, while fully in the war, is not in it on exactly the same footing as the three countries mentioned. It has no political side to its war machinery. It has signed no Treaty of London, and, while America will not go out of war till the other powers fighting the Teutonic despotism, are in a position to get out of it with their objects achieved, she will abide strictly by the Washington doctrine of aloofness from European politics. America's war aim is to make the world safe for democracy. Her military resources and all that she can contribute to reach that aim will be thrown into the common cause, but with war aims which specially turn on questions of old world politics she has no concern. America's attitude toward the Allied War Council was made quite clear by Colonel House today.

The Colonel doesn't expect to remain long in Europe, but one or two members of the mission may remain here permanently for specific purposes. Oscar T. Crosby, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, it is reported, will represent the United States on the allied council, which is to sit permanently in Paris. The detachment of another member of the commission as a permanent American representative on another important allied council will depend upon events, and no announcement can be made before next week.

Good Progress of Commission.

While the work of the commission here has thus far been only of a departmental and preliminary character, it has progressed so satisfactorily that a general and inclusive agreement upon all the matters with which the members of the commission had to deal is in prospect in the near future.

The members of the commission without exception are well satisfied with the spirit in which they have been met by their "opposite members" in the fields they had to cover, and have all reported good progress.

Colonel House, who is said to be chiefly responsible for the organization and selection of the commission, has every reason to be gratified with the success which has attended their labors. He is confident that the spirit of keen co-operation and determined effort displayed on both sides will produce speedy and advantageous solutions of the problems which had to be tackled.

None of the members of the commission, it may be added, has any tendency to regard the situation as he found it on his arrival as indicative of lack of foresight or weakness of organization. The pending arrangements, which will carry the co-operation of the American and British Governments to a fuller stage than in the past, could hardly have been reached at an earlier juncture. The United States Government will have, when the work of the commission is concluded, as it will be soon, all the material by which to determine the exact manner in which it can best contribute to the common cause of the Allies. It will have a clear perception of the different needs and will be in a position to supply them without wasteful dispersion of energy.

The investigations which the members of the commission have had made have confirmed their opinion that the resources of the Allies, supported by America, will prove adequate to meet all needs in all directions—men, money, shipping, food, appliances, and material of every kind.

Not Counting on a Short War.

This belief is by no means based on the idea of a short war. There is no good reason for believing in a short war or even in the immediate termination of the war, once America gets all her weight into it. In this latter idea members of the American mission here put no faith. Colonel House dealt a hard blow to the idea of the war being settled at one blow by America when he said in conversation with THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent today that he was not worrying much about the collecting of data for a peace conference just now, for there would be ample time for that later, when his other work was done.

HENRY FORD JOINS SHIP BOARD'S STAFF

Will Introduce His Famous Multiple Production Methods—His Factory to Help.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Henry Ford joined the staff of the Shipping Board today to lend his talent for standardization of production in speeding up the building of a merchant fleet. He was made a special assistant to Charles Piez, Vice President of the board's Emergency Fleet Corporation.

Mr. Ford will begin work next week and will spend most of his time in Washington. His particular task will be to introduce into shipbuilding the multiple production methods he has used with such marked success in producing automobiles. He will give attention to organizing the manufacture of ship parts.

Already Mr. Ford has begun to turn over to the Government the facilities of his plant at Detroit for the manufacture of war materials. His factory is now making 2,500 airplane cylinders, is turning out a large number of parts for Liberty motor trucks, and soon will be put to making equipment for merchant ships.

The Fleet Corporation is undergoing a complete reorganization with widely known business men in charge of its chief departments. Other assistants to Mr. Piez are gradually taking over the work heretofore done by naval officers under Rear Admiral Capps, who, though still serving as General Manager of the corporation, is limiting his activities to technical matters.

WARNS HERTLING OF DELAY.

Vorwaerts Says Suffrage Reform Must Not Be Put Off.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 16.—Vorwärts, the Berlin Socialist organ, is furious at the idea of delaying the Prussian Suffrage bill.

The paper warns the new Government to be careful to introduce the bill at the next session of the Diet, as otherwise the people will no longer put any trust in Government promises.

FEARS DANES' RUIN FROM OUR EMBARGO

Minister of Interior Tells of Food Need and the Dependence Upon Us.

MUST EXPORT TO GERMANY

This is Essential for Denmark's Economic Neutrality, Which She Won't Give Up.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 15.—Ove Rode, Minister of the Interior, who from his position is in closest touch with conditions underlying negotiations with the United States, outlined to day in a statement to The Associated Press Denmark's position.

"It has not been easy for the Danish people," he said, "to understand just why the entry of the United States into the war should have had such fateful consequences on their economic existence. Just as Denmark was most solicitiously observing all her obligations as a neutral when she was working in harmonious accord with the commercial policy the United States followed when still a neutral, so the country will know how to adjust its methods of action with the same solicitude to the new conditions which America's entry into the war has imposed upon it.

"And just as Denmark has looked with confidence to the United States as the powerful protector of the rights of neutrals, so it is certain that America as a belligerent in no wise intends to injure a loyal neutral country with which, through generations of emigration and intermarriage, it has entertained ties of friendship and blood.

"At the same time I do not believe it is realized in the United States to what degree the cessation of supplies from America threatens Denmark with ruin. We require to feed the population and for the production of pork and butter, of which the greater part always, even during the war, has gone to England, twice as much grain and fodder stuffs as we ourselves raise. Now all the supplies are brought from the United States. The extraordinary drought of this Summer resulted in a failure of a great part of the harvest, and the farmers, therefore, during the coming year have far less than half the usual amount of fodder stuffs with which to carry on the production of pork.

"Pork is diminishing rapidly, for swine have to be slaughtered before they have matured. By Spring there will not be much left over 300,000 of the 2,500,000 swine which the country maintained before the war. The butter production also is heavily decreasing, and since the home production of margarine has entirely ceased, owing to the interruption of supplies of oil-containing raw materials, the population cannot receive its accustomed amounts of fats.

"Just as we have rationed bread and sugar on the card system for the whole population, now we must ration fats down to the absolute minimum of the requirements of the body if we are to maintain that quantity for export which is essential to the economic life of the community.

"Cattle and horses are underfed and the swine and poultry stocks are being slaughtered; and if the import of nitrogenous fertilizers in adequate quantities cannot be arranged, the soil next year will be even less able to maintain the country's livestock.

"The consequences of this will be for a long time increasing exports of horses and slaughtered cattle, particularly to Germany, which hitherto has been only a casual customer for these, even if we endeavor to organize the export beef to England, also in the interest of our economic neutrality and independence, despite almost insuperable difficulties.

"If, however, the United States and England continue the blockade policy so far as foodstuffs are concerned, which to us does not seem to advance their own interests or injure their opponents as much as they threaten our interests, still we hope we may receive other supplies of which we are greatly in need. Particularly we require petroleum, the lack of which handicaps our millers in grinding flour, and creates Winter darkness in a hundred thousand homes in which there is no electricity. This has forced us to look for a new supply in Galicia."

Answering the correspondent's suggestion as to the possibility of developing trade with the Scandinavian countries, M. Rode said:

"All efforts to bring about an interchange of wares within the northern lands can count upon the full sympathy of the Danish people. The absolute determination on the part of the three countries to maintain their neutrality in common, of which the northern conference soon will give renewed witness, impels statesmen also to do their utmost to develop such trade. But from what I said earlier you will understand to what a slight extent Denmark will be able to help.

"There is no doubt the Danish people will submit to privations if thereby they can help relieve distress in the north, just as I believe Norway and Sweden are inspired by the same sentiment. No distress, however great, can bring us to choose as an alternative the still greater misery, calamity, or ruin which war would bring to us.

"Denmark's people are looking forward to the future wth concern and also with hope. And their thoughts in these gloomy days often go out over the Atlantic to the day when President Wilson shall stretch out his hand toward peace and to obtain the high and noble aims of peace which the world has heard him formulate. The Danish people's blessings will go with him."

sioner to the United States, was invited to call on M. Clemenceau, who offered a portfolio to him. Captain Tardieu replied that it was his opinion that he should not give up his Commissionership, because the negotiations under way with the United States should not be interrupted.

A Cabinet more unlike that of Professor Painlevé could hardly be imagined than that presented to President Poincaré by Clemenceau. All the men named are uncompromising fighters, and so reflect the spirit of the Premier. All have fought successive war Governments for political bias, temporizations, and compromises with extremist factions.

Even Klotz, Clémentel, Claveile, and Loucheur, who have retained the portfolios they had under Painlevé, have not hesitated to criticise their colleagues from the point of view of expert knowledge—Klotz as a financial expert, who has political leanings toward radical socialism; Clémentel as an organizer, once Minister of the Colonies and Vice President of the Senate, and now a member of the Radical Left; Claveille as an engineer and transportation expert, who brought order out of the traffic chaos in November, 1916, and Loucheur as an ordnance expert.

M. Pichon, the new Foreign Secretary, is an authority on international politics and law. He held this same portfolio in 1910. He is a Senator and journalist and a relentless advocate of the recovery of Alsace-Lorraine.

M. Nail, a Radical Republican, was Secretary of State for the Mercantile Marine in the Briand Government. He has a large party following.

M. Pams, who divides with M. Nail the direction of the Radical Republicans, has been Minister of Agriculture, and in 1913 was the Radical Left's candidate for President against M. Poincaré.

M. Leygues, also attached to the Republicans of the Left, is President of the Chamber's Foreign Affairs Committee, and in 1906 was Minister for the Colonies.

M. Lafferre, like M. Klotz, is a prominent member of the Union of Republicans and Radical Socialist group. He is an expert on political economy.

ments of enemy troops along the river lines and the ways of access.

The supplementary report issued this evening says:

New attacks brought us successes in the mountains, between the Brenta and the Piave.

Berlin Reports Capture of Cismon.

BERLIN, Nov. 16.—The town of Cismon, on the northern Italian front, has been captured, the War Office announces. Near the Adriatic, on the western bank of the Piave, Hungarian troops advanced and captured 1,000 Italians.

The official statement issued this afternoon says:

In pressing forward northeast of Gallio and on both sides of the Brenta Valley, our troops captured several hill positions from the Italians. Cismon is in our possession.

On the lower Piave the artillery fighting increased in intensity. Near the sea Hungarian Honved detachments advancing on the western bank of the Piave captured 1,000 Italians.

SEES AUSTRIAN ATTACK ON THE PIAVE FRONT

By The Associated Press.

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, Wednesday, Nov. 14, (delayed.)—The Italian General Staff gave civilians the first oportunity today to see the Piave battle front, and The Associated Press correspondent was among the first four authorized to take the trip. It came at an opportune moment, when the enemy had succeeded in getting small parties across the river at two points and when the holding or breaking of the Piave line promised to bring the whole issue into the balance for Italy, and, to some extent, for the entire Entente.

An officer from the Headquarters Staff was in charge of the party, which gave it free access through the rear lines to the Piave, where the chief points along the thirty miles of front were visible, and a view was obtained of the whole range of the gigantic operations.

Some ten miles back from the river the correspondent passed through solid miles of troops on their way to and from the front. Those going to the rear were mud covered and tired, but not disheartened. Those going forward appeared resolute, and some were singing. Refugees afoot and in ox carts crowded the fields and roads, seeking safety from this sudden onrush of the enemy. The party passed Riete, a little hamlet where Pope Pius X. was born. A small crossroads church marked the place where he used to be a curate before his elevation to the Papacy.

An air raid took place as the party passed near the church. Five shots were fired, but the raider got away. Knots of soldiers filled the streets and villages as they stood gazing at the black pall of smoke in the east. At the outskirts of the villages there were long lines of chevaux-de-frise ready to obstruct infantry rushes. Along the road toward the front military telegraph lines were strung on the tops of buses, as there had been no time to erect poles.

Panorama of the Battle Front.

The first stop was made at Asolò, ten miles back from the river, where the ancient castle to which Queen Catherine of Cyprus retired on her abdication, located on a high hill, gave a commanding view of the whole panorama of the battle front. The climb to the castle was 700 feet, and from this eminence spread out a peaceful plain to the west and the battleline to the east.

The Piave lay straight ahead. It appeared rather wide at this point, although farther on it was so narrow that it was difficult to believe that a desperate foe could be restrained by such a barrier, even in the face of the Italians' heroic resistance. Across the river five small villages, now held by the enemy, could be seen. Houses, churches, and towers stood out plainly. There were on the plain bordering the east bank for half a mile back, where the foothills rose to high hills, on which the German and Austrian batteries were located. The cannonade had now become heavy and continuous, and bursts of smoke from the hills on the other side of the Piave marked the line of the enemy's batteries.

The route now turned along the west bank of the river, where long lines of peaceful villages had been transformed suddenly by terror of the enemy's bombardment. The townspeople were hastily gathering their belongings together, and the women and children seemed terrified as they hurried away from the sound of the guns. The party passed groups of "arditi," which indicated that the fighting ground was getting very near. "Arditi" is the Italian word for "bold," and these are men who volunteer to risk everything and to push to the extreme front. Their shirt fronts were open, although it was a cold, Autumn day, and they looked the daredevils they are known to be.

Houses all along the road had been turned into temporary field hospitals and marked with improvised signs. Soldiers near one house were carrying flowers, which looked like gayety, but other soldiers, who followed with a funeral wreath, made it look more like death. There were ambulances along the road, but no other sign of wounded. At one village regiments of Alpini were waiting to go forward. Batteries and field guns were also moving down to the river with evergreen boughs screening the guns. The whole western bank of the Piave is lined with beautiful villas and extensive parks filled with statuary.

Shell Falls Near Observers.

The party had now reached a village three miles from the Piave line, and the shelling was continuous. As the army automobile came up the road to the railway station a shell burst squarely in the road one hundred yards ahead.

"They are shelling the road," said the escort as he wheeled the automobile behind the station, where groups of soldiers were crouching in the doorways. One of the fragments of this shell came whizzing toward the station and buried itself in the wall.

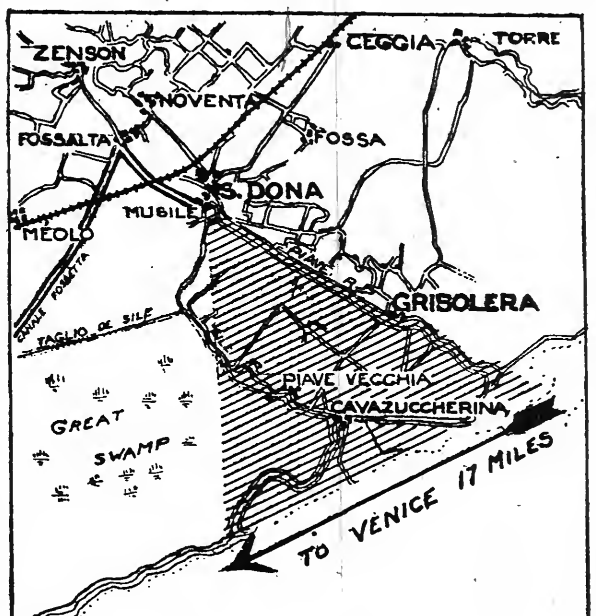
A soldier led the way through a thicket up the side of a hill where an Italian observation post had been established, and from this point of vantage the correspondent looked out on the long lines on both banks of the river. The town of Vidor, now held by General von Below's German troops, was just across the river from the point of observation, and a big German sausage balloon was hanging over the town observing the work of Italian batteries. The campanile of Vidor was distinctly visible, and with field glasses several men could be seen moving about on the outskirts of the town. How this could be with such shelling going on was difficult to understand. The advantage the Germans had at this point was evident, as the hills rose back of the town, giving them a screen for their batteries, which played down on the Italians in the plain on the eastern side of the river.

The actual river bank was now near, and the escort gave a special warning of rifle and machine gun fire in addition to shrapnel from the batteries. The town of Nervesa, on the river's edge, was deserted completely as the party passed down to the wharves, and the silent town had a sepulchral aspect. The roar of artillery was now supplemented by the rattle of "coffee mills," as the soldiers call the machine guns, and the crack of rifle fire.

The Piave a Narrow Barrier.

Officers led the way, creeping in single file into an old warehouse standing on the edge of the Piave River. It had already been a target, and the side toward the river was riddled with machine gun fire. There were two huge shell holes. The great wine vats of the warehouse, still full, had been abandoned in the hasty flight of the villagers. The river at this point is extremely narrow, with a long shoal through the middle, offering the enemy an easy means of getting half way over. The escorting officer said that both channels measured a total of 800 meters, or about half a mile, in width, but the little stream lying at the feet of the observers did not look half as wide as the Delaware River. It seemed narrower than the Chicago Canal as it passes through the city. It appeared trifling as a military barrier, even with the best Italian support. Its narrowness is evident from the fact that those in the party were compelled to speak in whispers for fear of being heard by the enemy on the other side of the stream.

Where Italians Bar Foes' Advance by Floods



By opening the floodgates of the Piave and Sile (or Old Piave) Rivers, Italian military engineers have interposed a water barrier to the Austrian advance upon Venice through the low-lying Adriatic coast region. The area of inundation is approximately represented on the map by a shaded equilateral triangle whose sides are twelve miles long.

From the upper window of the warehouse a long view up and down the river could be had. The Italian front line ran just below the window, and the men could be seen crouching back of the defenses, with rifles ready for the enemy just across this narrow belt of water. The wrecked Priola bridge lay off to the right. It was a link in the main highway running east and west across Venetia, and was a stately structure of masonry and concrete. The spans on both river banks are still good, but the two middle arches are heaps of ruins which showed above the level of the river. Directly in front was the castle of Count Callini, an Austrian nobleman living in Italy, who now unexpectedly finds himself among his countrymen.

Enemy Hemmed in at Zenson.

Further down the river a huge cloud of smoke drifted over Zenson, where the enemy had succeeded in making his first crossing and was now pressed back against the river bank. The fighting at this point had been desperate all through the day. The enemy at first occupied the village with a large number of machine guns. There the Italians attacked them with artillery fire, backed up by infantry rushes. The fighting became desperate, with hand-to-hand struggles, even with knives. The enemy had the advantage of position, as the river makes a sharp bend so that his positions formed an arc on each side of the bend. But, with all their disadvantages, the Italians had steadily forced the enemy back to the cord across the bend, so that they now occupied less than three-quarters of an acre and were hemmed in on all sides. The artillery was concentrating on this enemy party, and it was believed that it would be forced back across the river or thrown into the water.

On the way back the correspondent passed through the deserted city of Treviso, where Generals Foch, Wilson, and Cadorna held the first of the conferences at which plans for French and British co-operation with the Italians were made. The city was abandoned and silent. The town clock had stopped at 9:10 o'clock, although it was 5 in the afternoon when the party passed through.

VENICE NEARLY DESERTED.

Only 20,000 Persons Remain There —Italians May Offer No Defense.

By The Associated Press.

VENICE, Nov. 15, (Delayed.)—Venice is now almost empty, the population having been reduced from the usual 160,000 to 20,000. Despite the proximity of the enemy lines at the mouth of the Piave River and the efforts the Austro-Germans have made to take the long triangle between the mouths of the Piave and Sile Rivers, the remnant of the population is calm.

In case of an attack, it may be that no defense will be made, from apprehension of damage to the monuments and art treasures. The Mayor announced today that he would remain at his post.

The outward appearance of the city is desolate, much as when the Austrians made their last descent upon it more than fifty years ago. All the main hotels, cafés, and factories and the jewelry and glass shops patronized by tourists are closed. The Hotel Royal Danieli, on the Grand Canal, remains partly open, and two well-known cafés on the Piazza of St. Mark—Florian's and the Quadri—are still open. There is nothing open along the Lido.

The city authorities are furnishing trains and ships to take away any of the remaining population who wish to go. The best-known centres, such as the Rialto Bridge, St. Mark's Square, and the square where the gondolas are hired, are now deserted except by a few stragglers. There are five shops open, and they are selling goods at any price to save them from passing into the hands of the enemy. There has been much activity outside the lagoon, and yesterday several guns bombarded the enemy' positions at the mouth of the Piave River.

Some foreign Consuls remain, but most others residing here temporarily have gone. All the palaces along the Grand Canal are closed and the occupants have gone, although a few noble families remain, with the firm purpose of not abandoning the city in any circumstances. All the Government offices have been removed outside the city, but the Government Prefect, Count Ciola, remains at his post.

ALLIES POUR INTO ITALY.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The British correspondent accredited to Italian Headquarters, in a dispatch dated Thursday, says:

"Allied reinforcements are reaching Italy daily in increasing numbers. To save waiting for trains on the congested railway some French troops have been brought across the Alps through the snow-covered passes. The allied troops are marching steadily forward to their appointed places in the Italian scheme of defense.

"Both the British and French troops are in high spirits. They are delighted at the change in scene and over the prospect of a new adventure."

The Daily Mail's correspondent at Italian Headquarters, under date of Friday, tells of the grave difficulties of the Italian defenders on the Trentino mountain frontier, where the same troops day after day are resisting the enemy without opportunity for rest, while the Austro-Germans, having greater reserves, assault incessantly with fresh and vigorous troops. Nevertheless, the correspondent adds, the main bulwarks of the defense remain firm, and presumably it will not be long before the allied help makes itself apparent.

ITALIANS ACCLAIM AMERICA.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Nov. 14, (Delayed.)—Today's session of the Italian Parliament was one of the most impressive in modern Italian history. The diplomatic representatives of all the Allies were present and witnessed the solemn patriotic demonstration which pledged all parties to united action with the Entente Powers and America.

When the name of the United States was spoken by Premier Orlando the members of the assemblage sprang to their feet shouting: "Long live America! Long live the great Republic!"

From all parties come expressions of gratitude to America for the aid extended to the refugees. Ambassador Page and Major Murphy, head of the American Red Cross in Europe, are the recipients of innumerable courtesies.

ROME, Thursday, Nov. 15, (delayed.) —Pope Benedict has asked the Governments of the Central Empires to instruct their military authorities operating west of the Isonzo to follow the rules of international law in respecting the lives and property of civilians and in the protection of women and children, the clergy, hospitals, churches, bishops' palaces, and presbyteries.

The Pontiff also has ordered the Papal Nuncios at Munich and Vienna, if necessary, to appeal personally and directly to Emperor William and Emperor Charles to obtain the fulfillment of his wishes.

WASHINGTON ABANDONS HOPE OF SAVING VENICE

Momentarily Expects Austrian Fleet Bombardment and Loss of the City.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—The fall of Venice is now momentarily expected. That its fate is sealed is the belief of well-informed Italian diplomats in Washington, as well as of close observers of the military situation along the lower Piave.

Information has reached Washington that the Austrians intend to bring their fleet into action, and it is feared that they will use their big guns against Venice. British and Italian monitors, which during the zenith of the Italian successes along the Carso and Bainsizza Plateaus last Summer, participated in the bombardment of Austrian positions along the Hermada Mountains, are now standing off the Litorale di Malamocco, the long and narrow fringe of land that separates the Venetian lagoon from the Adriatic.

When the Italian forces retreated to their present line behind Venice these British and French monitors steamed westward along the coast for the defense of Venice. The information received in Washington indicates that the Austrian fleet may already have left its main base at Pola for its projected naval co-operation with the Austro-German land forces against Venice. The British and Italian monitors are expected to do their best to hold off the Austrian fleet, but it is not thought the bombardment of Venice can be averted if the Austro-German forces determine to risk the enmity of the world by shelling the city.

The Italian army has been making a stubborn and heroic stand against the efforts of the Austro-German forces to cross the lower Piave at a point only twelve miles from Venice and against the wedge that is being steadily driven through the mountains from the direction of Feltre and the Val Sugana, and it is their purpose to delay the German advance toward Venice as long as possible.

But it was learned tonight that it is not the expectation that the present line can be held until he big guns and ammunition being furnished by the British and French Governments arrive, and that the situation has reached the point where it is considered almost a certainty that Venice, Padua, and Vicenza will have to be relinquished to the invaders, in a retirement that will probably take the present Italian line not only to the line of the Brenta, but beyond.

It is expected that the final stand of the Italians cannot be made successfully until the banks of the Adige have been reached. If the guns and ammunition which England and France are straining every nerve to place on the Italian line were now on that front in sufficient quantities the Piave-Feltre-Asiago line might be held. It is not believed that they will reach the Piave line before the Germans succeed in making a crossing of the lower stretches of that river, or in time to avert the necessity for the strategic retirement, which is considered as virtually necessary to save the main forces of the Italian army.

Close scrutiny of the military situation indicates that the Italian Army has been making a stern resistance to the invaders along the Piave line, but the evacuation of this line is now considered to be almost inevitable. The flooding of the triangular area between the lower Piave and the Piave Vecchia Canal is counted upon as being only a temporary check to the invaders.

The Austro-German forces are expected to mass strength against the Zenson loop and make a crossing which will place them within cannon shot of Venice from the land, while the Austrian fleet is understood, according to information reaching Washington, to be on the verge of bringing its big naval guns into action from the Adriatic.

POSTPONE VERDICT ON U-BOAT MENACE

AWAITING THOROUGH TEST

Undersea Campaign Still a Factor, but Has Failed to Starve Out the British.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—American naval experts, it was made plain today, do not agree with the view that the lull in submarine activities indicates a collapse of the U-boat campaign or that anti-submarine measures have proved wholly effective. They agree that progress is being made against the menace but prefer to postpone judgment on whether the U-boat has been eliminated as a factor until the theory has been more thoroughly tested. Meanwhile the American navy will continue its preparation to deal with the menace.

It was said officially at the Navy Department today that there was nothing to forecast the possibility of a very heavy toll of ships next week, or at any subsequent period, and that varying results from week to week still were expected. Secretary Daniels authorized this statement:

"The submarine menace has not proved the decisive factor in the war that the Germans predicted it would be. It has done great harm, which should not be underestimated, and is still a menace. Its purpose was to starve England by August and this, of course, it has failed to do."

The situation is this, as navy officials see it: The effort of the U-boat campaign to starve out Great Britain by Fall of this year has failed. Winter is here and Great Britain has not been starved into submission and is in no immediate danger of being starved. The submarines still constitute, however, a grave menace to vitally necessary sea traffic and every effort to increase protection against them must be made.

Such protection is being increased every month. Additional destroyers are coming into action and building of a great fleet of new American destroyers is proceeding rapidly. Various devices for detecting U-boats are being made more effective and instruments for their destruction are being improved. The convoying system is working out well and will become increasingly efficient as new destroyers and other craft are added.

Secretary Daniels conferred today with Shipping Board officials to adjust the two building programs so as to obtain the maximum results from available facilities. Mr. Daniels said later that the navy and the Board were working in perfect harmony and that every energy was being concentrated on the production of destroyers and merchant ships.

U-BOATS STILL MENACE ALLIES, SAYS GEDDES

Warns Against Overconfidence Because of Fewer Sinkings; Says Shipbuilding Must Be Rushed.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—In reply to a question in the House of Commons today, Sir Eric Geddes, First Lord of the Admiralty, said:

"The good return of tonnage sinking by enemy submarines last week and, indeed, the comparatively favorable result of the last two months ought not to be taken as indicating that the submarine menace is a thing of the past or defeated."

Sir Eric recalled his recent speech in the House of Commons, in which he said the enemy's attack on British trade was being held but had not been defeated, that the Germans were building submarines faster than the British were destroying them, but that with improved methods he looked for the eventual defeat of this menace. He also reminded his hearers he had said mercantile marine tonnage was not being maintained against the depredations of submarines.

"I see no reason in what has happened since, or in the favorable results of the last week," he continued, "to qualify or modify in any way what I have said as publicly as possible, that the calls upon the merchant shipping of the world for waging war are so great that nothing should be left unsaid or undone which will bring home to the people of this and allied countries that economy in everything which is seaborne has a direct, vital, and early result in the successful prosecution of the war; that shipyards are short of men and women and that all labor which can be saved from unnecessary work and diverted to the shipyards will have a direct effect on winning the war. I ask the House and the country not to be lifted up or cast down by one good or one bad week or month in tonnage sinkings.

"The steady downward curve since April shows that we hold and for the present are mastering the submarine. The rise in merchant shipbuilding at present, and proposed, shows we are counteracting the enemy's efforts. But I repeat that we must have increased output in marine engine shops and shipyards."

WAR DISPATCHES SAVED BY AMERICAN WOMAN

Captain Stanley Wilson Tells How Passenger Foiled Searchers From an Austrian Submarine.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The story of how an American woman saved important British dispatches when the vessel on which they were being carried to Malta was held up by an Austrian submarine, was told today by Captain Stanley Wilson, who was carrying the dispatches and was taken prisoner by the Austrians and only recently released.

Captain Wilson told the Military Court which investigated his capture that he threw one bag overboard, but it did not sink, as he had supposed it would. Thereupon he was approached by an American woman traveling on the steamer, who offered to take charge of the other bags, saying she wished to do something for England.

"It was a great responsibility," said Captain Wilson, "but I took it, and my action was justified, as the bags reached London."

The bags were hidden by the American woman until the Austrians had concluded their search of the steamer.

PUNISHED TEACHERS SUPPORTED BY UNION

Those Suspended and Transferred Did Not Get Square Deal, Organization Says.

SCHOOLMASTERS FOR BOARD

They Want All Disloyalty Stamped Out—Charges to be Made Against Superintendent Tildsley.

The Teachers' Union, at a meeting held last night at the Washington Irving High School, passed a resolution declaring that the three teachers who were suspended and the six who were transferred from the De Witt Clinton High School had not received a "square deal" from the Board of Education when they were accused of disloyalty, and they voted to give those teachers "legal, moral, and financial support."

Another resolution was passed calling for the appointment of a committee of three to formulate charges against John L. Tildsley, Associate Superintendent of Schools, "for holding views subversive of discipline in the schools and which undermine good citizenship." The resolution was based on a statement made by one of the teachers who declared that Dr. Tildsley asked him: "Do you not think that the German system of education, which after all does achieve efficiency, should be introduced in New York?" Dr. Tildsley denied on Thursday that he had asked this question. The accusation against Dr. Tildsley is framed in the words he used in the charge against the three suspended teachers.

Two of the suspended teachers, A. Henry Schneer and Samuel Schmalhausen, and four of the transferred teachers related their version of the interviews at which Dr. John L. Tildsley, Associate Superintendent of Schools, obtained much of the evidence against them. Bernard Parelhoof, a teacher of mathematics, who was one of the twenty questioned by Dr. Tildsley, but who was not transferred, was one of the speakers last night. Describing his experience, Mr. Parelhoof declared: "I believe that the High School Committee is trying, under cover of the flag and of patriotism, to stab to death the movement for democracy in the schools."

Mr. Schneer said that he had been interviewed three times by Dr. Tildsley, the interviews lasting respectively two, three, and five hours. Miss Cornelia Cleaveland, one of the transferred teachers, said that at the Board of Education meeting she was condemned for disloyalty on "one-half of one question" asked in an interview that lasted an hour and a half.

In a formal statement made yesterday by Mr. Schneer and Mr. Schmalhausen, they gave the chronological account of the events as they saw them that led up to their suspension and charged the Board of Education with "coercive and unwarranted attempts adopted last Spring in an endeavor to extort a paper allegiance to the Government."

"Some of the most loyal teachers," the statement added, "refused to sign Mayor Mitchel's so-called loyalty pledge because they deemed it a humiliating interference with constitutionally guaranteed rights attaching to free American citizenship. The 'disloyalty' issue raised its hideous head at the insidious call of the self-righteous, spread-eagle patriots."

The statement referred to the protests made by the high school students against the longer school day, declaring that "every one who was present at the hearing was outraged by the bullying methods of the Chairman of the High Schools Committee, John Whalen." Dr. Tildsley is accused in the statement of trying to stave off criticism of the longer school day by making "a drive against the radicals."

"The spirit of the Clinton students is very free and in the direction of the most open-minded liberalism,' the statement said. "Dr. Tildsley is of the persuasion that this free spirit of inquiry, analysis, and discussion is detrimental to those more ancient qualities of deference, reverence, instinctive respect, which characterized American citizens of several generations ago.

"If he can make out a hysterically satisfactory case against a few of the radicals he hopes to be able to thwart the rapidly growing movement known as the Teachers' Union. By introducing the befuddling, irrelevant issues of patriotism, loyalty, and Liberty bonds he hopes to arouse among the self-styled loyalists a sufficiently emotional mob spirit to guarantee the speedy removal or at least the persecution and humiliation of all those who champion the rights of the teachers as against official superiors who seek by numerous powerful means to thwart the movement toward democracy in education. The teachers ask only that they be heard in the presence of an enlightened jury free from the taint of what two of the members of the board have called 'mob spirit.'"

It is believed that the trial of the suspended teachers will be postponed from Tuesday to Friday because of the time necessary to prepare the case by the counsel to the Board of Education. The situation in the high schools yesterday attracted the attention of a number of organizations. Frank S. Hackett, Secretary of the Schoolmasters' Association of New York and Vicinity, announced last night that a resolution had been passed at a meeting where seventy-five members were present "approving the action of the Board of Education and expressing the hope that the efforts to suppress disloyal influences in the schools will be energetically sustained."

The Central Federated Union, at a meeting in Labor Temple, unanimously passed a resolution demanding, "in the interests of justice and of the schools, that the charges made against the teachers be definitely formulated by a committee of responsible officials, and that a copy of the charges be given to each of the teachers transferred or suspended, and that the charges be heard in public."

There was indignation among residents of Long Island when they learned that Cornelia Cleaveland, one of the transferred teachers, was assigned to the Bryant High School. It was said that if a teacher is to be disciplined for disloyalty she should not have been sent to Bryant High School, which is in a section which has sent more than its quota of men to the war.

WANTS FOE ENLIGHTENED.

Should Get President's Buffalo Speech, Says Staats-Zeitung.

Referring to the report from Washington that arrangements were to be made to see that copies of President Wilson's speech before the American Federation of Labor Convention at Buffalo were distributed broadcast among the soldiers of the Central Powers, the New Yorker Staats-Zeitung says:

"It would no doubt be of great value if this speech by the President, unabridged, were to be given publicity in the territory of the Central Powers and closely studied, especially in authoritative circles. Then the people over there would get a picture of the situation in circles that count here, and at the same time they would become convinced that President Wilson is the principal factor which the Central Powers have to take into account."

PREDICTS PEACE IN A YEAR.

Sir George H. Reid Says Drive on Italy Is Grave Disaster.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 16.—The end of the war will come in twelve months as a result of a racial and social upheaval in Austria-Hungary, in the opinion of Sir George H. Reid, former Premier of Australia.

"I think the drive on Italy is one of the worst disasters of the war," said Sir George, "and but for it there would have been a quick end to all the trouble. Austria was crumbling. Germany had to summon all her power to hold her ally on her feet. But I call on you to notice that when the Allies advance on the west front they hold what they gain."

hands in the last three days. Adherents of Premier Kerensky first occupied it after a short conflict and continued to advance and were reported at one time as being within five miles of Petrograd.

"According to a Maximalist account, in the fighting at Alexandrofsky station an armored train, commanded by Kerensky forces, opened fire against the Bolsheviki ranks with guns and machine-guns, but the attack was not successful.

"Cossacks attempted to advance near Pulkova, but were promptly checked by armored cars with machine-guns. Maximalist scouts reported that Kerensky Cossacks were so few in number that when they went forth to fight they were able to leave only small parties in Tsarskoe Selo."

Another bearing Tuesday's date reads: "Dispatches from Kiev say that the Cossacks and Military Cadets are in control in that city after considerable street fighting. The Bolsheviki made a stand at the Government Palace, where later their leaders were arrested. While a patrol of Cossacks was passing through Kretchka Street, the principal thoroughfare, they fired shots in the air to disperse the crowds. A bomb was thrown upon a passing street car, killing or wounding several persons.

"Moscow advices are to the effect that the Government troops control the central portion of the city and the Bolsheviki the outlying districts, where there is much disorder. The victims in the street battle are estimated at from 700 to 2,000."

A dispatch from Petrograd to Reuter's Limited, dated Monday last, says that 1,500 Cossacks were killed or wounded in fighting that occurred near Alexandrofsky station, five miles southeast of Petrograd. This information came from a Maximalist source.

A message from the British Minister, dated Petrograd, Tuesday, via Haparanda, and received last evening, reported "All well here." Another message from Haparanda reports a certain amount of guerrilla warfare in Petrograd, and declares the city was in control of the Bolsheviki, whose soldiers were without officers. The telegraph and telephone offices had been wrecked, the message added.

Copenhagen today sent the following: "A dispatch to the Politiken from Haparanda reports that, according to the latest advices, barricade fighting is taking place in Petrograd."

The following, dated today, came from Stockholm:

"Despite the re-establishment of telegraphic communication with Petrograd, only a few messages have been received, and these dated Monday or Tuesday. Because of the general strike in Finland, preventing travel, another source of news has been cut off."

Attempts to Reach Agreement.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAPARANDA, Nov. 16.—The situation in Russia continues very chaotic. The Bolsheviki seem still to be masters of Petrograd but their power is tottering. Meanwhile the demand for a socialistic joint government grows stronger and the desire that the shedding of blood should be brought to an end is universal. All the social parties have formed a committee to prepare a scheme for a new government and in expectation of this the Russian Union of Railwaymen put off the railway strike that it had proclaimed.

It seems, however, difficult to reach an agreement. Maxim Gorky in the Novaya Zhizu writes that the Bolsheviki, by accepting the socialistic coalition, have done their best for the peaceful solution of the conflict, and if such a solution is not reached the responsibility for the continuation of civil war falls on the elements which in the so-called Committee for the Preservation of the Revolution, and at the headquarters of Kerensky are mobilising the Cossacks against the Bolsheviki troops and the workers' guards.

This paper calls upon Kerensky to lay down his weapons and hand in his mandate as a Premier and to leave it to the democratic parties to form a democratic government with the motto, "Peace and land and the constituent assembly."

Other non-Bolshevik papers write that the nation is not prepared to capitulate either to the Bolsheviki or to Rodzianko and Kaledinis. It is confirmed that the Bolshviki have summoned large bodies of troops from inland to Petrograd.

Trotsky called on the British Ambassador, but was not received.

RUSSIAN TROOPS AID FINNISH COUP D'ETAT

Socialists Seize All Official Institutions and Dissolve the Senate and Diet.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAPARANDA, Nov. 16.—The Socialists in Finland on Thursday effected a coup d' état, supported by Russian (Maximalist?) soldiers. They captured the telegraphs and all official institutions. After doing that they proceeded to the Senate, which they declared dissolved. Even the Diet was dissolved and the old Diet, with its Socialist majority, will soon be summoned. A new Senate is to be formed under the leadership of Tokoi and consisting of Socialists.

The coup passed without any disturbances, the non-Socialists deciding not to resist the superior force. Feeling in Finland is, however, very excited.

A general strike was proclaimed Wednesday. It started at Helsingfors in the evening and on Thursday had extended over the whole country. Even railwaymen are participating.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Reuter's Stockholm correspondent says advices received from Haparanda are to the effect that all work has ceased throughout Finland and that no telegrams or trains are being dispatched.

FRANCIS'S MESSAGES HELD.

One Cipher Cablegram Filed Nov. 12 Reaches State Department.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—A very general official description of the situation as it existed in Petrograd five days ago reached the State Department today in a cipher cablegram from David R. Francis, the American Ambassador at the Russian capital. The message, which was filed at Petrograd Monday, Nov. 12, was relayed through from Stockholm under yesterday's date.

During their control of Petrograd the Bolsheviki are believed to have held up the confidential cipher dispatches filed by Ambassador Francis, for the message received from him today stated that he had filed code messages daily between Nov. 5 and Nov. 12. None of the intermediate messages, it was explained by State Department officials, had yet reached that department. If these messages were sent from the telegraph office at Petrograd by the operators in charge during the ascendency of the Bolsheviki revolutionists they have not come through from Stockholm.

The dispatch received today telling briefly of events in Petrograd on Nov. 11 and 12 said that the Bolsheviki were then in control, that fighting was in progress in the streets between the Bolsheviki on one side and the cadets and junkers on the other, but that the Bolsheviki forces appeared to lack leadership. The Bolsheviki were in charge of the administration of the Government in Petrograd, but the Ambassador said that up to the time he had filed his dispatches they had not communicated orally or in writing with him or the other foreign embassies in the capital, and appeared to be engrossed in the internal affairs of Russia to the exclusion of foreign affairs.

In the absence of later information from Ambassador Francis the State Department is unable to understand what is occurring in Russia, and appears to be unable to communicate with its representatives there except for occasional messages that filter through in delayed form like that received from the Ambassador today.

ENEMY ALIENS FACE CLOSER SUPERVISION

New Regulations Likely to Call for Registration of All Germans in This Country.

MUST REPORT REGULARLY

Hunt for Spies in Every Part of the United States—Women Will Also Be Watched.

New enemy alien regulations which will mark a long advance in the control of the movements of German subjects in the United States will probably be promulgated by President Wilson in the next few days. These regulations among other things are expected to call for the registration of every enemy alien in the United States, of whom there are more than 130,000 above the age of 14 years in New York City alone.

How the registration of the great number of resident enemy subjects will be accomplished is understood to have been worked out by the Federal authorities, but no details of the plan have been made public. It is quite probable that New York City registrants will be required to report at certain designated periods to the authorities, probably to the police Captain commanding the precinct in which they reside. That women as well as men will be registered is said to be a phase of the question under consideration. Some of the most active German spies in the United States are believed to be women.

The control of the waterfronts of all American ports, which will be the most important feature of the new regulations, is also said to have been worked out and the plan proposed is understood to have been submitted to the President for his final approval. It was suggested some weeks ago that the waterfronts of the principal cities be made military zones. Whether this is the plan which has been adopted remains an official secret.

That several prominent German subjects who have been permitted to remain at liberty up to the present time will probably be ordered interned when the new regulations become effective is likely to be one of the developments of the near future. Among these enemy aliens are several men who were close to Bernstorff when he was directing plots against the United States and countries with which the United States are now allied. One of these Germans was the paymaster of the Bolo Pacha plot to corrupt public opinion in France.

The hunt for German spies is now on in earnest. Every secret service agency of the Government is co-operating in the work, which calls for the detection not only of German subjects who are working in this country for their fatherland, but also for the subjects of countries with which Germany is allied who are known to form important cogs in the Teuton spy machine operating in the United States.

Several weeks ago the War Department is known to have called upon the commanding officers of all units in the regular, National Guard, and national armies to make an investigation of their commands and to report back, whether those commands contained any men whose loyalty to the country was matter which should be investigated. It is said that in some cantonments the reports state that there are more than 100 men whose loyalty is doubtful and who should be dropped from the army or arrested and interned.

Another matter which is receiving the attention of the authorities and which is expected to result in action being taken in the next few days concerns certain publications which have been bitterly attacking the military policies of the United States and in some instances openly advising men of draft age to defy the draft laws. It was reported yesterday that a certain weekly paper, which is identified with the Sinn Fein movement in this country, may be ordered excluded from the mail before another week passes. The activities of one of the editors of this paper are now the subject of a Federal investigation.

Harry Lataner of 171 Forsyth Street, who is listed by the police as a soapbox orator, was arraigned before Magistrate Murphy in the Yorkville Court yesterday charged with making seditious utterances against the United States. It was the second time within a week that Lataner had been arrested on the same charge.

"After my advice to you," said Magistrate Murphy, "that you be more careful in the future you are here again today to answer to this serious charge. I am informed that in addition to making violent criticism of our Government you also denounced the courts and said that you did not believe in freedom and liberty."

Magistrate Murphy held Lataner in $1,500 for examination on Monday.

Thomas Kiey, a German employed in Christ Hospital, Jersey City, was arrested by Secret Service agents yesterday and interned at Ellis Island. Kiey was formerly employed by the Hamburg-American Steamship Line.

NEW SPY WARNINGS POSTED.

"Secrecy Means Safety," Is Caution at All Navy Yards.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Renewed warnings against spies have been posted at all navy yards and stations. Placards headed "Beware of Spies" have been posted, reading as follows:

"Don't talk about what you have done or are going to do. The enemy has ears everywhere.

"Don't discuss naval affairs or the movement of ships, their cargoes or courses with strangers or foreigners.

"Don't trust any one you do not know. Enemy spies at home and abroad will try to draw you into arguments and entrap you into telling them about the movement of ships, their cargoes, the courses steered and the steps taken to defend our ships.

"Don't forget to report at once any person who tries to get information from you or any one else in your hearing.

"Don't forget that your want of care may help the enemy and lead to the loss of American ships and the deaths of their crews.

"Secrecy means safety."

BURLESON CHARGES PLOT.

Replies to Suit of Victor Berger's Barred Newspaper.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Postmaster General Burleson's answer to the suit of the Milwaukee Leader, Victor Berger, editor, to compel the restoration of second-class mailing privileges canceled by the Post Office because of publications alleged to be in violation of the Espionage act, was filed today with the local Supreme Court.

Besides contending that the discretional power imposed in the Postmaster General by the law is not subject to review or revocation by a court, Mr. Burleson's answer reiterates the charge that the Milwaukee Leader published articles designed to hamper the Government in the conduct of the war and makes the general charge that the Post Office has evidences of an organized propaganda throughout the country to embarrass the Government, and that a certain class of publications is daily "accomplishing results in clear violation of the law.' The Milwaukee Leader, Mr. Burleson charges, is among them.

CALLS WILSON FLATTERING.

Cologne Gazette Says That Buffalo Speech Is Futile.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 16.—Commenting on President Wilson's speech at Buffalo, the Cologne Gazette asks whom Wilson is flattering, and what he gains by it.

"Is he really so foolish," says the paper, "as to imagine that he can tear apart with a few American-English phrases brothers in arms who have fought loyally on the field of bloodshed? How little he knows us, we have long known; that he knows our friends as little, and estimates them falsely, we now learn."

The Weser Zeitung says that President Wilson is in error if he thinks Germany will negotiate with any Power about Alsace-Lorraine.

CONVOYED SHIP LOST; REPORT HELD BACK

The Kansas City's Disappearance Disclosed Only by an Anxious Father's Inquiries.

MUIR, SIGNAL MAN, MISSING

Creel Urges Centralizing Navy's Casualty Announcements as Result of Incident.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—A reform in handling official reports to the Navy Department concerning torpedoed or missing ships and naval casualty lists has been recommended as a result of a lax method in connection with information from Vice Admiral Sims at London concerning the loss of the convoyed steamer Kansas City.

The Kansas City sailed from an Atlantic port Aug. 30, with other freight transports, under naval convoy. She became separated from the other ships at sea Sept. 5. Since that time nothing has been learned as to the fate of the Kansas City, which is believed to have joined the list of merchant vessels that have been sunk without trace by German submarines.

There was a first-class signal man of the United States Navy on board the Kansas City, the son of a prominent resident of Baltimore. This young man, the only representative of the navy on the convoyed steamer, is given up for lost with the ship.

Officers in the Navy Department have been aware of these facts. How long they have been known could not be ascertained today. But it was not until today that any announcement was authorized by the Government, and it came only after the father of the missing navy man on the Kansas City had forced the hand of the Government by laying his case before the newspapers of Baltimore. Even then the only announcement authorized by the department contained less information than the father had given last night to the Baltimore newspapers.

Belated Announcement of Loss.

Here is the official announcement as issued by the Committee on Public Information shortly after noon today, when it had been ferreted out of the Navy Department by representatives of that bureau on the basis of information from the Baltimore newspapers:

"The Navy Department has received no information of the steamer Kansas City since she was reported separated from the convoy Sept. 5. She is now believed to have been lost at sea. J. H. A. Muir, first-class signal man, assigned to duty on the Kansas City, was the only navy man on board. His next of kin is his father, John Allison Muir, 26 Mary Mount Road, Roland Park, Md."

Although letters sent by the family of Muir to the young sailor were returned from the New York Post Office with the indorsement "officially reported lost," and although the father asserted that an officer of the Bureau of Navigation of the Navy Department informed him by long distance telephone from Washington yesterday that young Muir was on the Kansas City, and that Vice Admiral Sims had officially reported that the Kansas City had been posted by Lloyd's in London as lost, responsible officers of the Navy Department were insisting last night that nothing had been received regarding the loss of young Muir and of the convoyed freighter.

It was even insisted that no such information as the father had received from an officer of the Bureau of Navigation at 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, had, or could have been sent to him, because the Navy Department was in possession of no information bearing on the case.

Father Persists in Inquiries.

On the basis of such flat denials, newspapers this morning were informed that the Navy Department was without knowledge of the information that had been given to the father by an officer of the Bureau of Navigation, and the statement was published on the basis of official suggestion that the message delivered to the father in Baltimore was "a fake." But the father, anxious to establish whether his son was dead or alive, and certain of the statements he had made to the Baltimore newspapers last night, refused to allow the case to rest there. This morning he told the Baltimore afternoon newspapers that information had been delivered to him by long distance telephone from Washington by a man who said he was connected with the Bureau of Navigation of the Navy Department and whose name sounded like "Farley" over the telephone.

This information was communicated by these newspapers to the Committee on Public Information with the result that nearly two hours later, after having established the fact that there was an officer named Farley connected in a responsible capacity with the Navy Department, the committee was able to make public the authorized statement given out at 12:30 o'clock as prepared after several conferences with the official naval censor. Investigation of the case developed that Lieut. Commander Farley of the enlisted personnel division of the Bureau of Navigation, was the officer who had communicated by telephone yesterday afternoon to Mr. Muir, the father of the young man, in Baltimore, that Admiral Sims had reported the Kansas City as missing.

Lieut. Commander Farley did not communicate this information except in response to a previous long distance telephone appeal from Mr. Muir seeking information regarding his son.

Muir a Baltimore Athlete.

Young Muir was 22 years old, and received his education at the Friends School and the Polytechnic Institute in Baltimore, where he was a member of the Mount Washington lacrosse team, and well known in athletic circles. He one of the participants arrested April 1 was in Baltimore at the demonstration made at the pacifists' meeting held at the Academy of Music in that city.

Muir was a member of the Maryland Naval Militia. After the United States entered the war and he was called to the colors, he was sent to New York. Letters had been written to him by his parents, but brought no reply until last Tuesday afternoon, when the father received a package of letters from the New York City Post Office. The letters were in officially marked Post Office envelopes, which contained the indorsement: "Officially reported lost; no further record; mail returned."

The father immediately communicated by long distance telephone with the Brooklyn Navy Yard and with Washington, and was told, he asserts, that his son had been transferred to duty with the armed guard detail for freight vessels being convoyed to Europe. He then took further steps to get news of his son, with the result already told.

When the developments in the case were brought to the attention of George Creel, Chairman of the Committee on Public Information, he said that as a result of the experience he had recommended that the Navy Department detail an officer to centralize the handling of information regarding casualties, missing ships and torpedoed vessels. The War Department has centralized this work in a casualty bureau, but there is no such centralization in the Navy Department.

That the Navy Department has not been in possession of the fact that the Kansas City had become separated from her convoy is not credited. The fact that this particular vessel had disappeared en route to Europe must necessarily have been reported.

Young Muir was the only American naval man on the Kansas City. It was his duty to handle signals between the Kansas City and the naval vessels acting as convoy for the group of vessels that were being guarded. The Kansas City was a British steamship of 2,346 tons gross.

Sixth of Family Lost in the War.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 16.—J. Allison Muir, Jr., the Maryland naval militiaman, who was lost with the freighter Kansas City, was the sixth member of his family to die in the present war. Norman R. M. Just, son of his father's sister, who enlisted in the Fifty-first Canadian Infantry, was killed at Ypres in 1916. Since that time four cousins have been killed in France.

Captain MacDonald Marling of Canada, uncle of young Muir, was invalided home a year ago after being "gassed." He is again on active duty with the British forces in Egypt.

Two of the family lost their lives in the Boer war.

CLASH ON THE AILETTE REPORTED BY BERLIN

French Detachments Which Worked Across the River Are Repulsed, It is Stated.

BERLIN, Nov. 16.—German troops in the Aisne region in northern France counterattacked and drove back yesterday French parties which had worked their way beyond the Ailette River into the German advanced line, Army Headquarters announced today. The statement on the Western front operations reads:

In the Flanders fighting region the artillery duel increased in intensity in the early morning, as it did also on the Ailette and the eastern bank of the Meuse. French detachments which in the morning fog had penetrated beyond the Ailette into our advanced post line were repulsed by a counterthrust.

With all the armies the fighting activity was slight throughout the day. In the evening it revived near Dixmude and south of St. Quentin.

Since Nov. 9 our enemies have lost twenty-four airplanes in aerial encounters and by anti-aircraft fire.

This bulletin was issued tonight:

Active bombardments have taken place on our front in Belgium, in Champagne, in the region of Mont Teton, and also on the right bank of the Meuse.

PARIS, Nov. 16.—A German attack in Belgium was repulsed last night by the French, according to the War Office. The official statements says:

In Belgium the Germans attempted to capture one of our points of support north of Veldhoek. The attack was repulsed completely and appreciable losses were inflicted upon the enemy.

The night was calm on the remainder of the front, except on the right bank of the Meuse, (Verdun front,) where heavy artillery firing continues.

German aviators bombarded the region south of Nancy. There were no victims

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Only raiding operations on the British front in France and Belgium are reported in today's official statement. It reads:

Worcestershire troops made a successful raid last night northeast of Fampoux.

A hostile reconnoitering party which endeavored to approach our lines north of Poelcappelle was repulsed.

There is nothing further of special interest to report.

The night report says:

There has been intense artillery activity during today on both sides of the battle front, particularly in the neighborhood of Passchendaele. Our patrols brought in a few prisoners. On the remainder of the front there is nothing of special interest to report.

An official communication issued by the War Office tonight dealing with aerial operations, says:

During the early part of Thursday a heavy ground mist considerably hampered aerial observation. Later in the day the mist partly cleared and considerable activity ensued in the air. Many targets were successfully engaged by our artillery with the aid of aerial observation, and a number of reconnoissances carried out by our airplanes.

On the battlefront our low-flying machines engaged several ground targets with machine gun fire. Hostile airplanes dropped a few bombs on our side of the line.

In air fighting, five hostile airplanes were downed and one was driven down out of control. Another German machine was shot down by our anti-aircraft guns. Four of our machines failed to return.

DUTCH EXPECT DEAL FOR GIVING UP SHIPS

Regard Arrangement With America as Necessary—Swedish Steamer Freed at Baltimore.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 16.—President Van Aalst of the Overseas Trust and the Netherlands Trading Society, speaking of the negotiations between the United States and neutral Europeans by which the latter will give up cargo space in exchange for foodstuffs, said:

"I think the ice has been broken, and, if published reports are correct, arrangements can be made satisfactorily."

asked why it was necessary for the Netherlands to continue to export food to Germany, he said: "It is simply a matter of exchange of foodstuffs for raw materials, absolutely imperative for the maintenance of our economic life. We must have coal, iron, steel, salt, cement, and chemicals. Although England offered us 100,000 tons of coal monthly, it was impossible to accept it, owing to the transport difficulties, the risk, and expense. We need 800,000 tons monthly. Notwithstanding the fact that Holland is now receiving 250,000 tons a month from Germany, many of our factories are already closed. Without raw materials all our factories must close and our industries must be suspended."

Mynheer Van Aalst was asked if he did not consider that steps which Germany now proposes to take in regard to Dutch shipbuilding by putting an embargo on ships built or repaired with German materials was economic war on Holland, and replied:

"If this pressure should be much increased it would certainly amount to economic war and our shipbuilders are too independent to consent to the condition that Germany should have any control over Dutch shipping during or after the war."

Regarding the question of foodstuffs for Belgian relief, Van Aalst said that should there be a serious shortage of food in Holland, difficulties might arise with regard to the transportation of large quantities of food through Holland to Belgium.

A Foreign Office official, speaking to your correspondent, appeared to think that the negotiations with America were progressing favorably and expressed the hope that decisions would soon be reached.

The semi-official Nieuwe Courant says that, as dispatches painted the situation repeatedly, conditions appeared to be worse than they really were. The paper sees obstacles in America's condition regarding the export of Netherlands home products to Germany, and asserts that the question of raw materials is not even touched on.

The pro-German Vaderland says that the news from America signified "that an armada is to be assembled in order to transport troops and war material for the Allies. We have long thought that it would never come to this, but since the agreement with Japan, all doubts have been dispelled. They have given Japan's proposal precedence owing to the zeal for victory over the Central Empires."

The Handelsblad remarks that it is certainly not agreeable for Holland to be obliged to give her shipping for American use, but in the other eventuality the ships would have remained in America until the end of the war, and from two ills the Government must choose the lesser, as the Netherlands will at least get grain and other necessities.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 16.—The clearance today of a Swedish steamer for a home port with a cargo of grain marked the first ship of that nation allowed to leave Baltimore in several months. The British Vice Consul will inspect the steamer tomorrow before she sails to see that mail and other matter that might reach Germany is not on board. It is understood that several United States Government officials will accompany the vessel to the Capes.

DANIELS PRAISES SHIPBUILDERS' WORK

Tells Marine Architects Navy Has Made Giant Strides Toward Winning War.

RESULTS ARE STUPENDOUS

More Progress in Building Destroyers in 18 Months Than in the Previous 25 Years.

The heads of many of the greatest shipbuilding companies, men who stand at the front of the marine engineering profession, distinguished naval architects, officers of the American, British, and Japanese navies gathered last night at the twenty-fifth annual dinner of the American Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers and heard Secretary of the Navy Daniels state in the name of the Government that the burden which now rests upon the shoulders of the men of the shipbuilding industry is the greatest ever placed on the shoulders of the men of any industry in the history of the United States. They met the Secretary halfway when he declared that he knew they would be able to shoulder their burden and that with the Federal Government behind them they would solve the problem which would win the war, namely the problem of ships.

The dinner was served in the grand ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria, and the guests, in addition to the Secretary, were Rear Admiral Capps, General Manager of the Emergency Ship Corporation; Commanders Bridges and Coates of the British Navy, Commander Nomura, Naval Attaché of the Japanese Embassy; Commandant Bertholt of the United States Coast Guard Service, Commander Sparrow, U. S. N.; Vice President Joseph W. Powell of the Bethlehem Ship Building Corporation, and Naval Constructor F. L. Fernald, U. S. N. Lieut. Commander Stevenson Taylor, U. S. N. R., President of the society, presided.

Behind the speakers' table were draped the flags of all the allied nations, and Commander Stevenson announced, after he had proposed the toast to the President, that for the first time in its history the society would honor the rulers of other nations, in this instance the heads of the countries with which the United States are allied.

The dinner developed many pleasant surprises of an informatory nature—that is, surprises so far as the average man is concerned.

For instance, Mr. Powell said that while the American output of merchant tonnage for the year now ending would be about 750,000 tons, there was reason to hope that it would total more than 3,000,000 tons in 1918. As for the navy, he declared that the progress made in the line of construction in a few months was a story so marvelous that it was doubtful if the average citizen would believe it.

Secretary Daniels also cited the wonderful progress which has marked the work of the navy since America went to war, and pointed out that today America was building more destroyers every eighteen months than in times of peace was thought possible of construction in twenty-five years. The Secretary paid a glowing tribute to the shipbuilders of the nation, who to a man, he said, were backing the Government to the very limit in the accomplishment of the great task which must be completed if the war is to be won.

"It will be completed and the war will be won," he said. "I have made it a rule these months we have been at war never to attend any public dinners, but this is a naval dinner, and so it is an exception. In our country we read every day in the headlines about what is going to win the war. If Mr. McAdoo does the talking, he says that money will win it.

"If Mr. Hoover is the person quoted he points out that food will win, and urges wheatless and meatless days, while Mr. Willard, when he has anything to say, points out that transportation is the key to the situation. All this is very well, and I am glad they see things in a magnified way, for it is well that we should realize that the task is tremendous, and that every one must do his share, be that to save money, or food, or work or something else.

"But, be all this as it may, you know and I know that ships are going to win this war. The farmer has won our everlasting gratitude by producing a record crop, but without ships those crops will be of no service to our boys in the trenches and our allies over there.

"You, gentlemen, gathered here tonight are charged with the most gigantic task ever placed on the shoulders of any body of men in the history of America. We have no doubt whatever but the shipbuilders of America, and the countries allied with America, will win out in this struggle, but yet let no man minimize the menace that faces us.

"Some months ago, when it became apparent to all the world that the most effective weapon for the defeat of the submarine was the destroyer, and our country had entered the struggle, we decided to build the destroyers and to win this war if it took the last man and the last dollar we possessed to do it.

"We consulted with the great firms who had been building our destroyers in other years and we put before them the great task we wished them to shoulder. The shipbuilders listened and they told us that they could do the job and I want to say here, tonight, that they are doing it and to illustrate what I mean I may state that today we are building more destroyers every eighteen months than we were able to build in twenty-five years before the war.

"Today America is united. We are no longer Democrats and Republicans. All Democrats are Republicans and all the Republicans are Democrats now. Sectionalism has disappeared forever and our boys are being trained for service at Camp Grant in Illinois and at Camp Lee in Virginia. Only yesterday a vast part of our people thought only in terms of the United States. Today we think in a different way. You, Sir, the naval attaché of Japan and your brothers of Japan, are my brothers. On every Fourth of July for one hundred years we raised the eagle and twisted the lion's tail, but today the men of America and the men of Britain are brothers in arms fighting in a common cause. As for France, every American was born loving France. And we are brothers, too, of the struggling Italians, who are battling today to keep the Huns from the Eternal City.

"I came here tonight to thank you in the name of our Government for the spirit with which you have come into this great work. I want to say that when this war is won, and as sure as there is a God above us it will be won, and when our armies and navy come home with victory I shall insist that you, the shipbuilding men of America, shall march in that great victorious column, for than you no men will have done more to have made that victory possible."

Rear Admiral Capps, the next speaker, was reminiscent in most of his speech. He referred briefly to the work of the Emergency Shipping Corporation, and said that co-operation of all concerned was the answer to the huge problems which faced that board. He added that he believed that co-operation would be attained, and the great fleet that is planned would be built. Contracts were now let, he said, for more than 800 ships of a tonnage of more than 2,000,000.

Mr. Powell, the last speaker, said that the time for criticism in America had passed.

"I want to say," he said, "that if some one had said one year ago that what has been accomplished by the navy in the last seven months could be accomplished, no one would have believed it. What Secretary Daniels, Rear Admiral Taylor, the Chief of Construction; Rear Admiral McGowan, and the other able officers who surround the Secretary have accomplished in these seven months can be described as nothing short of marvelous. No better relationship than that which exists between the Navy Department and the shipbuilders at the present time could be possible. Do you know that at two sittings of a total of less than four hours' time the greatest contract in the history of the world was signed to the satisfaction of every one concerned?"

Mr. Powell referred to the labor situation as one of the serious problems facing the country.

"The performance in the ship industry in these coming twelve months," he said, "will be the performance of labor. I am a believer in the American working man and I firmly believe that the big labor leaders are as patriotic a body of men as there is in this country. But some of the lesser leaders are not so alive to their duties to their country in this crisis. Only a few weeks ago 1,200 of our mechanics at Quincy went on strike without saying one word to us as to their grievance. We were ready to meet them and readily agreed to arbitration, yet the fact remains that we lost one vital week and that week can never be gotten back."

At the afternoon session of the architects Simon Lake, the inventor, urged that a large fleet of cargo-carrying submarines be built to insure transportation of food to our troops in Europe. He also declared that the only reason Germany had not blockaded our coast with submarines was because Germany did not wish to create any more animosities in America.

BRITISH IN PALESTINE NOW BEFORE JAFFA

New Zealand Mounted Troops Rout Turkish Regiment by Bayonet Charge.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The British Army which is pursuing the Turks along the coast in Palestine has made further substantial gains, the War Office announces. It has reached a line from Er Ramle and Ludd to a point three miles south of Jaffa. The announcement follows:

General Allenby reports that during yesterday our troops, after slight resistance, reached the line from Er Ramle and Ludd to some three miles south of Jaffa. In one part of the zone of operations an attack by a Turkish regiment on New Zealand mounted troops was beaten back by a bayonet charge, with heavy losses to the enemy.

The total number of prisoners verified since Oct. 31 now exceeds 9,000.

The correspondent of Reuter's, Ltd., with the British Headquarters in Palestine, in a dispatch dated Nov. 15, describes the following operations of the British troops in that war theatre:

"Indian troops have captured the junction station of Wadi Surah and two field guns. Scottish troops have reached Mansura and positions northward of that point. English yeomanry captured Naneh, north of Mansura, taking sixty prisoners and a mountain gun.

"Anzac forces have reached Kez Azel, and advanced toward Er Ramle. The New Zealanders repulsed with the bayonet a strong counterattack, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy. The British airmen bombed trains and troops."

Reuter's correspondent with British Headquarters in Palestine, telegraphing last Wednesday, says:

"Within a fortnight of the inception of the British offensive the Turkish Army, occupying apparently an impregnable line, strongly fortified and provided with guns, ammunition, and supplies, has been driven headlong from its defenses and chased across country. Its losses have been enormous.

"The feature of yesterday's fighting was a brilliant charge by the Midland Counties' Yeomanry. The enemy had been clinging tenaciously to a position above Mughair, beyond Wadi Rubin, where he had hastily intrenched himself. Supported by field and machine guns the mounted troops charged across the swelling upland straight upon the enemy. They were received with a heavy fire, but nothing could stop them. They cut right through the Turks, sabring right and left.

"When the enemy found themselves surrounded 1,100 of them laid down their arms. The Turk is fighting bravely, but he is hoplessly outclassed."

Er Ramle and Ludd are on the railway between Jaffa, on the Mediterranean coast, and Jerusalem, the junction of which line with the railroad between Beersheba and Damascus was captured a few days ago by the British. Jaffa is fifty-four miles northwest of Jerusalem.

Germans Concerned Over Jerusalem.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 16.—An article by Captain von Salzmann printed in the Berlin Vossische Zeitung calls attention to the great importance of the British successes in Palestine. The writer says the capture of Jerusalem would threaten Germany's entire policy in the Orient.

Other writers in German newspapers try to comfort the Turks with the hope of a satisfactory adjustment of the situation at the peace conference, though they say there is no indication that Germany and Austria, which are using Turkish troops, contemplate sacrificing any of their conquests to help Turkey regain her lost territories.

ANTIS REPORT RUSH TO JOIN NEW LEAGUE

Women Who Opposed Suffrage Uniting to Fight All Forms of Disloyalty.

PLANS OF THE SUFFRAGISTS

Hint That State Party at Convention May Line Up for Federal Amendment Fight.

Anti-suffragists and so-called "neutral" women in large numbers responded yesterday to the announcement of the New York State Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage that its organization as such would be abandoned and that its membership would be converted into a "get behind the war" league to fight all forms of disloyalty. The organized suffragists, however, to whom Miss Alice Hill Chittenden, President of the antis, appealed to forget all about suffrage for the time being and join in harmonizing all women in one patriotic movement, made no formal reply.

"I have been immensely pleased with the response from our own members and from women who have not taken part in the franchise fight," Miss Chittenden said last night. "There is a bright prospect for the success of the new league, and thus far we have received from the antis no intimation of unwillingness to stand with the organization in disbanding and forming a patriotic league. Women of no party affiliations, too, have manifested a refreshing inclination to get behind the movement. I have not heard a word from the suffragists, either as organized bodies or as individuals. They are just as welcome as any other women to affiliate with us, and we hope they will, even if we do not expect them to do so."

Although the antis, as pointed out yesterday, regarded their action somewhat in the light of a challenge to the suffragists to match their offer to sink partisanship in patriotism, their leaders admitted last night that they scarcely had hoped for such a result. They recalled that the policy of the suffragists in the past had been largely to ignore the organized opposition.

The suffragists were keenly interested in the radical move of the antis, but it was plain that they regarded it more in the light of sudden disappearance of organized opposition than as a serious proposal that they, too, should forget woman party politics until after the war.

Attitude of the Suffragists.

Typical of suffragist expressions with regard to the proposal of the antis was that of Miss Mary Garrett Hay, Chairman of the New York City Woman Suffrage Party.

"I think it is the right thing for them to do," she said. "The fight in this State is won, and there is nothing more for them to do. As for our joining their organization, we do not need a special organization for patriotic work. Look at the Liberty Loan campaign and the Red Cross work and all the other patriotic activities in which the suffragists have played a leading, helpful part. We have always put our country first, and we shall continue to do so. Our program now is to educate the women to make the best use of the franchise and to organize them behind the national amendment, that women may be empowered to take their full share in a unanimous drive for victory abroad. I am glad to learn that Miss Chittenden is going to do her part in educating the woman voter, and in that we extend her an invitation to join with us."

Miss Hay was asked if she thought the antis by maintaining their organization and fighting still against the enfranchisement of women ever could have succeeded in taking the ballot away from them

"That is utterly impossible," Miss Hay replied. "It must be remembered that we were enfranchised not through legislative enactment but through constitutional amendment. So it would take another amendment to take the vote away from us, and when that amendment was submitted you would have both men and women voting on it. No; there is no fear of that ever happening."

At the headquarters of the New York State Woman Suffrage Party it was said that, inasmuch as no formal invitation had been received from the antis, no formal answer to their proposal would be made. Leaders of the organization, however, were emphatic in expressing their intention of going ahead with the national amendment program, and of their determination to maintain the suffrage party as such.

Suffragists Discuss Convention.

There was much discussion among suffragists yesterday of the approaching annual convention of the State party. Although some of the leaders said that nobody knew what was going to happen, there were strong indications that proposed amendments to the Constitution would be put through, and that the State party would line up for the Susan B. Anthony amendment. The possibility that a conservative wing may attempt to hold the association to its original purpose of State suffrage was recognized by the rank and file, but the belief was strong that the more radical element would control. The proposed amendments will have to do with the education of women voters, and with the proposals to join the national fight.

There was a hint yesterday that, if the national amendment program carried, the whole State body might be made an official adjunct of the national party, but those best informed believed it would maintain its autonomy as a State party. Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse, who has been Chairman of the State party for two years, was in seclusion yesterday, preparing her report for the coming convention. In her absence there was much discussion among suffragists as to the meaning of her reported "resignation" as the head of the party. It was learned that she had not resigned, but that she had expressed rather determinedly her decision not to stand for re-election next week. Mrs. Helen Leavitt, Executive Secretary of the body, said that, in her belief, the Nominating Committee had not formally asked Mrs. Whitehouse as yet to run again, and that until it did so, she could not fairly be said that she had refused.

"We have all been saying we have worked so hard we just couldn't go on after the fight was over," Mrs. Leavitt added, "and it may be that Mrs. Whitehouse feels so and will stick to it. Personally, I have not heard her express an absolute determination not to continue at the head of the party if she is asked."

Speculation among the officers and members of the party took Mrs. Whitehouse's retirement practically for granted and concerned itself with her successor. Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw, Mrs. Raymond Brown, and Mrs. Henry White Cannon, the present Vice Chairmen, were the first possibilities discussed, but it was said they, too, would retire from active work. The talk then turned to the possibility of conferring the honor of leading a membership said to number a million women upon an up-State woman in recognition of support outside the city at the election. Mrs. Arthur Livermore of Yonkers, one of the directors, was mentioned because she would qualify as an up-State woman and yet would remain in close touch with the party leaders in the city. Mrs. Ogden Mills Reid, Treasurer; Mrs. Alice Duer Miller, Chairman of the Finance Committee; Mrs. Frederick Edey, Mrs. Frank A. Vanderlip, and Mrs. Dexter P. Rumsey of Buffalo were others discussed.

WOMEN IN BROOKLYN TO JOIN DEMOCRATS

Will Organize in Each Assembly District Until They Can Enroll in Regular Organization.

Although they cannot take part in the primaries next year unless the election law is amended, newly enfranchised women of Brooklyn whose sympathies lie with the Democratic Party, are planning in anticipation of such legislation, to organize as Democrats throughout Kings County. Miss Amy Wren, who called with a delegation of suffragists upon Democratic County Leader John H. McCooey on Thursday, said yesterday that a borough-wide organization of women Democratic voters would soon be formed. A committee will provide for the organization of committees in each Assembly district.

The Republican leaders are planning an amendment to the election law providing for a special registration and enrollment for women voters.

STOPS ELASTIC COAL PRICES

Garfield Forbids Sales at Figures Subject to Revision.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Coal dealers, from the operator to the retailer, are prohibited from selling coal at prices subject to revision, by an order issued today by Fuel Administrator Garfield. Heretofore producers have been permitted to sell their coal at prices fixed by the Government, with a stipulation that the price might be revised if the Government-fixed prices were changed.

Under this arrangement prices were made subject to revision from the operator to the jobber and from the jobber to the retailer. The retailer usually found it difficult to collect any difference from the consumer after the coal had been sold. Today's order is designed to eliminate this and other difficulties which the plan entailed. It becomes effective immediately.

Attorney General Gregory has instructed Federal District Attorneys threughout the country to take all possible steps for prosecution of persons violating any of the price rulings made by the President and the Fuel Administration.

ferring the prisoners to the cells in the men's quarters was that they refused to give their names and to don the prison garments.

"In refusing to talk, the women were exercising their constitutional right of free speech. The guarantee of free speech carries with it the right to withhold your speech if you so desire.

"The indignity of compelling these prisoners to wear the stripes of a convict was an added punishment which was not pronounced by the court. The treatment of my clients as reported to me constitutes cruel and unusual punishment, which is prohibited by the Constitution."

Before the marine seized her Miss Katharine More smuggled from the prison this note written by Miss Burns:

"Wednesday, 14th. Demanded to see Whittaker when we arrived. Request refused. Miss Herndon said we would wait all night. Privilege of leaving room refused us. Man guard said he would put us in sardine box and put mustard on us. Whittaker came at 9 P. M. Refused to hear demands for political rights. Seized by guards from behind, flung off feet, shot out of room. All seized by guards and dragged to cells in man's part. Dorothy Day roughly seized. Back twisted. Mrs. Mary Nolan flung in cell. Mrs. Lawrence Lewis shot past my door. I slept all night with Dorothy Day on single bed. I was handcuffed for asking others how they were. Fastened for short time to bars of cell. Threatened with straitjacket and button gag.

"Thursday.—Brought to hospital. Food brought at noon for first time. All refused it.

"Friday.—Expected to go to court. Said to matron over telephone, 'No orders.' Whittaker came. Seized Julia Emory by back of neck and threw her in room very brutally. I asked my counsel to learn status of case. He told me to shut up. Threatened straitjacket and button gag again.

"Later I was taken to put on prison clothes. Resisted strenuously. Put in room where men with delirium tremens were put. Six guards tried to remove clothes."

Except Miss Burns, all the suffragist prisoners are reported to have been forced to put on prison garb. Eleven of these women said to be wearing prison clothes are from New York City. They are Mrs. John Winters, Miss Belle Sheinberg, Mrs. L. H. Hornesby, Mrs. Paula Jakobi, Miss Hilda Blumberg, Miss Lucy Burns, Miss Dorothy Day, Mrs. Henry Butterworth, Miss Cora Weeks, Mrs. P. B. Jones, and Miss Elizabeth Hamilton.

The others in the workhouse are:

New York State—Miss Amy Jungling, Buffalo; Mrs. Hattie Kruger, Buffalo.

Massachusetts—Mrs. Agnes H. Morey, Brookline; Miss Ella Findeisen, Lawrence; Miss L. Daniels, Boston; Miss Camilla G. Whitcomb, Worcester.

New Jersey—Mrs. George Scott, Montclair.

Pennsylvania—Mrs. Lawrence Lewis and Miss Catherine Lincoln, Philadelphia.

Oregon—Miss Alice Gram and Miss Betty Gram, Portland.

Utah—Mrs. R. B. Quay, Mrs. C. T. Robertson, Salt Lake City.

Indiana—Mrs. Charles W. Barnes, Indianapolis.

Minnesota—Mrs. J. H. Short, Minneapolis.

Oklahoma—Mrs. Kate Stafford, Oklahoma City.

District of Columbia—Miss Matilda Young.

Maryland—Miss Julia Emory, Baltimore.

Louisiana—Mrs. Alice Cosu, New Orleans.

Florida—Mrs. Mary A. Nolan, Jacksonville.

When trials of the Woman's Party militants for picketing the White House came up in the Police Court today Mrs. William Kent of Kentfield, Cal., sentenced to a fine of $25 or fifteen days in the workhouse, found that her husband, a member of the Tariff Commission, had paid her fine. Mrs. Kent protested to the court, refusing to accept that settlement of the judgment against her, and demanded that she be permitted to go to the workhouse. The court specified that the issue should be settled within four days.

When Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, wife of the pure food expert, was called for sentence she insisted on taking a workhouse term, but an attorney engaged by her husband insisted on the court granting an appeal. The court announced it could not do both, and advised the lawyer to get his client to agree to some course and repert later.

Woman's Party headquarters announced that Mrs. Wiley refused to permit the filing of a bond necessary for an appeal, and would begin a fifteen-day sentence in the workhouse at once.

All the other militants recalled for sentence got the usual short workhouse terms. Twenty-eight others, now doing time in the workhouse, who were to be brought into court for sentence for second offenses, could not be produced, as some official referred to in court as "higher up," had forbidden their removal from the workhouse.

MITCHEL HAD NO EXPENSES.

Hillquit's Campaign Cost Him $250 and Bennett's $41.

Judge John F. Hylan, Mayor-elect, was the only candidate for the chief executiveship of the city who had not filed his election expense account with the Bureau of Elections when the bureau closed its offices last night. The limit by law expired at midnight; it was suggested that Judge Hylan may have mailed his expense account last night before 12 o'clock. Judge Hylan could not be reached last night to be asked why he had not filed his account of expenditures.

Mayor Mitchel declared in his report that he had received nothing and expended nothing.

"Some contributions to the funds in aid of my candidacy were received in the form of checks drawn to my order," he reported, "which I indorsed and transferred to Sam A. Lewisohn, Treasurer of the Fusion Committee of 1917, and to Ralph A. Day, Treasurer of the Mitchel Personal Campaign Committee, which will be accounted for by them."

Former State Senator William M. Bennett, Republican candidate for Mayor, reported that he received $350 and expended $41.

Morris Hillquit, Socialist candidate for Mayor, reported that he expended $250, which was contributed to the Socialist Party Campaign Committee. There was surprise expressed at the small size of Mr. Hillquit's contribution to his campaign expenses, in as much as he is not a poor man. It is understood that the expenses of the Socialist campaign were in the neighborhood of $100,000, and there is much interest in the identity of those who supplied the money. This will be shown when the Socialist Campaign Committee files its expenditure statement with the Secretary of State at Albany next week.

Edward F. Cassidy, the Socialist candidate for President of the Board of Aldermen, said he gave $5 to the Socialist Party Campaign Committee and contributed $2 to the Irish Progressive League. Frank A. Sieverman, candidate for Controller, reported he received nothing and expended nothing.

Samuel H. Ordway, defeated Republican candidate for Supreme Court Justice, reported he expended $5,500, most of which was for printing. His successful opponent, John V. McAvoy, reported that he spent $500 for printing.

Frank L. Dowling, Democratic candidate for the President of the Borough of Manhattan, received $2,550 and spent $2,530.20. Charles L. Craig, Democratic candidate for Controller, reported that he received $125 and spent $1,069.20.

VANDERLIP OFFERS PLAN TO SAVE ROADS

allowing his bank to be an investor in railroad securities as a permanent investment."

"Why did the banks make a wholesale assault upon railroad securities?" asked Commissioner McChord.

"I deny that bankers did make an assault," retorted Mr. Vanderlip.

Commissioner McChord picked from his desk a letter and then said:

"Are Bache & Co. bankers?"

"No, they are brokers," replied Mr. Vanderlip.

Commissioner McChord insisted that the witness had said in the course of his testimony that banks were bearing down on securities and criticising the low earnings of railroads.

"I deny having said the first," retorted Mr. Vanderlip. "The banks have not assaulted railroad securities, but they have complained of small earnings."

"I have received letters from banks on this subject," insisted Mr. McChord.

"Well, if that is so, you ought to inform the Controller of the Currency," was the banker's rejoinder.

Mr. Vanderlip told the commission, in reply to a question as to whether he believed that a 15 per cent. increase would be a solution, that such an application to the situation "would be merely a poultice on the wound."

"I would not presume to stand here and suggest a cure," he said. "The cure ought to come from this body. I merely made a suggestion as to one means of aiding the situation. I do not believe that the railroads have studied the situation sufficiently to suggest any cure. But I am convinced that something must be done to restore confidence in railroad securities. There must be a fundamental change in this situation or the railroads are going into Government ownership. There is no other place for them to go."

Mr. Warburg's Views.

Mr. Warburg read his statement. He explained that he would not go into the technical question, but would approach the problem from its financial side, and in speaking he presented his personal views only.

"A discussion of the subject necessarily involves at this time a consideration not merely of the railroads," said Mr. Warburg, "but also of the people as individuals and the Government as a whole, for the interests of each of these elements, interdependent even in normal times, are still more closely woven together in view of the common cause of all—the successful prosecution of the war.

"When the country turns from peaceful occupations to the business of war a drastic upheaval in the entire economic structure of the country must necessarily result, inasmuch as it is clear that the combined strength of the nation is essential to victory, every project, every industry, that contributes toward this end must be encouraged in every possible way; whereas, what is not necessary for the common cause must, for the present at least, stand aside. The railroads are clearly one of the most necessary factors in this respect, and they must be placed and maintained in such a condition as will best enable them to render in the most efficient degree the services for which they are designed. It is not necessary to elaborate this point; it is sufficient to consider the disastrous effect that the deterioration of the railroads has had upon the military efficiency of some of the European belligerent countries.

"What then is the carriers' present condition? Like any other corporation or individual, or even the Government itself, railroads suffer at this time from the fact that the dollar which they now earn has diminished very materially in purchasing power so that, even if they were earning the same amount in dollars as prior to the war, these earnings would not buy anything like the same amount of materials or the same amount of labor. It is interesting in this respect to note that their condition is parallel to that of all the belligerent governments, which, owing to increasing prices, in order to produce the same purchasing power as heretofore, are forced to place upon the market larger and larger loans.

"A comparison of the index figures for the years 1914 and 1917 would show that wholesale prices of commodities have increased, roughly, by 100 per cent. since the beginning of the war, and, therefore, the same number of dollars netted by a railroad can produce only a smaller amount of improvements than it produced in pre-war times. It follows that in order to secure these improvements, or even the necessary upkeep, a much larger amount of money must be procured. That money can be obtained in two ways only: By the flotation of additional securities or by an increase in revenue.

"I believe I am safe in saying that the vast majority of the railroads are nowadays old established concerns which long since have sold their first mortgage bonds and have generally given comprehensive liens on their tangible properties so that, in financing today, they offer as the basis for the new securities the general equity in the property; that means it is their earning power that today constitutes the chief basis of their credit. When net earnings dwindle, as they have, or when doubt arises in the public mind as to the ability of the railroads to be permitted to earn a generous return in the future, the entire credit structure of the railroads suffers. Securities can then be sold only on a higher interest basis. The higher interest charge, in turn, causes a corresponding reduction in net earnings, which again, in turn, operates further to destroy public confidence. And so one destroys the other."

Mr. Warburg spoke of the various factors involved in the depreciation of railroad securities, such as Government loans, and added that as a matter of fact it has become practically impossible for most of the roads to sell securities.

"It is of paramount importance," he continued, "that the railroads, as far as possible, should be enabled to pay out of current revenues for all improvements that are necessary to keep their property in at least the same condition of efficiency as obtained at the outbreak of the war.

"They should have ample revenue, not only because of these reasons, but also because of the fact, as stated before, that their earning power is the measure of their credit.

Cannot Drop Dividends.

"It may be asked whether or not the proposed increase in net earnings and the consequent greater confidence of the public will open the securities market to the railroads to a degree sufficient to enable them adequately to finance themselves. Not entirely. It will remain difficult enough for the railroads to finance themselves even under improved conditions, and it has been suggested that it may become necessary in some way or other to use or create agencies of the Government for the purpose of granting some sort of relief. Without entering into the merit of such a proposition, it is evident that even in that case, the task of such agencies would be immeasurably relieved if they were dealing with companies capable of showing substantial net earnings.

"It might be asked 'Why not let the railroads stop paying dividends and use these funds for the purpose of providing the moneys necessary for their improvements?' It is patent why such a policy would be fatal. The weak railroads have no dividends which they might suspend. The strong railroads through such suspension would destroy the continuity of their dividend records, which constitutes a most valuable asset in that on the strength of these records they have secured the advantage of being able to sell some of their obligations as investments for savings banks.

"The capitalization of all the railroads in the United States has been stated at $8,750,000,000 of stock and about $11,000,000,000 of funded debt. If we should figure that the value of railroad bonds has decreased by about 10 per cent. and that of railroad stock by about 20 per cent. we would find that the shrinkage in railroad values since the beginning of the war, on that basis, would amount to about $2,800,000,000.

"The successful placing of the Government loans to be issued from time to time and, running into billions, is predicated upon the strength of the general banking situation and the public's confidence in that strength. It is estimated that national banks, state banks, trust companies, and savings banks together own about two billion dollars of railroad securities. In addition to that these securities form a large percentage of the collateral for their loans. A drastic shrinkage in value of railroad securities therefore is naturally a matter of serious concern to all of these institutions and might materially impair their vigor and freedom of action in cooperating with the Government's financial program and, if permitted to go too far, it may throw an additional burden upon the Government. It is my sincere conviction that one of the main objects of the Government—the successful prosecution of the war—will be considerably helped if greater strength is given to the railroads and if greater confidence in them is instilled into the public mind."

POETRY
Inspired by the War

The great war has furnished subjects for verse of serious, humorous and inspirational nature. How writers "Over There" and in our own country have expressed war thoughts in rhyme is well demonstrated in the following interesting anthologies.

TREASURY PUSHING DELIVERY OF BONDS

Every Effort Being Made to Distribute All of the Liberty Issues Before Christmas.

FACED A GIGANTIC TASK

Government Forced to Rely on Bureau of Engraving Instead of Private Concerns.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Officials of the Treasury Department are doing their utmost with funds at their disposal to deliver the Liberty bonds to the banks for distribution to buyers. The situation has not been without complications, partly because of the huge number of purchasers and partly because of the rush to convert the 3½ per cent. bonds of the first issue into 4 per cent. bonds or the second loan.

Stress is laid on the statement, however, that there is not the slightest reason for worry on the part of investors and that every effort will be made to deliver all of the bonds for distribution before Christmas.

When it was found that more than 4,000,000 individuals had subscribed to the first Liberty Loan, Secretary McAdoo asked for bids from private engraving firms in the hope of rushing the work. Prices quoted, however, were so high that the appropriation by Congress for that purpose was inadequate and made necessary the abandonment of such a program.

There have been complaints because of the failure to deliver the bonds more rapidly, especially since the flight of Elmer Dwiggins, New York manager of the Bankers Life Insurance Company, who has since been arrested by Federal agents in Montgomery, Ala.

In order to allay all fears and strengthen the bond market, the Treasury Department is putting forth its best effort to get results. The Bureau of Engraving and Printing has been working twenty-four hours a day at capacity, and in one wing of the Treasury clerks are at work night and day. In this way it is hoped to supply the bond buyers who wish to frame bonds and use them for Christmas gifts.

Secretary McAdoo acknowledged today the force of comolaints, but declared the Treasury Department was doing all it could. One thing that complicates delivery of the 3½ per cent. bonds is that thousands are converting them into the 4 per cent. bonds. There have been delivered down to today 3,727,930 individual bonds, representing $1,005,350,000. This number meets the demand for 3½ per cent. bonds. The rest of the issue, which in all was taken by about 4,000,000 buyers and amounted to $2,000,000,000, will probably be converted into 4s. The converted bonds are now being delivered to the Treasury Department from the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. A large force of clerks is engaged in the laborious task of counting and countersigning these bonds, and it is regarded as certain that the bonds will be sent to the banks next week for delivery to buyers. As the conversion period fixed by law is six months from Nov. 15, 1917, it is clear that the transaction of converting all 3½ per cent. bonds that may be offered cannot be concluded for some time. No doubt a considerable volume will continue to come in for several months.

When the campaign for the sale of the first issue was being organized, counsel was taken of investment bankers and various economic authorities, and it was estimated from all sources of information that there were in the country about 350,000 bond-buyers. The conduct of the bond campaign developed the remarkable fact that there were at least 4,000,000 bond investors. There is not a private banknote printing concern in the United States, nor any combination of such concerns, it is said, that could have handled the job of printing the vast number of bonds required in this situation any faster than could the Government, with the facilities of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

The new 4 per cent. bonds are being delivered rapidly. The last payment on these bonds will be due on Dec. 15, 1917, and the bonds will be in the hands of the banks by that date. There have been delivered of this issue, down to today, 3,825,215 separate bonds of the 4 per cents., representing $1,111,181,000. The total amount of money represented in this issue is approximately $3,806,600,00. The registered bonds of the first issue to the amount of $84,500,000 have been delivered. Altogether having regard for the magnitude of the operations involved, the Treasury officials are inclined to think that the printing, numbering, countersigning and forwarding of the two issues of bonds have been performed as rapidly as possible.

Total for District Reaches $745,000,000—New York's Allotment $1,163,475,200.

Additional Liberty Loan payments to the amount of $67,000,000 were received yesterday by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. This brought the total for the 18 per cent. instalment and for fully paid bonds up to $745,000,000. Final returns have not yet been received from about 100 or the 1,275 reporting institutions in this district.

Yesterday's receipts of $67,000,000 were divided as follows: $7,000,000 in cash and $60,000,000 in notifications of transfers by book credits.

The allotment of bonds for this district is $1,163,475,200, a ruling by the Treasury Department yesterday changing the estimated total. Previous payments amounting to about $90,000,000 and those received Thursday and yesterday bring the total up to $835,000,000 and leave $328,475,200 to be paid on Dec. 15 and Jan. 15.

The interesting development in yesterday's trading in Liberty Loan bonds on the Stock Exchange was the closing sale of the 3½ per cents at 99, or .24 above the final quotation for the 4 per cents. Sales of the 3½s amounted to $1,024,000, and $1,182,500 of the 4s changed hands. The 3½s sold as low as 98.68, but closed at 99, a gain of .06 for the day, while the new 4s made a new low record at 98.74, closing at 98.76, a decline of .74 from Thursday's final quotation.

It had been expected that the 3½s would sell at a higher price than the 4s. In the first place, to the man of large wealth the tax-exempt feature of the 3½s makes that security more valuable than the 4 per cent. Liberty bond; and in the second place, to the man who is not concerned about the tax-exemption advantage, the 3½s are as good and better than the 4s by reason of the fact that the 3½s may be converted into bonds bearing interest at the rate of 4 per cent. An additional point in favor of the 3½s is that the 4 per cent. bond into which it may be converted matures in thirty years, instead of twenty-five years as do the new 4s.

Applications for the conversion of the 3½s into 4s will not be received today, but may be presented at the Bond Exchange Department of the Federal Reserve Bank, 50 Wall Street, any day beginning Monday, from the hours of 10 to 2.

Official Reproves American Claiming Exemption from Service.

TORONTO, Nov. 16.—Although it is not necessary for the citizens of the United States to register under the Canadian Military Service act, those who do register can claim exemption on the ground of American citizenship. This was made clear today, when a young American resident here received exemption from Judge Denton's tribunal today.

"You ought to be man enough to go home and fight for your own country," Lieut. Col. Brown, the military representative, told him.

MINNESOTANS SLAIN FOR BUYING WAR BONDS

Austrian Woman and Two Men Murdered in Their Beds Because They Were 'Against the Kaiser.'

VIRGINIA, Minn., Nov. 16.—Three Austrians, a woman and two men, were murdered here last night because they had subscribed to the Liberty Loan and Red Cross funds. They were Mr. and Mrs. Paul Alar and Peter Trepich, a boarder in the Alar house. The skull of each had been crushed with an axe while the victim slept and each body mutilated with a knife.

On a kitchen table in the home of Alar was a note, written in an Austrian dialect, reading:

"This is what you get for being against the Kaiser. You have donated to the Red Cross and you have said the Kaiser could go to hell. Don't look for us, for any one who does will get the same dose."

Red Cross and Liberty Loan purchase signs, generally displayed here although the community has a large Austrian population, disappeared from the windows of Austrian residents today.

The Alars were each 38 years old and Trepich was 60 years old. The men were miners. A theory first suggested by the police was that robbery was the motive of the murders because Mrs. Alar was known to have drawn money from the bank yesterday. This was abandoned, however, when a sum of money was found in the Alar home.

Several persons suspected of connection with the murders were arrested, and all available police and Deputy Sheriffs gave their attention to the case. One police theory was that a neighborhood row in the foreign miners' colony, growing out of war arguments, was the direct cause of the crimes.

The double-bladed axe used by the murderer was found on the floor near the bodies. The slayer evidently washed his hands in the kitchen sink after wielding the axe and then sat down and wrote the note.

The Coroner will hold an inquest tomorrow.

NORWEGIANS MOVE TO BOYCOTT GERMANS

Water Association and Other Organizations Adopt Resolutions to Protect the Lives of Sailors.

CHRISTIANIA, Nov. 16.—The Tidens Tegn says the Norwegian Water Association has passed a resolution proclaiming a complete boycott of Germany, German shipping, German trade, and German citizens in Norway. The Chairman of the association said that if German ships were unable to load or unload in Norway the prohibition against exports could be abolished and that if food should be refused to German subjects they would soon leave the country. Thus the lives of Norwegian sailors would not be exposed to the present dangers.

Similar resolutions have been adopted in other Norwegian towns.

MRS. BILLINGS SUES BROKER FOR DIVORCE

ASKS ACTRESS FOR $50,000

Alienation Suit Also Brought—Divorce Defendant Once a Sunday School Superintendent.

William Perry Billings, broker, at 66 Broadway, and formerly cashier of the Second National Bank at Wilkes-Barre, Penn., and superintendent of a Methodist Episcopal Sunday School there and trustee of Wyoming Seminary, was sued in the Supreme Court for a divorce yesterday by Mrs. Mary M. Billings, whom he married in 1890 at Waverly, N. Y. The filing of the divorce suit followed a raid by detectives employed by Mrs. Billings on her husband's apartment at 120 Riverside Drive on Sept. 12 last.

On the day after the raid Billings had one of the detectives arrested for disorderly conduct and he was fined $50 in the Yorkville Court. Billings admitted in court that Mirian Burnadette, an actress, was in his apartment at the time.

Although the complaint in the divorce suit was not filed until yesterday, it was served on Sept. 15. Since that time Mrs. Billings has sued Miss Burnadette for $50,000 damages for alienating the affections of Billings. Miss Burnadette is not named in the divorce complaint. Mrs. Billings asks the custody of her son, Andrew H. Billings, in whose behalf a suit was brought against Adele Blood, actress, two years ago, to recover property alleged to belong to young Billings. Mrs. Blood gave up the property, and the suit was dropped.

Mr. and Mrs. Billings have a daughter, Frances, who eloped to Tonawanda, N. Y., in 1911, and married George M. Reynolds, her father's chauffeur. Mrs. Reynolds and her father were sued a year ago by Mrs. Mary Emma Wood for alienating the affections of her husband. The case is still pending. Another law suit involved to some extent in the divorce proceeding was an alienation suit filed a week ago by Reynolds against Paul G. Hilken for destroying the affections of Mrs. Reynolds for her husband. She said yesterday that she has not lived with Reynolds for four years.

While Billings was one of the leading citizens and churchmen of Wilkes-Barre he donated a number of scholarships to Cornell University. He denies the charges of misconduct made by his wife, while Miss Burnadette also denies any impropriety, including the alienation of the affection of Billings from his wife.

CHAMBERS DENIES NO-STRIKE PROMISE

Says Brotherhoods Accept Mediation, but Are Not Committed to Arbitration.

MANAGERS SPEAK TODAY

Union's Agreement Only Pledges Full Consideration of Any Proposal President May Make.

Judge William L. Chambers, Commissioner of the United States Board of Mediation and Conciliation, came to New York from Washington last night to confer today with the National Conference Committee of the Railways as to the attitude of the roads toward the proposed demands of the four railway brotherhoods for increases in wages amounting to $109,000,000 a year. It is the expectation that the railroads will offer, as they did in the eight-hour controversy, to submit the whole matter to arbitration.

Judge Chambers made it plain that the brotherhoods had not agreed that there would be no strike, nor had they agreed to arbitration or to accept any plan President Wilson might suggest for the solution of the matter of their wage demands. It had been reported from Washington, as told in THE TIMES yesterday morning, that the brotherhood leaders had promised the President that there would be no strike during the war, and that they would be agreeable to any settlement the President might decide upon. It was also reported, erroneously Judge Chambers said, that the railroad Presidents had definitely agreed that the roads would consent to arbitration. He pointed out that it was the purpose of his conference today to seek an understanding on that point.

Judge Chambers said that a misapprehension of the terms of the agreement he had effected with the brotherhood leaders had grown out of the fact that a part of the agreement had been misquoted. Dispatches from Washington said that this section read that "they (the brotherhoods) will agree to suggestions of a plan of settlement advanced by President Wilson." Judge Chambers exhibited a copy of the signed agreement which said that the brotherhood leaders were agreeable to discussing with the President any plan of settlement of the subject matter.

The agreement also made it plain that the labor leaders had held out against the suggestion of Judge Chambers, on behalf of the President, that they submit the whole controversy over wages to arbitration. They did accept in full the offer of mediation by the Bureau of Mediation and Conciliation, under which, however, the board can enforce nothing, but may only make suggestions as to a settlement.

Dispatches from Washington on Thursday also said "President Wilson has been authorized in effect by representatives of the brotherhoods to offer a plan of settlement as to wages which the brotherhoods will accept." In explaining that this statement was based on a misconception of the facts, Judge Chambers said that it had brought forth protests from parties concerned, inasmuch as the brotherhoods had not promised to accept any agreement offered by any one.

Judge Chambers requested that the following statement by himself, a part of which was published last Wednesday, be printed:

"As a result of the efforts of the Board of Mediation to bring the railroad executives and the brotherhoods engaged in train operation to an agreement that there shall be no interruption in their relations on either side until ample opportunity shall have been afforded the United States Board of Mediation and Conciliation to bring about, if possible, an amicable agreement, and that in the event of a failure to bring about such an agreement any controversy that may have arisen will be submitted to arbitration, in accordance with the provisions of the Newlands law, Commissioner Chambers has held conferences with leading railroad officials and chief executives of the brotherhoods.

"At a conference in Cleveland on Thursday last between Judge Chambers and Warren S. Stone, Grand Chief, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; W. S. Carter, President of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen; L. E. Sheppard, First Vice President, order of Railway Conductors, and W. G. Lee, President Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, it is understood certain substantial agreements were reached.

"Judge Chambers declined to state what these results were, but the rumor is that the executives of the labor organizations agreed to the mediation features of the proposal, and it is inferred that the conference with the President, which is planned for 2:30 P. M. Thursday, (Nov. 22,) will have reference to the arbitration features of the proposed agreement. It is understood that these labor executives are unwilling to commit their organizations unconditionally to arbitration, but at the White House conference on the 22d the executives will be ready to discuss with the President some plan by which it is hoped an adjustment will be reached which will, at least for the duration of the war, prevent any interruption of railroad transportation.

"Judge Chambers did not feel authorized to say what subjects would be discussed at the conference and declined even to intimate what results were anticipated. He regards the conference as involving a most serious situation, as the transportation problem is perhaps the most important one connected with the successful prosecution of the war measures of the Administration.

"The Switchmen's Union of North America, it is understood, has agreed to the mediation and arbitration proposals as a whole, and it is believed that that is the attitude also of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers. The proposal is to be submitted to the Conference Committee of Managers of the railways and it is anticipated that the railroad executives will agree to both mediation and arbitration."

The Conference Committee of the railways, which Judge Chambers will meet today, is the same body that handled the eight-hour controversy for the railroads.

The signed agreement which Judge Chambers exhibited last night disclosed that Warren S. Stone, head of the engineers, who is a member of an advisory commission of the Council of National Defense, had joined with the heads of the other three brotherhoods.

Judge Chambers made it plain that it was not believed in Washington that there would be a strike. It was believed that the Government would prevent an interruption of rail transportation when the nation is at war.

12 MEN DIE IN FIRE IN JERSEY FORESTS

Ramapo Mountaineers Perish When Veering Wind Traps Them in Flames.

300 FAIL TO SAVE THEM

Fire Is Confined to Swamp After Sweeping Over 12 Square Miles of Woodland.

Special to The New York Times.

ALLENDALE, N. J., Nov. 16.—Twelve mountaineers were burned to death today while fighting the forest fire which has been raging for four days in the Ramapo Mountains near here. The twelve men were members of the band of 200 special deputy Fire Wardens sworn in two days ago.

The fire this morning had swept near the American Brake Shoe and Foundry Company's plant at Mahwah, which is engaged on Government work. The 1,000 employes were ordered out to fight the fire. In advance of them were the twelve mountaineers, near the edge of Bear Swamp. While they were fighting the fire which the wind was blowing to the right of them, the mountaineers evidently did not notice that a veering wind also was sweeping it to the left, forming a circle about them. They did not discover their plight until the flames had surrounded them.

Then the twelve tried to fight their way out, with the fire gradually closing in on them. Three hundred men vainly fought the flames to reach the imprisoned mountaineers. A quarter of an hour after they were trapped the fire had completely closed in on them.

When the bodies of the twelve were found they were charred beyond recognition, but by checking up his list of deputies and verifying it at the homes of the men the identity of the twelve was established. The burned men were Ralph Washington, John Washington, brothers; Alexander Washburn, Joseph Kilpatrick, Ralph De Baun, Charles Johnson, George Johnson, and Harry Johnson, brothers; Thomas Pleters and Charles Pleters, brothers, and Peter Parissimy and Martin Parissimy, brothers. All of the men lived in the Ramapo Mountains. A joint funeral service for the twelve mountaineers will be held tomorrow.

The blaze tonight was confined to Bear Swamp, where it is believed it will burn itself out. It swept over twelve square miles and did damage estimated at more than $250,000. Most of the land burned was woodland. In Bear Swamp there is not much fuel for the fire.

To Quarantine Camp Sevier.

GREENVILLE, N. C., Nov. 16.—Major L. D. Gasser, acting Chief of Staff of the Thirtieth Division, announced tonight that Camp Sevier would go under quarantine tomorrow morning to check an epidemic of measules and some cases of pneumonia and meningitis. Major Gasser said that the situation was not serious, and the quarantine was purely a precautionary measure.

NEW HEADS OF CITY ASSERT PATRIOTISM

They Deny Recent Election Was a Moral Defeat for President.

NO WAR ISSUE IN CAMPAIGN

Judge Hylan Declares He Stands "Uncompromisingly" Behind Mr. Wilson in His Acts and Policies.

From Mayor-elect John F. Hylan down, the successful city and borough candidates in the recent municipal election were quick yesterday to resent and repudiate the interpretation placed on the verdict of the voters by certain German newspapers which pronounced the election result a triumph for the American pacifists and a moral defeat for President Wilson. THE TIMES yesterday printed brief extracts from such comment contained in articles published by the Kreuz-Zeitung and the Münchner Neueste Nachrichten. The statements made by such candidates as could be reached by reporters of THE NEW YORK TIMES left no doubt as to their stand behind President Wilson and for a vigorous prosecution of the war.

"I can only reiterate and re-emphasize what I said repeatedly during the campaign and in my statement on the night I was elected," said Mayor-elect Hylan. "In that final statement I said: 'I want to make it plain to the world that as far as I am concerned there was no issue of Americanism in the campaign. There could be none, for I am as good an American as any man, as loyal to my flag, as loyal to my country, and as firm and determined in support of every act of the Government in this war as any man. I urge that prominence be given to this declaration, so that there may not go abroad to people who have no appreciation of our local situation the slightest intimation that the question of the war or the war policies of President Wilson and the United States Government were in the slightest way involved.'

"My first utterance in this campaign, in response to a question, was that I stood uncompromisingly behind the President in support of the acts and policies of my country, and that the war must be fought to a conclusion that would bring an honorable peace to America."

Controller-elect Charles L. Craig was equally unequivocal in his declaration that the result of the election could not be interpreted as a disapproval of the war policy of the Federal Government. Mr. Craig laid the blame for spreading this false impression abroad at the door of the newspapers that supported Mayor Mitchel. The Controller-elect said:

"The responsibility for such false assumptions and illusive hopes as are indicated in the special dispatch published in this morning's TIMES, under a Washington date line, rests upon that section of the New York press that spared no efforts to re-elect Mayor Mitchel without regard to the will of the people by attempting to create a stampede upon a false issue of patriotism. The National Administration very properly understood that the country's position in the war was not determined by the support that Mayor Mitchel received. There can be no doubt that this question was thoroughly understood in New York City.

"Those newspapers that were before election proclaiming their patriotism on behalf of Mayor Mitchel should now redouble their efforts to undo the evil that they wrought. It is not a question of the patriotism or of the loyalty of the incoming administration. It is a question of the patriotism and loyalty of the New York press that sought to create a false impression as to the real issue in the municipal election."

Frank L. Dowling, President of the Board of Aldermen, successful candidate for Borough President of Manhattan in the recent municipal election, said:

"I was nominated as an American by the Democratic Party in the city primary. I was elected as an American by the American citizens of New York. I was born in America and thank God every day that I am an American. As for the public office to which I was elected, it will be administered in a spirit of patriotism and devotion to the cause of my country. President Wilson and the Federal Government will receive from me both in my official and individual capacity all the support that I am able to give toward the successful prosecution of their policies. I can say no more."

BOMBARDED BY MISTAKE.

GALVESTON, Texas, Nov. 16.—Through some miscalculation, Bolivar Peninsula, in the vicinity of the lighthouse, was subjected to bombardment by three-inch guns in target practice at Fort San Jacinto for about two hours yesterday.

One three-inch empty projectile tore a hole through the ninety-foot tower of Bolivar lighthouse about twenty-five feet from the base.

Another shell struck a few feet from the front yard gate of a family living near the lighthouse. No one was injured. It was estimated that about twenty-five projectiles struck land, the rest striking the water, where they apparently were intended to fall.

TAMMANY BLOCKED BY CIVIL SERVICE

WILL APPEAL TO COURTS

If State Commission Fails to Act They Are to be Asked to Retransfer Jobs from Exempt Class.

The aid of the courts may be invoked by the incoming city administration in its efforts to provide places for the hungry horde of office hunters clamoring at the doors of the successful candidates. This is the season when the faithful workers of Tammany Hall, after a Tammany victory at the polls, expect to get their reward in jobs for duty well done. But even though Tammany's victory was as sweeping as could be, the office seekers have learned to their sorrow that there will not be jobs enough to make one out of every ten applicants happy. It is the plaint of the successful candidate that the Mitchel administration has "nailed down" all the jobs by having employes in the exempt class who are removable at the pleasure of department heads, transferred into the classified service, where they are protected from removal except on charges.

Controller Prendergast is said to have been particularly zealous in his efforts to keep Rudolph appointees in and good Tammany men out of office. Not less than 152 places, involving employes in many instances whose duties are of a fiduciary or confidential character, were placed in the classified service at one time. Controller-elect Charles L. Craig, it was said yesterday, in looking over the list of places that he might fill at pleasure, found that only eight positions in addition to those of his deputies can be declared vacant by the incoming Controller.

It is probable that the first effort to change this condition will involve the Controller's office, and that the courts will be asked to intervene in the event that the State Civil Service Commission, which is controlled by the Republicans, should refuse to sanction a plan to have a majority of the places put back again into the exempt class. No difficulty is expected from the Municipal Civil Service Commission, the members of which will be appointed by Mayor-elect Hylan. But for the radical move contemplated the sanction of the State Civil Service Commission in addition to that of the municipal commission is required. While Controller-elect Craig has declined to discuss the situation, it is known that he feels that more latitude in the filling of places should be given the head of this important department, where so many employes are occupied in duties that are fiduciary and confidential, especially as the Controller is liable under heavy bond for the honest and faithful performance of the duties of his hundreds of subordinates.

If resort must be had to the courts it is not unlikely that in addition to this ground for a ruling favorable to the contention of the new city officials the additional argument will be advanced that in many instances employes transferred to the classified service were not compelled to undergo the competitive tests prescribed by the civil service law for applicants to classified positions. A question of similar character, affecting eight employes in the State Controller's office, was before the courts during the second Hughes administration at Albany. The ruling of the court in that case was adverse to the incumbents. It was estimated yesterday that a favorable ruling by the courts with reference to the positions in the Controller's office would affect hundreds of places in the city service and provide many openings for Tammany men who are eager to serve the city under the Hylan administration.

It is expected that when Judge Hylan begins to swing the axe the first victims will be the remaining experts in city government who in many instances have been "imported" by Mayor Mitchel from other cities. But the most substantial benefit the Tammany braves are likely to derive from this will undoubtedly be the satisfaction of seeing these "outsiders" dispatched and expert supervision in certain branches of the city government, through their going, done away with, for the Mayor-elect in his campaign utterances declared the positions superfluous, and in the circumstances it is not likely that the vacancies will be filled.

Applicants for positions were disappointed yesterday when they flocked to the headquarters of Mayor-elect Hylan, in the suite occupied by the Business Men's League at 30 East Forty-second Street. Judge Hylan, who had spent the forenoon in court, did not appear, but sent word instead that he would remain away from his headquarters until Monday.

VILLA BAND TRAILED BY AMERICAN CAVALRY

Presidio and the Border Closely Guarded — Aid Tells of Outlaw's Movements.

PRESIDIO, Texas, Nov. 16.—A column of Villa cavalry was seen moving up the Rio Grande River about twenty miles above Ojinaga today. It was followed on the American side by cavalry patrols. The column was believed to be pursuing the Federal column under Colonel Flores toward Juarez.

Colonel Trillo, Villa's secretary, denied today that José Ynez Salazar, leader of forces opposing the Government, was killed at Nogal Ranch, Chihuahua, as had been reported. He said Villa had been wounded in the right leg on Oct. 13 at the battle of Escalon, but had recovered.

The two American deserters, Privates Kearns and Lawrence, who manned Mexican Federal machine guns in Ojinaga during Tuesday's battle, crossed the border today and were arrested. Kearns said he was impressed into the Federal forces defending Ojinaga, where he served fifteen days.

Francisco Villa's mysterious disappearance following the battle of Parral last August was explained today by First Captain José Jauretta of Villa's general staff, who declared he had accompanied Villa on a 3,000-mile trip from Parral through Durango, Zacatecas, San Luis Potosi, and other Mexican States, to confer with chiefs regarding a new revolutionary movement. Villa sent a commission to Zapata, according to Jaurretta, who, accompanied by Colonel Trillo, came down to the Ojinaga ford to meet The Associated Press correspondent.

A physician, who brought the Villa wounded to the temporary hospital at Presidio, estimated the total loss in the battle of Ojinaga at 200, a majority of whom were Federals. Villa losses were not more than fifteen killed, the physician said. Eight wounded Federals died in Ojinaga hospital last night. Two soldiers brought to Presidio died here.

Villa forces occupied Muisto, twenty-five miles down the Rio Grande from Ojinaga. They met no opposition. The main Villa camp has been established at San Juan, nine miles up the Conchos River from Ojinaga.

Can the Bolsheviki Strangle Free Russia?

No hopeless view of the Bolsheviki uprising in Petrograd is taken by American editorial observers, altho it is frankly recognized that the plan for a separate Russo-German peace might help solve Germany's food problem and release many German soldiers from the Eastern front. In the view of an Associated Press correspondent, just returned from Petrograd, however, the uprising gives the Bolsheviki the rope with which to hang themselves, and this view is shared by the well-informed Russkoye Slovo, a Russian daily published in New York.

"The Bolsheviki may occupy all the palaces and strongholds of Petrograd," remarks this Russian journal, "as they did during their insurrection last July; they may impose their will briefly upon the members of the Government and claim control of the capital, but they can not dominate for more than a brief period, the indignant, loyal forces of the Russian nation."

For a clear explanation and understanding of the causes leading up to, and the possible outcome of, the overturning of the Kerensky Government you should read THE LITERARY DIGEST for November 17th. WON'T AID FOSDICK IN CAMP INQUIRY

Mrs. Humiston Declines to Support Her Charges Before Morals Committee.

WILL HEED BAKER ONLY

Tentatively Suggests "Licensed Resorts" at Army Camps—Needs Funds to Prove Charges.

Mrs. Grace Humiston, whose allegations regarding immorality which she asserted exist in American military camps, have caused a storm of protest and denial from the War Department and from men in charge of the physical and moral welfare of the nation's soldiers, said yesterday that she was ready "at the request of the War Department," to tell the grounds upon which she based her assertions. Mrs. Humiston said later that she had received a telegram yesterday morning from Raymond B. Fosdick, head of the Committee on Army Morals, asking her to go to Washington and give the committee her proofs if she had any. She added that she didn't intend to go to Washington at the request of Mr. Fosdick.

Mrs. Humiston, speaking at a dinner given by the Women Lawyers' Association on Thursday night, asserted that she knew of 600 girls "at a military encampment" who were about to become mothers and who had no husbands. She further said that at Camp Upton she knew of seven of such "little mothers" dead. Two of these cases, she said she had investigated and she had all the facts. The other five cases she promised to investigate in the near future.

THE NEW YORK TIMES, having received denials of Mrs. Humiston's statements from Washington and Camp Upton on Thursday night, yesterday asked her to reveal the sources of her information or to give such facts as she had in order that the Government might be able to take some sort of corrective action. This she declined to do, saying that it would not be proper to give out her facts in cases, some of which she "might intend to prosecute," others which she had not thoroughly investigated.

Declines to Tell Fosdick.

"I was asked by Mr. Fosdick this morning," said Mrs. Humiston, "to go to Washington and to give the Government any facts I might have regarding conditions of immorality at our encampments. I will not do this on the request of Mr. Fosdick or any one else like him. If the War Department wants to know anything about the assertions I have made let it ask me officially.

"Let Secretary of War Baker ask me to investigate the conditions about our camps. Let him guarantee me a free hand in the investigation, giving me time, money, and a pass to all the camps and I will show him that what I said was true. I can give him then details of the cases of 600 young girls, near one of the camps who are about to become mothers. But there must be no attempt at whitewashing the matter if I prove my statements.

"Or else let a newspaper, if it is interested, give me my expenses and I will make an investigation and will give full details. But I must make the investigation and the paper must be willing to stand the gaff of the prosecution of such cases as I divulge. Let them ask me to investigate and I will do so.

"I have investigated through my office the facts in the case of the death of the two young girls at Upton and I am going to investigate the others in my own way. I will not divulge a fact until I am ready.

Mrs. Humiston's Suggestion.

"I believe that something should be done in this matter, for the sake of our young girls. If it is true that the health of the soldiers must be cared for, then I suggest that licensed resorts be established at the camps. Also, I suggest that these fatherless babies who are coming into the world be legitimatized, be given the name of the father at any rate, and both mother and child cared for. Remember, these young mothers in New York now have the vote, whether they care for it or not, and remember, also, that they will hate their country if this shame is allowed to remain on their shoulders."

Mrs. Humiston continued to make charges against the military, some of which she admitted were hearsay. She emphasized the point that what she wanted was money for her expenses as an investigator. When she was asked if she didn't realize she was injuring the American army by her unproved assertions, she said she would prove them later, and that anyhow her consideration was for "our young girls and not our soldiers."

GEN. BELL DENOUNCES HUMISTON CHARGES

Camp Upton Commander Issues Statement Following Quick Investigation — Regrets Her Nonappearance.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP UPTON, YAPHANK, L. I., Nov. 16.—The charges made before the Women's Lawyer Association last night by Mrs. Grace Humiston that, to her knowledge, two and possibly seven girls about to become mothers had died at Camp Upton, aroused intense indignation this morning among both officers and men of the New York City Division. They asserted that these statements are preposterous, especially in view of the unusual precautions that have been taken to safeguard morals in the camp and in towns and settlements in the neighborhood of the military reservation.

When his attention was called to Mrs. Humiston's statements early this morning Major Gen. J. Franklin Bell, commander of the Seventy-seventh Division, began an investigation in order to ascertain whether there was any evidence, either direct or remote, that might support the charges. He found none and the matter had his personal attention throughout the day. The following statement was given out at General Bell's headquarters last night:

"Statements made by Mrs. Grace Humiston last night at the banquet of the Women Lawyers' Association at the Café Boulevard were called to General Bell's attention by the representatives of the metropolitan press. His particular attention was called to the following statement in the daily press:

"First—That at one of the camps, the town of which she did not specify, there are 600 girls who are about to become mothers, while reports have reached her of seven girls similarly situated who have died at Camp Upton.

"Second—That she knew the facts as to two of these cases, and that she was going to Camp Upton today to learn the truth as to the others.

"Third—That it developed in the course of Mrs. Humiston's address that in her work for the protection of young women she is being aided by six policemen acting under a lieutenant, all assigned to her by Police Commissioner Woods.

"Fourth—That Mrs. Humiston asked the question: 'What are we to do about the hundreds of young girls who are about to become mothers?'

Explains Camp Safeguards.

"After considering the subject carefully, General Bell dictated the following statement for the press:

"From Mrs. Humiston's statements and the question she asked, the average reader might easily be led, erroneously, to assume that no one connected with training camps had foreseen any danger to unprotected women, or that all had been indifferent to much danger; that no steps whatever had been taken to guard against such dangers. I think it well, therefore, that the public should know that the Secretary of War himself, so long ago as May 22, issued most comprehensive instructions, in detail, to every military commander in the United States, including departments, training camps, and other military establishments, defining their authority under Sections 12 and 13 of the Army bill, which deal with the regulations governing the prohibition of alcoholic liquors near or in military camps, and for the prevention of the social evil within such distances of said places as might be designated by the President. In this letter he entered most carefully into a description of the measures which might be taken by all commanding officers to prevent such abuses.

"In this letter he also called attention to the fact that he had charged the Commission on Training Camp Activities with the duty of co-operating with commanding officers expressly for the purpose of preventing immorality.

"This committee has sent special female agents to all camps, whose sole duty it is to look after the protection of women around camps and to guard against anticipated dangers. It is also the duty of military police to watch such matters carefully and, in addition to this, precautions, it is not advisable to disclose, are taken by all military authorities, using facilities which have been confidentially provided for that purpose.

Commander Knows of no Deaths.

"It is not possible that even one girl could have died at Camp Upton, much less seven, and I have not heard of it. I have heard of no death, whatever, and since references in the morning papers to Mrs. Humiston's address were called to my attention early this morning, I have been diligently investigating every possible source of accurate knowledge or information. These efforts were begun nearly ten hours ago and thus far I have been unable to locate any one who has heard of anything furnishing the slightest foundation for Mrs. Humiston's allegations.

"I have been expecting a call from her all day. It is now 6 P. M., and dark, but I have not heard of Mrs. Humiston being at Camp Upton. Mrs. Humiston is not a novice in dealing with idle rumors; she is presumably well aware of how easily rumors are started and statements made with apparent sincerity which have not the slightest foundation in fact.

"She states that in her work for the protection of young women she is aided by six policemen, under a Lieutenant, all assigned to her by Police Commissioner Woods. It would seem inexcusable of a person of her prominence and occupation, with such assistants at her disposal, to give currency to such extraordinary sensational statements without the slightest apparent effort to ascertain the truth before uttering them. It is indeed curious that any one belonging to her profession should make such statements and then announce that she knew of two cases and was 'going to Camp Upton tomorrow to learn the truth as to the others.'

"Though I have been able to find no foundation whatever for these rumors, and although I am morally convinced that there is no foundation for them, I cannot make positive assertions without exhaustive evidence on which to base them. I can, therefore, only claim that every one acquainted with the circumstances at Camp Upton is even more incredulous than were Mrs. Humiston's hearers. I have another local source of possible information, namely, the Fosdick Commission agent, whose sole business is to watch developments in this line in the vicinity of this camp. I have been unable to locate this agent today.

"I have still the other source of information, namely, Mrs. Humiston. She states that she knows of two cases of girls who have died at Camp Upton who were about to be come mothers. One must naturally conclude that Mrs. Humiston meant to imply that persons of this camp were responsible for their misfortune. The first persons to enter this camp were laborers who came here to clear the forest on July 5. Not a selected man arrived here until Sept. 10.

"I have written to Mrs. Humiston to ascertain the names of the two girls she knows of who were about to become mothers and died at Camp Upton.

"I shall continue my investigation, and if I ever succeed in finding any foundation whatever for Mrs. Humiston's allegations, I shall frankly disclose what I learn to the press.

"J. FRANKLIN BELL,
Major General, U. S. Army, Commanding."

After he had given out his statement General Bell was asked whether the military authorities would take any additional precautions tomorrow and Sunday, when the camp would be crowded with visitors.

"Look here," exclaimed the General, "if you or Mrs. Humiston, or any other person can think of any measures we are not already using I shall be glad to put them into effect."

German Propaganda Suspected.

It is known at Camp Upton that many erroneous rumors concerning the camp have circulated in New York. While they do not divulge their evidence, some officers said that they had reason to believe that these rumors came from pro-German sources. Officers also pointed out today that the soldiers had not been in camp long enough to be guilty of the charges made by Mrs. Humiston.

No women are permitted to be in company barracks after retreat in the late afternoon, and at no time are they permitted to go about the camp unescorted. Unescorted women visitors are conducted to the Y. W. C. A. hostess houses to await soldier friends and relatives by representatives who meet all trains at the Camp Upton Station. The jurisdiction of the military police embraces not only the sixteen square miles of the military reservation, but five miles from the Camp Upton boundaries.

Representatives of the War Department Commission on Training Camp Activities, who are at work not only at Camp Upton, but in the neighboring towns, report that local officials are co-operating with them in every way.

PRAISES SOLDIERS' MORALS.

Judge Advocate of Camp Wadsworth Defends Men of His Division.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP WADSWORTH, SPARTANBURG, S. C., Nov. 16.—Discussing Mrs. Grace Humiston's charges that immorality was prevalent about army camps, Major J. Leslie Kincaid, Judge Advocate, today said that if Mrs. Humiston aimed her allegations at this station her complaints had no basis in fact. Major Kincaid said that the social evil had been eliminated in Spartanburg and neighboring towns. He also said that in the months the 27th Division has been in camp only one case of intoxication had developed among 32,000 men.

Major Kincaid attributed the high moral standard of the division to the splendid ideals of the men and to the diligent care that has been taken to remove temptation from them.

ALL SING AS THEY MARCH

Major Guthrie Tells of Seeing a German Officer Kick One of His Own Wounded Men.

"We have got their measure. Of course, it is hard fighting, but there is no more chance of their getting through the west front than there is of getting the stars from the heavens," said Major Donald Guthrie of the 1st Canadian Division, who is to talk of the war for the Aviation Committee of the National Special Aid Society at the War Relief Assembly, to be held in the Automobile Assembly Rooms this evening, to reporters yesterday.

Major Guthrie is a large man, who walks with a slight limp from one of his many wounds. He tells a straightforward story, with no scare effects. He is interested in some of the wild tales he hears here and wonders where they come from.

"When I hear these scare stories," he says, "I say to myself, 'where have I been all this time!' It is the most cheerful place in the world, at the front. We don't talk about any of these things and you never see the men marching along a road that they are not singing. If I want to be really cheerful I go to the hospital. I never heard a wounded man complain and I have never seen one who was afraid to die. If So-and-So is smashed up, well, we're sorry, but that's all. If I thought of the 50 per cent. of my friends who have been killed I couldn't be cheerful.

"It will take from three to seven years to end this war," continued the Major. "The English will never give in. And it is not going to be won in any other way than by hard fighting. There is nothing in the economic conditions of the Germans, nothing in the food conditions or internal dissensions that will win the war for us. We have got to lick them on the field—smash 'em. When the prisoners come in from the field they are shell-shocked, with staring eyes and white, strained faces and people who see them think they are starving. As far as I know they have food enough and they have plenty of ammunition. I do think there is something in their loss of morale—that is being lowered.

"The Germans are splendid machine-gun firers, but we can put the heavy artillery all over them. I believe your General Pershing is right when he recommends going back to rifles.

"Of the way the Germans treat their own men, I remember one instance. It was after Messines Ridge, and a German officer who had been made prisoner had had his record taken. It was about 2 A. M. It was sleeting and we took him over to where some of his men were lying wounded. He was angry at having to go into the house with his men, and as he entered he stubbed his toe over a young fellow who had a wound in his abdomen and was waiting for treatment. That made him furious and he began beating the wounded man, who died in a couple of hours. German discipline is different from ours. We say to our men, 'Come,' and they say to theirs, 'Go!' We invite our men to an expedition we are going to share. Our officers lead and the German officers follow.

"The thing that has done the most to keep up the morale of our men in the war I believe is the Young Men's Christian Association. They keep the men amused and entertained, giving performances with the professional men in the ranks. I put on a three-act comedy myself at the Montreal Y. M. C. A. hut. We had gowns and wigs from Paris, and for over two hours, with the shells shrieking overhead, 900 men nearly roared their heads off with laughter. That hut was blown into splinters the next day."

$8,000,000 PHOTOGRAPH CO.

Underwood & Underwood Expanded from $100,000 Corporation.

Underwood & Underwood, photographers, were incorporated in Delaware yesterday with $8,000,000 capital stock. The previous incorporation, registered in the State of New Jersey, was for $100,000.

Elmer Underwood, the Treasurer, said last night that the corporation had been expanded because it was planned to open branch houses in various parts of the country and that more capital was needed for that purpose. He said the growth of the business was not due directly to the war or the sale of pictures from Europe, and that most of the branches would be in the line of commercial photography.

OIL PLANT IS BLOWN UP.

2 Killed and 5 Missing at Standard's Refinery in Oklahoma.

TULSA, Okla., Nov. 16.—Two employes were burned to death and five men are missing as a result of the explosion and fire last night, which destroyed the Standard Oil Company's refining plant at Norfolk, Okla. The loss is estimated at $500,000. The explosion was caused by dynamite, according to oil men.

An automobile carrying five men passed through Yale, five miles distant, a short time before the plant was blown up. Suspecting them a posse was formed and followed, but had not reached Norfolk when the first explosion came.

And there you will find your old sweetheart again!

Come—drop that newspaper for tonight!

Maybe she's tired of a paper wall and silence and the width of a lighted table between you.

Maybe she's thinking of those other evenings when you sat next each other—and there were no lights.

Come—forget the news for once. Take her to a theatre where, any time you go, you'll see a picture worthy of your best and finest moods—clean, well directed, played by famous stars, and bearing a Paramount or Artcraft Pictures trademark.

How long since you sat that way together?

Habit has built a wall of commonplaces. You sit on opposite sides of a table—and read newspapers or pore over bills.

But here . . . . there is no table between you. No light to disclose harsh realities. You sit close, side by side, and maybe your hands touch. You are learning how to be lovers again, from fleeting lights and shadows that move across a screen!

And as that unconscious hard crust of life is melted by the kindly warmth of a finer, tender feeling, you glance at each other and see—no, not brows knit with the problems and plans of today and tomorrow—

But the shy young girl and strong, romantic youth of those other, bygone days and their never-forgotten sweetness!

You have found your old sweetheart again!

And maybe you have not spoken—but you have felt—and understood.

You have been silent—yes, but it was silent understanding.

HORSE SHOW SETS RECORD FOR EVENT

Great Exhibit at Garden Closes with All Marks for Receipts and Attendance Broken.

SWELLS RED CROSS FUND

Huge Throng of Spectators at Historic Arena on Final Day as Championships Are Awarded

The most successful and picturesque National Horse Show held in Madison Square Garden in many years ended last night with a demonstration of patriotism which brought the fashionable gathering which packed the old arena to its multitudinous feet while the Old Guard Band played "The Star-Spangled Banner." The National Horse Show Association wanted to "do its bit" this year, and it did it well.

Stimulated by the effort to raise a large sum for the Red Cross, the horsemen rallied to the show ring as they have never rallied before, and the total receipts, to be turned over to war charity, will amount to more than $75,000, and in addition to this many of the exhibitors will turn their winnings over to the cause which will bring the horsemen's tribute to more than $100,000.

This year's show was something more than a great spectacle for charity. In the general quality of the horses there has never been a better exhibition in the Garden. In hunters and saddle horses no show in this country has ever equaled it. The Horse Show officials and the Red Cross Committee are proud of the unselfish demonstration of patriotism. In its double purpose, as a display of breeding and training of the country's best equine stock and as a commendable gift to the Red Cross funds the show was a flattering success.

Champions of Ring Applauded.

All the feats of horsemanship which go to enliven the tanbark ring held the spectators in closest interest. The hunters, the saddle horses, and the harness horses, and the ponies, all went through their prettiest paces, and as champion after champion was named each was greeted with rounds of applause.

To William H. Moore of Pride's Crossing, Mass., went the lion's share of the blue ribbons and the championships. Judge Moore has been a consistent winner in many shows, but no victories of the veteran horseman have ever made him so proud of his horses as his triumphs at this show. Judge Moore's horses carried away twenty-six blue ribbons, while the Hamilton Stable of James Cox Brady was second with twelve blues and Walter H. Hanley of Providence was third with ten firsts. Judge Moore's horses carried off nearly all the honors in the harness classes. Mr. Brady's ponies brought him many of his ribbons, while Mr. Hanley's saddle horses came in for especial attention.

E. T. Stotesbury of Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, won many ribbons with his roadsters, while Thomas Hitchcock, the Glen Riddle Farms, and Sir Adam Beck were the leaders with the finest collection of hunters ever shown in one ring.

Yesterday's session saw the veteran saddle champion Sceptre regain the laurels which were lost early in the week. Twice this prize winner of Mrs. Robert E. Tod got the gate, but yesterday she came back into her own, and defeated her greatest rival, Driftwood Blaze. Judge Moore received a great reception when he drove his pair of proud beauties, Lord Seaton and Lady Seaton, to victory in the championship for pairs of harness horses, with another pair from his stable, Raeburn and Whitewall capturing the reserve.

Rag Time Steps to Blue.

There was some lively competition for the Smithtown Hunt Cup, in which the hunters were ridden by bonafide members of recognized hunts. The horses went over eight barriers, including the in and out jump. The blue ribbon was taken by Rag Time, ridden by F. Ambrose Clark, while Sir Thomas, ridden by Miss Marian Beck, was second. Safety First, ridden by Isaac H. Clothier, Jr., was third, and Falmouth, with Sir Adam Beck up, was fourth. In the event for the Murling Cups for thoroughbred hunters, ridden by women, Miss Ivy Maddison won with Down East, the hunter which threw Becky Lanier on Thursday night.

The most impressive collection of hunters of the week—thirty-eight in all—kept the ring in a turmoil of action in the Corinthian class, with the riders in regulation hunting costumes, the men in their red coats and black velvet caps and the women in hunting habits. Many of the best known riders to the hounds from the prominent Eastern hunt clubs were represented in the competition.

The event was a clean sweep for the Glen Riddle hunters, for Gerry Peiper rode Bally Heather, Clinker, and Nancy Pansy to first, second, and third prizes, while fourth place went to the Hamilton Farm's Hamilton Kilkee, ridden by F. Ambrose Clark. Miss Constance Vauclain, Harry Payne Whitney, Oakleigh Thorne, Sir Adam Beck, and Miss Lida Fleitmann were among the exhibitors in this event.

SCEPTRE GETS CHAMPIONSHIP.

Judges Reverse Their Previous Decisions in Awarding Final Honor.

Seldom has more sentiment been noticeable at a horse show than that which accompanied the judging of the saddle championships, which was the feature of the afternoon program. Mrs. Robert E. Tod's chestnut mare, Sceptre, an old champion of unrivalled excellence, had been brought out of retirement to add lustre to the Red Cross show. The venture proved a disastrous one for after one victory in a mediocre field the once peerless mare had been forced to yield on three occasions to the freshness and quality displayed by Walter H. Hanley's Driftwood Blaze, a five-year-old that scored first in the novice class and had captured four first prizes prior to his entry in the championship class for the smaller division.

On two occasions Sceptre was gated, but with frequent exhibition she regained her form and by a magnificent exhibition of all gaits she came back in a sensational manner and, turning the tables on Driftwood Blaze, recaptured the crown and carried off the championship in her class. It did not take the critical crowd long to recognize than in some wonderful manner Sceptre had been rejuvenated.

The aged mare was ridden by James Schweiger and his clever horsemanship added not a little to the smooth performance. To use a racing term, Sceptre was on her toes from the moment the bugle called the five winners into the ring and she stepped so daintily in the preliminary walk, trot, and canter that Northman, Minstrel, and Beverly were quickly sent out and the issue remained to be fought out between the old champion and Driftwood Blaze, which had the advantage of three previous decision in his favor.

Crowd Favors Sceptre.

Mrs. Hanley, who rode Driftwood Blaze, might have been a trifle over-confident because of her previous victories, or it might have been the superlative excellence of Sceptre that made Driftwood Blaze suffer by comparison with Mrs. Tod's champion. Whatever the reason, it was plain after a few turns of the course that the sympathy of the large crowd was with the mare, and the frequent applause she received warranted the belief that she would regain her crown.

The applause of the spectators seemed to be appreciated by the handsome chestnut, which moved with more freedom and animation as she broke from a trot to a canter at the word of command. There was some applause, too, for young Driftwood Blaze, a fine animal that has a great show career before him; but there was no mistaking the joy of the thousands of horse-lovers who had waited patiently for Sceptre to come back and display the inimitable quality that has gained her nearly half a hundred blue ribbons.

The judges, F. Ambrose Clark and R. Lawrence Smith, had to reverse their previous decisions in order to place Sceptre above Driftwood Blaze; but they had the courage of their convictions and with little ado showed that they agreed with the judgment of the crowd when they pinned the championship rosette on the bridle of the beautiful chestnut. Jimmy Schweiger broke into smiles then, and as he rode from the ring patted Sceptre affectionately, while the Garden resounded with hearty cheers.

Having lost one championship that appeared to be within his grasp, Mr. Hanley came near losing another when the undefeated Twilight came in to compete for the title for horses over 15.2 hands. Like his stable companion, Driftwood Blaze, Twilight had not suffered a defeat at the show; but he had a larger field against him, as seven horses that had been placed first or second were entitled to compete. Donneconna, Over There, Sandy McDonald, and Aviator were quickly eliminated, leaving W. R. Coes Ben Dale, a newcomer of thoroughbred blood, and Radiant, owned by Eleanora R. Sears, to dispute the honors with Twilight, last year's winner. Ben Dale was the next to get the gate, and Radiant and Twilight were put through their paces again.

Twilight Gains Tricolor.

There was a repetition of the scene in the smaller class, for the crowd evidently favored Radiant, a more showy horse than Twilight, and which stepped in brilliant fashion under the guiding hand of Emil Anthony. Twilight had beaten Radiant when they met in a previous class, and this time the judges did not feel like overruling themselves, for they gave the tricolor to Twilight and placed Radiant in reserve.

There was a reversal of previous form also in the championship for harness ponies, in which Hamilton Farms' Hamilton Flame and Willisbrook Farms' Tissington Amity were the chief contenders. Hamilton Dianthus also was under consideration until the strain became too much for him, and he reared so badly that he was sent from the ring, and Flame was left to fight it out for James Cox Brady.

In the hackney class on Wednesday for the Montpelier Cup, Tissington Amity had won over Flame, but the latter was full of fire as well as flame yesterday. He was right on edge, and showed to advantage over the heavier and slower Tissington Amity, with the result that he was named the winner and Tissington Amity placed reserve. In the championship for pairs, later, Hamilton Dianthus was kept under control until he and Flame had achieved a second victory, with Tissington Amity and Dinarth the reserve pair.

There was such disparity in the sizes of the ponies entered for the saddle championship that it was divided into sections for the large and the small. Two beautiful animals, just under 14.2, were chief contenders in the larger class, and after long deliberation the judges awarded the title to Mrs. Louise Lee Haggin's Anne Rose, with Walter H. Hanley's Powder Puff reserve. Miss Patricia Garvan had a monopoly of the second section, taking the championship ribbon with Chestnut Blossom and the reserve with Lady Manners.

Canadian-Bred Rejected.

The championships began in the morning with classes for horses suitable to become hunters. Judged in classes first, the heavyweight leader was Morgan Rattler, owned by Harry T. Peters, which defeated a fine entry in the Canadian-bred Hamilton Trustful, a five-year-old, standing 17 hands, that bids fair to develop into a champion. The Meadows Stable provided the best middleweight in Delbeck, and Joseph H. Collins sent Cragwood into the ring to capture the honors in the lightweight division.

When the winners came together for the title, it fell to Cragwood. This fine specimen was imported by Mrs. Wadsworth of the Genessee Valley Hunt, and was not thought so good as another that came with him from Ireland. After winning for Mr. Collins on Tuesday, Cragwood, which is by a noted Irish sire, Catty Crag, was sold to Colonel Herbert Cox of Toronto for $3,000, and will be turned over to his new owner, with the additional honor captured yesterday.

FRENCH AVIATOR IS POPULAR.

Young Hero and His Medals Attract Society at Show.

The last day of the Horse Show was marked with much social interest and the attendance was large. The free admittance of all army and navy men in uniform swelled the crowd, and added greatly to the picturesqueness of the scene. More than 300 soldiers and sailors passed through the gate. Some of the boxholders gave over their boxes for the use of the visiting marines.

A young French aviator, just over from France, Lieutenant Georges Flackaire, attracted attention when he entered and passed around the promenade, owing to his youthful appearance—he is only 24—and the number of medals he wore, including the Legion of Honor. He was a guest, with Alan R. Hawley, President of the Aero Club, of Mrs. Henry L. Burnett in Box 77, and has come here as an instructor in aviation. Mrs. Henry Fleming and Robert L. Andrews were the other members of the party.

Miss Cathleen Vanderbilt, the young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt, visited the exhibition for the first time yesterday and occupied the Vanderbilt box, No. 14. She wore a frock of red velvet, with a coat of black velvet and a matching Tam o' Shanter, and had several young girl friends with her. Miss Miriam Harriman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Harriman, entertained a group of young folks in Box 55 at the afternoon session.

Mrs. F. Burrall Hoffman, whose four sons are in service, and who is spending the Winter in Washington, D. C., was also among the afternoon visitors.

The cold snap brought out the rich furs last evening, and there were several coats of leopard skin noticed on the promenade. The arena of the Garden is noted for its draughts, and furs have been worn generally by the occupants of the boxes.

Among those in attendance were Mrs. Adolf Ladenburg, Mrs. Jerome N. Bonaparte, Mrs. Gouverneur Kortright, Miss Eleanora Sears, Miss Marion Hollins, Mrs. Joseph W. Harriman, Mrs. David Wagstaff, Mrs. Henry Gray, Mrs. Frederic Watriss, Mr. and Mrs. W. Lanier Washington, Mrs. William M. Fleitmann, Mrs. William H. Moore, Mrs. William du Pont, Mr. and Mrs. E. Francis Hyde, Mr. and Mrs. Francis P. Garvan, Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark, Mrs. William Russell Grace, Foxhall Keene, Charles D. Lanier, Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock, Miss Barbara Guggenheim, and Mrs. Lyttleton Fox.

COLUMBIA IS HARD HIT.

Three Regulars Will Be Unable to Play Against Wesleyan Today.

This afternoon the Columbia 'Varsity will face the heavy Wesleyan eleven on South Field at 2 o'clock minus three of its regular warriors—Captain Cochran, Rosen, and Houlahan. Parnes, Weinstein, and Memmott will replace these three men. The fact that the Blue and White eleven defeated the Hobart team last Saturday by such a large margin is looked upon as a sign of the real strength of the local team.

Because Columbia's main drive is in her powerful line, the Morningside Heights institution's supporters believe that it will turn back the line plunges of its opponents today.

Wesleyan played a scoreless tie with Williams last Saturday, and, as the latter team defeated Columbia three weeks ago, this makes Wesleyan appear superior to the Blue and White on the unreliable basis of comparative scores. Amherst won from Wesleyan by about the same score as she did from Columbia, however, and by the results of those two games the two rivals will start on an equal footing.

Between the two halves of today's contest there will take place the last drive for the Y. M. C. A. Students' War Relief Fund. Columbia has been assigned $25,000 of the total fund of $1,000,000, and the workers for the fund expect Columbia to at least pledge the entire amount even if they cannot exceed their quota.

COLUMBIA CUBS TROUNCED.

The Columbia Cubs bowed in defeat before the strong Wesleyan freshmen eleven yesterday by 47 to 0. The visitors exhibited an attack that tore through the Blue and White line for repeated gains. Of the seven touchdowns Woodruff made three and Peck two. The only time that the Columbia yearlings threatened to score came just before the close of the second period, when two successful forward passes from Stewart to Cherkaskey brought the ball to the Wesleyan 15-yard line. The whistle blew and prevented a score.

In the second half the Wesleyan crowd ran away with the score, making five touchdowns. The Columbia line soon showed its weak spots, and through these the visitors went. Kienninger did some good defensive work, as did Eccles and Korn.

The lineup:

Wesleyan,'21,(47.)	Position.	Columbia,'21,(0.)
Steele	L.E.	Johnsen
Steiber	L.T.	Korn
Carlton	L.G.	Relyea
Hubbell	C.	Kalinski
Sano	R.G.	Backrack
Ramer	R.T.	Curnow
Hosdowich	R.E.	Eccles
Peck	Q.B.	Stewart
Bateman	L.H.B.	Mills
Johnson	R.H.B.	Laskey
Woodruff	F.B.	Carroll

Touchdowns—Woodruff, (3,) Peck, (2,) Hosdowich, Steele. Goals from touchdown—Peck, 5. Referee—Mr. Hennessey of Brown. Umpire—Ed. Thorp of De La Salle. Time of periods—Twelve minutes each.

Columbia Golfers on Links.

Twelve members of the Columbia University Club competed in a golf tournament at the Richmond County Country Club yesterday. It was the annual Fall tourney, but attracted the smallest field in the history of the event. A. P. Palmer won the low gross prize for thirty-six holes with 88, 92—180. J. S. Langthorn had the best net effort of the field with 216, 50—166.

PENN MAY UPHOLD PRESTIGE OF EAST

Wolverines Invade Franklin Field Today for Football Game of Unusual Importance.

The football game which stands out among the most important of the season to Eastern gridiron enthusiasts will be played this afternoon in Philadelphia between Pennsylvania and Michigan. This is the date on which the Yale-Princeton game would have been played if the war had not caused a disruption of athletic activities at these institutions. With the usual Yale, Princeton, and Harvard classics missing, today's game at Franklin Field takes on added importance. The contest will attract a large crowd, and while Penn may not have as strong an eleven as it would have had under normal conditions, Captain Miller has a fighting team which may be depended upon to give the Wolverines a battle all the way.

Michigan has been highly praised this season. Reports from the West emphasize the claim that Hurry-up-Yost has developed another topnotch eleven from comparatively green material. Walter Eckersall and Bill Heston, who ought to be pretty good judges of football material, both say that Yost has developed a fast, hard charging line which ranks with the best of his products. Eckersall says that Weston, the Wolverine quarter back, is the best he has seen for years.

Michigan's weak spots are at the wings, and as Penn has a couple of flank guardians in Captain Miller and Van Ginkle, who are of high order, the Michiganders would do well to expect trouble from this quarter. Penn has always had a faculty of playing its best against Michigan, and the eleven may be even better than the promising form displayed in the Pitt and Dartmouth games. Folwell has worked persistently in building up a defense which is sure to give the Westerners a battle.

Pennsylvania and Michigan have met twelve times and Penn has won six games, Michigan four, while two have resulted in scoreless ties. The worst defeat that Penn ever gave Michigan was in 1908 when the Quakers won 29 to 0. Michigan's best job against Penn was in 1914 when the Wolverines won 34 to 3. Penn won last year 10 to 7.

Penn has a high-class back field in Bell, Berry, Straus, and Light, with Quigley as a reserve back. It is generally believed that this back field is capable of playing better football than it has shown at any time this season. Michigan comes East undefeated and expects to win. But it is against these highly confident teams that Penn sometimes shines, and there is a strong undercurrent of feeling at Penn that the eleven is going to do a lot better than any one anticipates.

There are many other games between colleges which are traditional rivals and which will arouse much interest among their followers. The Syracuse-Colgate battle should be a close, hard-fought affair. Colgate has worked hard since the Brown defeat to get ready for this clash with Syracuse. After Brown had defeated Colgate 7 to 6, Syracuse came along and beat Brown 6 to 0. Colgate sees a return of some of its former greatness if it can upset Syracuse.

Williams and Amherst will have their annual tilt at Williamstown, and as Williams has not been defeated this year, it is more than anxious to go through the season with a clean slate. Williams has a defeat against Cornell to its credit and played a scoreless tie with Wesleyan. The Navy plays its final game of the season with Villanova and should come through with flying colors. The Army also expects an easy time with Lebanon Valley as an opponent.

Fordham will make its first journey away from Fordham Field, playing Cornell at Ithaca. There will be two local games of interest, Columbia playing Wesleyan at South Field, while New York University will battle with Stevens at Hoboken. Dartmouth battles with Tufts, while Brown will take on Colby.

Followers of Harvard and Yale will have their only opportunity of the season to see representatives of the two institutions pitted against each other at Cambridge. The Freshman elevens will play at Soldiers' Field and a hard battle should result. Harvard has a wealth of material this year among the youngsters who have been coached by Don Wallace. The Yale cubs showed surprising strength against their opponents this year and should give a good account of themselves.

The annual game between Exeter and Andover is also booked for today at Exeter, and this event always results in an interesting struggle. Among the "informal" elevens Harvard will go to Newport to play Cupid Black's galaxy of stars, while Yale will play Trinity at New Haven.

One of the most important games of the West will be played at Columbus when Ohio State, last year's champions, will play Illinois in a game which may decide the conference title. Minnesota meets Chicago and Northwestern clashes with Iowa. In the South the great Georgia Tech eleven will play the Carlisle Indians, and should run up another big score. Virginia and Vanderbilt will play at Charlottesville.

Pittsburgh's mighty eleven should have no trouble in disposing of Carnegie Tech in a game which arouses considerable local interest around the smoky metropolis.

HARD FIGHT FOR FORDHAM.

Cornell Coaches Expect Close Game in Ithaca Battle.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 16.—A hotly contested gridiron battle is anticipated here tomorrow, when Fordham and Cornell line up on Schoelkopf Field in the closing engagement of the home season. In the judgment of Cornell coaches the teams are evenly matched and victory may go to the eleven that fights the hardest and shows superior judgment.

The Fordham squad of nineteen players under Coach McCaffrey arrived tonight after a tiresome trip. A few supporters accompanied the team. There seems to be a lot of confidence in the Fordham group that the New York eleven will win, some of it based apparently on the hope that Cornell has not recuperated from last week's crushing defeat by Michigan.

The Ithacans are in better physical condition than they were last Saturday though two regulars, Ackerknecht, left tackle, and Reuther, centre, will be unable to play because of injuries. Harris will play left tackle and Sherman Trowbridge, centre. The balance of the team is in good shape and the backfield is ready and eager for a chance to make good.

The selection of Spiegelberg at right end will strengthen the team, he being the best of all of the men tried out this year. Both teams are expected to rely to a large extent on an open attack.

FORDHAM EAGER FOR FRAY.

Two Regulars Will Be Out of Lineup Against Cornell Today.

The Fordham football squad of nineteen players, Trainers Wefers and Webber, Coach McCaffery, and Manager Delehanty left for Ithaca yesterday morning, where Cornell will be played this afternoon. Although minus two regulars in Frisch and Crovat, half back and quarter back respectively, the Maroons are banking that the line will be strong enough to enable the backs to score.

Today's clash marks the first game between the two teams since 1909. Bull McCaffery was Fordham's fast end then and he will again oppose the Ithacans today as head coach. Fordham triumphed by a 12-6 score in 1909.

The Maroon lineup will be as follows: Left end, Fitzpatrick; left tackle, Christiansen; left guard, Abbott; centre, Golden; right guard, McGrath; right tackle, Gulick; right end, Dumoe; quarterback, Brennan; left half back, Erwig; right half back, Galligan; full back, Colletti. The other players to make the trip were O'Connell, Crowley, Fogarty, Kendricks, Mullen, Gilmartin, Ryan, and Frisch.

CRIMSON TO OPPOSE BLUE.

Harvard and Yale Freshmen Have Final Drill Before Game.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 16.—The Harvard and Yale freshman football teams, which will meet here tomorrow, each practiced in the stadium this afternoon. The Crimson youngsters received a big send-off from their classmates, after which the New Haven boys had the field to themselves. Harvard will play practically as against Princeton a week ago. The team is in good physical trim and has done a lot of work during the week against the 'Varsity and the Navy Yard team.

The Harvard informals, who tomorrow will go to Newport, R. I., to play "Cupid" Black's all-stars, also practiced for the last time this season. The regular rush line will be used, but an eleventh-hour shift has been made in the back field. Blanchard, who has been out of the game for more than a week, will return to play half back, and Hoffman, rather than Weden or Works, will play the other half with Captain Horween at full back.

The lineup of the Freshman teams tomorrow will be:

WESLEYAN IN CONDITION.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Nov. 16.—The Wesleyan football team held its last practice yesterday afternoon in preparation for the game with Columbia in New York City tomorrow. With the exception of Keeler, the 'Varsity quarter back, who is nursing a bad ankle, all the first-string men are in good condition. Keeler will be able to start the game, it is expected, and it is hoped that he can continue throughout. Markthaler may run the team if he gives out. Wesleyan has improved greatly in the last three weeks and now has a good defensive machine.

Wesleyan and Columbia first met on the gridiron in 1890. A game had been scheduled for the year before, but was canceled owing to the weather. It was in 1889 that President Woodrow Wilson, then a professor at Wesleyan, coached the local eleven so that Columbia, by that cancellation, missed the opportunity to play against a team coached by the President of the United States.

RENSSELAER'S FINAL GAME.

Engineers Await Contest with Holy Cross Confidently.

TROY, N. Y., Nov. 16.—The Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute eleven will play its final game of the season with Holy Cross at Worcester, Mass., tomorrow. Though at first disheartened by their defeat at the hands of Union after so good a showing during the season, the engineers have had their morale restored by three afternoons of stiff scrimmage practice this week, and are ready to do their best against Coach Jack Reed's alma mater.

The Institute team, with only two veterans left in the lineup, has been congratulated on having tallied against Union for the first time since athletic relations were restored four years ago, and Norton, the big senior full back, who never played football until this season, and who kicked a pretty field goal from the 40-yard line, has shown ability in drill as a drop-kicker this week. Half-back Parrott will be out of the game, as the last contest proved his leg had not been restored to condition, and he will rest in preparation for the basket ball season.

DE PALMA SPEEDS TO A NEW RECORD

Covers 633.12 Miles in Six Hours, Bettering Previous Mark by 67.12 Miles.

A new world's record for six hours was set by Ralph De Palma at the Sheepshead Bay Speedway yesterday afternoon. The Italian pilot covered 633.12 miles, against the mark of 566 miles made by Dario Resta, Gene Chassagne, and Lee K. Guinness, alternately driving a Sunbeam car on the Brooklands track, London, England, on Oct. 1, 1913. De Palma's average was 105.6 miles per hour, against the former average of 94.4.

De Palma drove his Packard, fitted with a Liberty motor, alone, the entire time. The cold, raw wind cut ribbons into his skin, and when he made his first stop after two hours' riding, his face was bleeding. The game little champion never faltered an instant, however, even though the drive tested his courage to the core.

After he had covered 112.96 miles in the first hour, cracking the former record of 107.9 miles, Fred Wagner, who was in charge of the trials for the A. A. A., remarked that he was sure that the old record would have to go. The second hour took De Palma 224.91 miles, against the old mark of 195.1. De Palma was averaging better than 112 miles per hour when he passed the two-hour mark. In the third hour he experienced some tire trouble, which brought his speed down to 109.85, with a distance of 329.56 miles covered. The fourth hour took him to 440.56 miles. The old record for this duration was 380 miles.

At the end of five hours De Palma had covered 535.72 miles. The old record for this time was 473 miles. At this point De Palma was 62 miles ahead of the former mark. He settled down to real driving again after a short stop for gasoline and oil at the end of the fifth hour, and in the last sixty minutes covered 108.6 miles, putting the six-hour mark at 633.12 miles.

De Palma's distance was the more remarkable because of the fact that the former record was made by three of the greatest drivers that have ever piloted a car on the Brooklands course. It is not likely that the marks made yesterday will be broken for some time, because the day, while uncomfortable for De Palma, was ideal for speed tests.

GEORGETOWN AT TOP FORM.

Gilroy and Other Stars to Face Generals Today.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 16.—Strengthened by the return to form of its crippled stars, Georgetown will face Washington and Lee tomorrow at Roanoke, Va., for the football honors of the South Atlantic section. With Virginia suspending football this season, the only contenders for the honors are the Hilltoppers and the Lexington Generals.

Gilroy's injured shoulder is no longer bothering him, and he is expected to give one of his best exhibitions against W. and L. Gross, whose lip was cut severely in the Fordham game, is again able to play. Bob Zuger is again showing speed on his feet, and will start at left guard. Not since the Springfield game has Coach Exendine been able to put as strong a team on the field as he will tomorrow against Washington and Lee.

From all accounts, the Generals have a light, speedy, aggressive combination. They lost to Georgia Tech, 63 to 0, but have developed rapidly in the last month, and the Hilltoppers expect a stiff game before victory is decided.

N. Y. U. ELEVEN ON EDGE.

Team Prepared for Hard Battle Against Stevens.

Because of the absence of the freshmen, who were playing the West Point plebes, the New York University football team had no scrimmage yesterday, but completed its grooming for the Stevens game today with a signal drill on Ohio Field. When the team faces the engineers at Hoboken the men will be in better physical shape than they have been at any time since the beginning of the season. The practices this week have instilled speed and team work into the eleven.

In the drill all plays were gone through and finishing touches put on wherever needed. Egan, the Violet toe artist, practiced his favorite pastime, drop-kicking. During the session he placed the ball squarely between the bars eleven times in succession alternately from the 35 and 40-yard lines.

COCHRAN IS EASY VICTOR.

Leads Howison by 2,000 to 1,634 at End of 18.2 Balkline Match.

Welker Cochran, Chicago's young billiardist, last night triumphed over the Canadian veteran, Leonard Howison, in the final block of their five nights' match at 18.2 balkline billiards at Howison's Academy, and ended the play with the total score of 2,000 against Howison's 1,634. Cochran, though outplayed in the final block, managed to maintain his lead of the early blocks of the play, and easily overcame Howison's steadier playing with fitful rallies in which he clustered and gathered the spheroids well. He had high runs of 89, 67, and 30, with an average of 14 8-28 for his twenty-eight turns at the table. Howison's highest efforts were 64, 59, and 44, with an average of 15 8-28.

MINOR LEAGUES MAY MERGE

Barrow Says His Circuit Also Will Adopt War Measure.

CHICAGO, Nov. 16.—Consolidation of the Western, Central and Three-I Leagues and the formation of two or three substantial organizations were suggested to H. H. Sexton, President of the National Association of Minor Leagues, on his return tonight from the Louisville meeting. A. R. Tearney of Chicago, President of the Three-I League, is back of the movement. Sexton will call a meeting of the three league presidents in Chicago next month to consider the proposal.

Edward G. Barrow of New York, President of the International League, said tonight that if left to his decision, he would recommend the suspension of the league for at least a year, when the club owners meet in New York on Dec. 10. The organization, he said, made no money last season, and with war conditions becoming more serious, the prospects for 1918 are anything but bright.

PROTECTS MINOR LEAGUE.

Clause in Contract with Players Provides for War Conditions.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 16.—Contracts of minor league clubs with baseball players for the season of 1919 will contain a special clause protecting the reserve rights of those clubs or leagues which are forced to suspend by reason of war conditions.

This clause will bind the player to abide by the reserve clause in his contract in the event the club to which he belongs, or the league of which the club is a part, is forced to suspend because of war conditions. It is provided, however, that this special clause shall be void if the club or league involved does not complete at least half of its scheduled season.

Hill Defeats Old Rivals.

POTTSTOWN, Penn., Nov. 16.—Hill School and Hotchkiss of Lakeville, Conn., played their annual game here this afternoon, which is always the climax of the football season at both schools. Hill won 12 to 9 after Hotchkiss had scored a touchdown on Hoyt's run of seventy-five yards in the first quarter. A thirty-yard run by McAlpin in the third quarter enabled him to score Hill's first touchdown, and he repeated his performance in the last period.

M'CORMACK SINGS TO OPERA THRONG

DISPLAYS BEAUTIFUL ART

But Rodolfo Is Not a Role Best Adapted for Him—Ruth Miller, American Soprano, Heard, Too.

LA BOHEME, Opera in four acts; book founded on "La Vie de Boheme," of Henry Murger, by Giuseppe Giacosa and Luigi Illica, (in Italian.) Music by Giacomo Puccini. At the Metropolitan Opera House.

Rodolfo .... John McCormack
Schaunard .... Adamo Didur
Benoit .... Pompilio Malatesta
Mimi .... Frances Alda
Parpignol .... Pietro Audisio
Marcello .... Giuseppe de Luca
Colline .... Andres de Segurola
Alcindoro .... Robert Leonhardt
Musetta .... Ruth Miller
A Sergeant .... Vincenzo Reschiglian
Conductor—Gennaro Papi.

A very large audience thronged the Metropolitan Opera House last evening for the first performance this season of Puccini's "La Bohème," which has become one of the pillars of the repertory prevailing there. The size of the audience was no doubt largely due to the popularity of Mr. John McCormack, who appeared as Rodolfo, one of the four irrepressible Bohemians. It was Mr. McCormack's first appearance as a member of the company of the Metropolitan Opera House, but it was not his first appearance on that stage, which be made in the season of 1911 as a member of the Chicago Opera Company in Victor Herbert's opera of "Natoma." Before that he was heard numerous times at the Manhattan Opera House. He is engaged at the Metropolitan for only a few performances.

It was perhaps not wholly fortunate that Mr. McCormack reappeared here first in this opera, for the part is not one best adapted for him. It needs a livelier dramatic temperament than his is, a potency of more passionate expression than he can give in either his singing or his action. First, in the first act, where there is much roistering and, last evening at least, considerable shouting, he was not conspicuous in the mêlée; nor in the duet with Mimi did he express the sudden surge of passion that overflows at their meeting.

The voice is a light one; it necessarily lacks some of the swelling and stentorian effects that have become familiar in "La Bohème," and which, in large part, it was written to provide. But what Mr. McCormack contributed here, and later in the opera, was much beautiful singing, of its kind unsurpassable in quality of tone, in purity of diction, in finish of phrase, and in most of the subtler graces of the art that are not always the first to be recognized. There are other operatic works in which it may be hoped he will be heard wherein Mr. McCormack's extraordinary qualities as a singer will count for more than they do in "La Bohème."

A young American soprano, Miss Ruth Miller, made her first appearance as Musetta, a part that has been made in recent years the subject of experiment. It was something of an ordeal for Miss Miller, who is said to have had little operatic experience and who may well have been overwhelmed with a handicap of nervousness. There were glimpses—a very few, it is true—of a voice of excellent possibilities, but her singing was not agreeable. The voice was pinched and often shrill, and, though she showed some understanding of the part, her representation on the whole left a good deal to be desired. Miss Miller will doubtless do better when she feels more composure on the Metropolitan stage.

There was to be also the first appearance of Thomas Chalmers, the American baritone, newly added to the company, but the fact that he is needed today in "Faust" caused Mr. Didur to be substituted for him in the part of Schaunard. Mr. De Luca and Mr. Segurola were the Marcello and Colline. Mme. Alda, whose Mimi is a familiar feature at the Metropolitan, sang better in the third act than in the first. She has, in fact, rarely sung better. Mr. Papi conducted creditably, though he was not averse to volumes of orchestral tone sometimes large enough to cover the singers.

MATINEES FOR RED CROSS.

Performances in the Shubert Theatres on National Day, Dec. 7.

The performances which will be given in Shubert theatres on National Red Cross Theatre Day, Dec. 7, were announced yesterday. Special matinées, the entire receipts of which will accrue to the Red Cross, will be given as follows: "Doing Our Bit," at the Winter Garden; John Drew and Margaret Illington in "The Gay Lord Quex," at the Forty-eighth Street Theatre; "Maytime," at the Shubert; Donald Brian, in "Her Regiment," at the Broadhurst; "Oh, Boy," at the Casino; "What's Your Husband Doing?" at the Thirty-ninth Street; "Odds and Ends of 1917," at the Bijou; "The Star Gazer," at the Plymouth; Guy Bates Post in "The Masquerader," at the Booth; "The Very Idea," at the Astor; "Over the Top," at the Forty-fourth Street Roof Theatre, and Marjorie Rambeau in "The Eyes of Youth," at the Maxine Elliott.

All persons connected with these productions will give their services free of charge on this occasion. As the entire receipts go to charity, there will be no war tax charged.

PHILHARMONIC CONCERT.

Helen Stanley the Violinist—Liszt's Dante Symphony Played.

The Philharmonic Society at its concerts yesterday afternoon and Thursday evening made Listz's "Dante" symphony the principal number of the program, which included also Weber's "Euryanthe" overture and Elgar's socalled "Enigma" variations for orchestra, Mendelssohn's "Scena," "Infelice," and a recitative and air from Debussy's cantata, "The Prodigal Son," sung by Miss Helen Stanley. Mr. Stransky played the "Dante" symphony with great zeal, with due emphasis of all its sensational effects. The women's chorus at the end was sung by the Beethoven Society. There was enthusiastic applause.

In Elgar's variations the orchestra played with spirit and energy and with delicacy; but there were passages where the expected finish was not quite maintained. Miss Stanley's singing of Mendelssohn's rather absurd "Scena" from an imaginary and non-existent opera and the air by Debussy revealed her powerful and brilliant soprano voice and dramatic style as she has made them known here in opera. She put an acent of intensity into the "Infelice" that might easily be missed in it, and she was much applauded.

Miss Jeanne's Recital.

Miss Edith Jeanne, a young soprano, made her first New York appearance yesterday in the recital at Aeolian Hall, singing a paraphrase from "Aida" and German, French, and English songs and two by Stephen C. Foster—"Nellie Was a Lady" and "My Old Kentucky Home." Miss Jeanne has a voice of unusual possibilities, a quality that is often appealing and expressive and that has possibilities of dramatic force. She is not yet wholly ripe for public appearance, however, as her recital showed. She has not yet full control of her voice, which is not at all times rightly placed

TELLS OF MOVIE SECRETS.

Photographer, in Suit for Salary, Describes Fake Octopus.

The suit of J. Ernest Williamson, the submarine photographer, against the Universal Film Manufacturing Company for salary which he alleges is due him for taking undersea pictures of fake octopoda and genuine sharks, was resumed yesterday before Judge Manton of the Federal District Court. The pictures were used in the film play of Jules Verne's story, "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea." The production, it was said, cost about $200,000.

Mr. Williamson told in the witness chair of how art was substituted for reality. He has a tube with an end of glass big enough to accommodate several men. In this tube the photographer and his assistants sit, and then it is lowered into the water at a depth sometimes of fifty feet or more. It is usually attached to a barge which moved, in this case, in the clear waters of the Bahamas, near Nassau. The submarine of Captain Nemo, the hero of the story, was thirty feet long and was made of painted canvas.

Asked to describe the octopus, which in the pictures wages a mad fight with a brave diver and is eventually killed amid the shudders of the audience, the witness said it was thirty-two feet long with a body big enough to conceal men inside of it, whose duty it was to operate the rubber arms that were fastened to the body by steel springs. There were only six of these rubber arms, whereas naturalists insist upon giving all octopoda eight.

This rubber octopus thrashed about in the water naturally enough and assumed positions which made it easy for Mr. Williamson to take good pictures of it in horrible attitudes and contortions. Asked about the sharks which fought the divers and the yacht that was blown up, Mr. Williamson declared that both sharks and explosion were genuine. The case will be continued Monday.

THEDA MAKES 'EM ALL BARAS

Actress's Family Join Her in Dropping Name of Goodman.

Theda Bara, actress, and all the members of her family got permission yesterday from Supreme Court Justice Donnelly to drop the family name Goodman and call themselves Bara hereafter. In the petition of the actress she said that her family name is Theodosia Goodman, and that she took the name Bara on the stage because her maternal grandfather was Francis Bara de Coppet of Switzerland. Her father, Bernard Goodman, was born in Poland. Her birthplace was Cincinnati. She said she had made the name Bara celebrated through her own efforts and for that reason wants it as her legal name.

The members of the family who also took the name were Pauline and Bernard Bara, parents, Marque, a brother, now in the theatrical business, and Esther, a sister, 19 years old, who is about to go on the stage, and will be known as Loro Bara.

TRACY PREDICTS LONG WAR.

Novelist Believes America's Participation Insures Allied Victory.

Louis Tracy, a member of the British Commission, widely known as an author, was the guest at a dinner given by the Overseas Club, an organization composed of British subjects now in the United States, at the Hotel Majestic last night.

Mr. Tracy has made four trips to America since the war began. He told last night how his son, Lieutenant Donald Tracy, aged 21, lost his life in France six months ago. He believes that there is a long struggle ahead for the Allies, but that the entrance of the United States into the war makes the victory assured. At the mention of President Wilson's name the guests stood and cheered for several minutes.

The dining room was decorated with the flags of the Allies. A cable message from Lord Northcliffe was read and applauded.

American Party Completes Its Tour of the Fighting Lines.

By The Associated Press.

BRITISH FRONT IN BELGIUM, Nov. 16.—The party of American Representatives and private citizens visiting the western front had the privilege yesterday of being received and entertained at tea by King Albert of Belgium. The honor was doubly appreciated because the day was the King's birthday, and throughout the zone of Belgian territory not under German occupation there were special celebrations in tribute to the sovereign.

The visitors spent yesterday and part of today viewing the Belgian front and left this afternoon for England, having completed a highly satisfactory tour of the allied fighting lines.

A vessel named the General and reported to be the German Headquarters at Constantinople was twice hit by bombs which the raiders dropped. Two hits also were obtained upon the Turkish War Office.

It is also announced that the Drama League will meet only three times this season instead of the customary five, and that the equivalent of the allowance for two meetings has been applied to the Drama League fund for the entertainment of soldiers in training camps.

Names His Daughter for Bernhardt.

Dr. Leo Buerger of 1,000 Park Avenue received a congratulatory telegram last night from Mme. Sarah Bernhardt upon the birth yesterday of his daughter. Bernhardt asked that she be allowed to be godmother and that the child be named for her. Dr. Buerger said last night that his daughter will be named Yvonne Sarah Bernhardt Buerger. Mme. Bernhardt's telegram was sent from Cleveland.

YALE'S PART IN WAR TOLD BY DR. HADLEY

Cheers of Alumni Greet Statement That More Than 5,000 Sons of Eli Are in Service.

HONORS WON AT THE FRONT

University Looking to Peace Time When Civic and Social Problems Must Be Met.

The part that Yale is taking in the war was told last night by President Hadley at a gathering of alumni at the Yale Club, 50 Vanderbilt Avenue. There were cheers when he recited the activities of the 5,000 Yale men who are serving in the army, the navy, and in the training camps.

The spirit of the meeting was illustrated best by a summing up by Otto Bannard, who said, "Yale is in the war and we are with Yale," and emphasized by the long-drawn three times three that were given with a will. President Hadley told how the Yale Battery had received two of the French seventy-fives for practice, and how officers from the training camps were journeying to Yale to practice on the only French artillery in this country. So great has been the demand for practice in the use of this most effective French weapon that the Scientific School has built four more of these guns of wood.

Yale, he said, has sent more than 5,000 men into war service. The figures are not complete, for, he said, the men who are quickest to answer the call of their country are often the slowest to tell what they have done. The names of those who are in service are coming into the Secretary's office each day. A hundred members of the Faculty are doing war work, and 1,000 boys who would be in Yale this year but for the war are serving their country in camps or on ships. As evidence that these sons of Old Eli are doing things, President Hadley read this honor list of Yale men who have been decorated or who have been mentioned for conspicuous service:

WAR CROSS WITH GOLD STAR.

1911—Robert Bowman.

1916—George Knight Houpt.

"Two years ago," said Dr. Hadley, "we foresaw that the country was going to want artillery officers. The fact that we started the Yale Artillery Battalion in 1915, instead of 1917, allowed us to get two years of instruction from Colonel Danford and enabled the Yale boys of 1916 and 1917 and 1918 to win marked distinction as artillerists in every training camp in the country. Eight months ago we foresaw that naval officers would be immediately and urgently needed. Without waiting for the Government plans to develop, we laid plans of our own for the instruction of both Yale men and others, at the Yale boat house, and as a result of this promptitude the success of the men we trained in obtaining ratings and commissions was conspicuous among the naval training schools of the country.

"Yale was the first of the large universities to organize its scientific war work. As a result, the army depends upon Yale for its gas and its gas masks; the navy depends upon Yale for its periscopes and for the development of its newer optical instruments of precision. Professors of the Forest School are in France directing the use of timber for cantonments. Professors of the Scientific School act as trusted agents of the Government in the purchase and utilization of metals. Of the small group of financial advisers just appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury one is a Yale professor and two more are Yale graduates.

Problems of Peace Times.

"The problem of developing a disciplined and efficient democracy in time of peace is going to be even harder than the problem of maintaining a disciplined and efficient army in time of war. The kind of organization and government which met our needs thirty years ago is not going to meet our needs any longer. The growth of monopolies has created new business problems. The influx of alien races has created new social problems. The more direct contact with other Governments has created new international problems. If the months or years of war which are before us result in killing the intelligent men of our younger generation, or even in diverting them from their plans of education, we shall be helpless in facing the questions that will come before us. If they result in bringing home to our younger men the necessity of training for public service, we shall deal with them effectively and shall solve the problem of combining good government with democracy.

"Yale stands for such training. To our undergratuates we are offering it at home. To our medical students we are offering it abroad, while they are actually engaged in hospital service at the front. We are doing all this under difficulties. We have given to the Government the services of members of the Faculty whom we could least afford to spare. We have suffered a loss of students, which means a grave loss of income. But we have the loyal support of our undergraduates and of our graduates."

Major Edward Bliss Reed of the Officers' Reserve Training Corps, former professor of English, referred to the scene in Woolsey Hall a year ago and again last Spring when Yale men were there to hear of the plans for military training.

"In Phi Beta Kappa they changed the selection of candidates to include only those in the last half of their senior year and seventeen were chosen, but only nine were present," he said. "Where was McCord, head of his class? Driving an ammunition truck in France. Where was Charlie Taft, tied for second place? Battalion Sergeant Major of the Twelfth Field Artillery. Where was Wood? First Lieutenant in the 309th Field Artillery. It was the same in athletics, for fifty-six of last year's Y men are in service. Of the twenty-two who got their Y in football, twenty-one have gone and the last is waiting only because he is too young to join."

Treasurer George Parmly Day said that it was not only what Yale had done for the war, but what the war had done for Yale. He said it had cut the enrollment of students one-third, forced the deferment of plans for development, and compelled the practice of economies. The current year had brought a deficit, he said, estimated at $259,000, and likely to prove larger.

"What the war has done for Yale may at first sight seem to have been to jeopardize its existence," he said. "What the war has really done for Yale is to make it clear to all of us that institutions grow and live by reason of the spirit that is within them, and not by the amount of their endowments or the size of their surplus. It seems to me, then, that Yale was never more secure than in these days of peril, never more sure of its future than in these days of uncertainty."

Otto Bannard said that it was proposed to wipe out the deficit by a class drive, and that a quota to be raised by each class was to be fixed. He evoked applause when he said as a start in wiping out the deficit the class of '76 will give $26,000.

An appeal for thirty horses now needed for the Yale Battery brought instant response. One of the first pledges came from a representative of the class of 1901, who offered a horse. In an instant several were on their feet. One

M'ADOO NAILS YARN ABOUT CONFISCATION

Denounces Pro-German Rumor That Bank Deposits Are to be Seized by the Government.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Recurrence in many sections of the country of the old rumor that the Government intends to seize bank deposits caused Secretary McAdoo to issue this statement tonight:

"Among the many absurd and vicious rumors which are being put into circulation these days, probably through pro-German influences, is one that the Government proposes to confiscate the money on deposit in the banks. The absurdity of the statement is obvious on its face, but I have received letters from several parts of the country which indicate that this rumor is being circulated for an evil purpose. Of course, these rumors are wholly without foundation. In fact, the Government has no power to confiscate the money of depositors in banks."

AVIATORS WILL GET FULL TRAINING HERE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—America's preparation for training airmen, reports to the Council of National Defense show, is proceeding "exactly according to schedule," and the big training cities under construction in various parts of the country are nearing completion.

Student fliers who in the past have gone abroad for their final training soon will be learning under instructors from the front all the advanced and finer points of aerial fighting in this country.

First deliveries of the recently tested Liberty motor are expected this month. Secretary Baker said today that the motor was doing even more than was expected of it. His statement was in reply to questions prompted by reports from Italy that Germany was bending every energy to turning out an air fleet before the United States completes its program. Mr. Baker said that of course he had no information as to what the German Government was doing, but that the American program was progressing favorably.

BOON TO BRITISH SAILORS.

At Last the Government Pays for Their Uniforms and Kits.

LONDON, Oct. 20, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—By the grant of free uniform and kit to the enlisted men of the navy, the British sailor obtains a concession which he has long sought and which has been the subject of hundreds of petitions sent from the lower deck to the Admiralty. The British sailor always deemed it a great injustice that while the soldier and the marine wore a uniform purchased by the State, he must purchase his own clothing out of his small pay. What annoyed him still more was that, although he had to pay, his superiors often ordered the clothes at their own pleasure, poor Jack having no voice in the matter.

In the early days of the British Navy each Captain was permitted to dress his crew to suit his own fancy. This custom did not wholly cease when a regulation uniform made its appearance, for different Captains had different ideas of what constituted "uniform," with the result that a sailor who was transferred to a new ship often had to purchase several new items of clothing.

Although a British bluejacket's uniform appears very simple, the official list shows that be has about one hundred different articles in his wardrobe, all of which he has heretofore had to buy. Henceforth his entire outfit will be issued to him at Government expense.

Resinol
did knock out that skin ailment

Three days ago, my arm was simply covered with red, inflamed skin trouble and I thought I was up against it for fair. But Joe had a jar of Resinol in his kit. I used a little and the irritation stopped right off. In the morning most of the redness was gone and a couple more applications finished it up.

Resinol is sold by all druggists.

THE LABOR CRISIS.

The next day after one spokesman for the trainmen "unqualifiedly" rejected arbitration, he declared that there would be no railroad strike because the men would accept the award of the President. Also, one day after several districts of coal miners voted that they would strike, they voted that they would negotiate for the new contract containing the clause to which they had most objected. Today most of the strikers in Massachusetts on Government work will return to the plants. At last, happily, labor appreciates that there never was less excuse for strikes than now, when strikes are more numerous than ever. Also, now, strikes are exceptionally contrary to public interest in so far as they are against Government work. No man needs to strike when he can step across the street and get a job without changing his overalls. No employer in his senses will quarrel with his employés now if he can help it. The Government in particular is never an oppressive employer, and is committed to maintaining union conditions of employment. No reasonable request of labor will be refused, or ought to be. But there should be unhesitating refusal to submit to unreasonable demands by any who insist that the reason of their demands shall be tried by their power to enforce them. So far as strikes represent coercion, they should be resisted, for, if not resisted, there is no limit either to the strikes or to the cost of everything produced by labor. That way lie only national defeat and distress, even for those whose wages are raised in that manner.

A struggle with labor is unwelcome and unnecessary until the resources of reason and diplomacy are exhausted. The President is past master of that art, and he needs no counsel. Only a few weeks ago he telegraphed to a railway that it must settle its dispute with its employés or he had the power to take the road over and operate it. That was enough. It was easier to threaten the railway than it is to coerce the workers who say they won't arbitrate. At another time it might be impossible. But there are now new laws, and a new temper regarding old laws. The users of the railways now see that the resources of the railways are rather exhausted than inexhaustible, and that the exhaustion is a public injury rather than an injury to the railways. If the railways cannot be operated by union labor, they can be by other labor, of which there is a tenfold supply. The same is true of work in Government shipbuilding shops, and private shops on Government work. There is no higgling over wages. They are above happy dreams. The men who will not take them because they will not work with nonunionists should have a rude awakening.

If Mr. GOMPERS will support the President, the country will support them both. If the country can support only one of them, the choice will be easy. The idea that Mr. GOMPERS is the predominant partner cannot be entertained, and there are some reasons why it should be repudiated. The Government's representatives sent to settle the Pacific Coast shipbuilding dispute put first on their list of rulings that the unionists' refusal to work on material produced in nonunion shops was inadmissible. When the President next confers with the President of the American Federation of Labor, he might ask Mr. GOMPERS why he rejected the program for the adjustment of labor disputes as proposed by the Advisory Committee. The published reason for the rejection was that he would not accept an arrangement in which labor had an equal third representation, the representatives of the public having the balance of power. Mr. GOMPERS is quoted as saying different things at Buffalo, at Boston, and at Washington. There is no objection to the President making a generous settlement with the representatives of organized labor, for it is not possible to make a settlement with unorganized labor. But it should be a bargain, not a surrender of inalienable rights. One of the visiting British statesmen has said that England would have had to surrender to Germany if it had suffered one-eighth of the labor troubles he had observed here. Now is the time for them to be stopped, preferably by reasonable agreements, but, if necessary, by the President in whatever manner he thinks most in the public interest.

A CLEMENCEAU MINISTRY.

For the second time a Connecticut schoolmaster is to become Prime Minister of France, for one of the experiences in the long, varied, and well-filled life of GEORGES CLEMENCEAU was that of instructing youth in the State of Connecticut. In sending for him to organize the new Ministry, President POINCARÉ gives the support of authority to the accepted belief that the Painlevé Ministry really went out on the Bolo scandal and others of its kind.

Once before CLEMENCEAU has been Prime Minister, from 1906 to 1909, when his firm course with the striking miners and the execution of the law that separated the State from the Church were among the chief exploits of his term of service. But CLEMENCEAU has won more renown by upsetting Ministries than by taking part in their counsels; he is a man of combat rather than of deliberation, a critic and assailant rather than an originator and director of policies. His zeal, courage, fertility, and audacity in assault have been abundantly demonstrated, more amply than his poise and soundness of judgment. But if traitorous enemies of France are to be punished, or German propaganda stamped out, without mercy in either case, CLEMENCEAU is the man of the hour. He is afraid of nobody.

The Chamber voted confidence in the Painlevé Ministry on its prosecution of the war. The vote of confidence was refused specifically on the question whether the whole group of scandals, including the Bolo affair, should be taken up for immediate discussion or postponed until after the meeting of the Interallied Council. When Premier PAINLEVÉ would not assent to taking up that question at once, his Ministry fell.

LORD NORTHCLIFFE'S LETTER.

It is gratifying to know that we appear so greatly to advantage in the eyes of an English observer as Lord NORTHCLIFFE's letter to LLOYD GEORGE indicates. It is gratifying, not so much because praise is always pleasant, as because there have been many among us who have not been confident that we were really putting our best foot foremost, and who will be reassured by this testimony from a bystander who is neither unobservant nor easily pleased. Lord NORTHCLIFFE's habitual attitude toward governments and peoples is one which his friends would call vigilant and his acquaintances would call discontented. During the five months he spent with us he made enough criticisms of our Government to make his laudatory summing-up surprising.

It will startle those gloomy gentlemen who have found the people steeped in apathy and the Government run by boobies to find Lord NORTHCLIFFE holding both people and Government before British eyes as models for imitation. It will disconcert those of them who have been calling on us to look at Canada and weep for our sloth to find him bracketing the United States and Canada together, or rather fusing them inextricably, as interchangeable synonyms for vigor and dash. He contrasts unfavorably the "dallying" of England with "the virile "atmosphere of the United States and "Canada," and in so saying he will greatly depress the spirits of those feverish patriots who have been describing our atmosphere as slumberous. "Those two countries," he says, "are proceeding with a fervor and "enthusiasm little understood on this "side of the Atlantic." And, whatever pain this may give to the British objects of his wrath, it will be pleasure compared with the feelings of those Americans who have been bewailing our stodginess and lethargy and appealing to us to wake up.

But while Americans will be grateful for his compliments, they will hesitate to accept his implication of a contrast between Great Britain and the United States; and they will most certainly be desirous that the British people shall not take his sharp words as reflecting the state of feeling in this country. It is likely that that mistake will be made, unless it is made plain that Americans are not seething with discontent over the shortcomings of the Lloyd George Ministry and are, on the contrary, very well content with it. Though Lord NORTHCLIFFE, we may suppose, had no such intention, the tone of the cabled comments suggests that some of the London newspapers imagine him to be expressing an American dissatisfaction with the present British Government, a dissatisfaction that will soon reach the boiling point. There is no such feeling in this country.

When Lord NORTHCLIFFE tells Mr. GEORGE that rather than sacrifice its blood and treasure vainly the United States will take the direction of the war into its own hands, he is telling what any nation would obviously do in such circumstances. No nation would sacrifice its blood and treasure vainly. It is likely that careless readers may interpret his letter as meaning that America is at present under the impression that its blood and treasure are actually being spent vainly because of the incompetence of the Lloyd George Ministry, and that American sentiment, therefore, favors taking the direction of the war out of such incompetent hands. If any such impression should get abroad in England it would be regrettable, for there is no basis for it. National misunderstandings are easy to start and hard to catch and scotch. Before this one gets fairly under way, let it be thoroughly understood that the feeling to which Lord NORTHCLIFFE gives voice is rather his own than that of Americans, and that, whatever may be the faults of the present British Government, it stands in rather unusually high estimation on this side of the sea.

A LIBERTY GIFT.

Today and the next two days are all the time left to raise the rest, nearly $9,000,000, of the $35,000,000 which the Y. M. C. A. must have for its war work. This is not money for the Y. M. C. A., but for our soldiers and sailors, for the men in the training camps and at the front. No British or French soldier, no American soldier, has anything but the warmest praise and thanks for what the Y. M. C. A. does for the armies and the men learning the business of war. The Y. M. C. A. "hut" is, in France and Flanders, the only place where a soldier can get warm in Winter. Some of us forget that coal in France and Italy is from $80 to $100 a ton.

The Y. M. C. A. "hut" is the soldier's shelter, club, post office, his "country store," gymnasium, library, reading room. He writes his letters home on Y. M. C. A. paper. The Y. M. C. A. furnishes him his stamps. There he bathes and swims and exercises, plays checkers or chess, civilizes and entertains himself, consorts with his friends, breaks the monotony of discipline and training. It is his rest-house, his home, his playground.

It is an incalculable, a necessary and fruitful service that the Y. M. C. A. is doing, and means to do on a larger scale, for our boys. Back it up! Out with the check book! Out with the cash! The subscriptions should be multitudinous. These are our boys. We can't afford to have the rich monopolize the duty and the honor of helping and looking after them. The share of New York State is $9,000,000. Oversubscribe this Liberty Gift before Monday night.

ANTI-GERMAN ANTI-SUFFRAGISTS.

"Women are more apt to decide on the merits of a case than men," says Supreme Court Justice GUY in one of the most original of obiter dicta. His position is being curiously illustrated by contemporary evidence. What shall be thought of the solidity of judgment of those suffragists who, loath to abandon their glory as leaders of the Cause, would enlist the feminists as a separate party? The Amazons were the first sex party, but they were a fighting race, according to their legend, subjugated the inferior sex in their Asia Minor district, and would allow none of them to live among them. A party of women seems about as reasonable and judicious as the Amazonian myth.

There are sentimentalists, more than enough, among the menfolks; and the juries in murder trials seem to be largely recruited from them, but Justice GUY's theory that "women "are less apt to be carried away by "their feelings" must be taken as a paradox or a pretty large cup of honey. The picketers have been demonstrating that theory, no doubt, and a feminine lawyer has just been demonstrating it by another method.

On the other hand, the anti-suffragist women are showing sound judgment as well as sound patriotism. It is queer—or is it natural?—that the very women who were most opposed to votes for women, by their discretion, wisdom, grasp of public policy, and readiness effectively to strengthen the body politic, are furnishing the best argument for the fitness of women for the privilege which has just been granted them in this State. On Nov. 6 the New York State Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage got notice to dissolve. It will soon formally end, but it will be succeeded by a new society, the only test of membership in which will be absolute Americanism. Women of any or no political bias will be welcomed by it if they meet that test. It will fight pacifism, socialism, and all other forms and manifestations of pro-Germanism.

The great Socialist vote in the municipal election, the great increase to be anticipated in that vote on account of woman suffrage, a Socialist and pacifist vehicle, make the proposed action of these former anti-suffragists a public benefit. Suffrage being forced upon them, they are going to make, and help others make, the best use of it. They will still oppose the Federal amendment, but they will give all their energy to the war. By resisting pacifism and socialism, by working for the wiping out of disloyalty in the public schools, by urging patriotic women indifferent about voting to vote, since the unpatriotic women are sure to vote, by educating women on public questions, by steady support of the Government and the war, these women will serve nobly the city, the State, and the nation. They will be a force of intelligence, conservatism, and Americanism directed against the bedevilment and Bolshevikation of representative free government.

"Some women are more apt to decide on the merits of a case than "some men" would be the justified form of Justice GUY's remark. If the majority of the women of New York show the qualities of the anti-suffrage women, the daring prophecy of Municipal Court Justice MARKS, "those of you who have been the "most rabid for the vote will, after "a few years, be the most rabid to "give up the vote," will go the way of Mother SHIPTON's and most other people's vaticinations.

WHY TAKE THE RISK?

The Trading with the Enemy act in Section 4 provides that the President may issue to enemy (or ally of enemy) insurance companies licenses to do business. It has been decided that enemy marine insurance companies shall be barred; with the U-boat campaign in mind, no one need be told the reason. Licenses are now desired by enemy fire insurance companies whose home offices are in Germany, Austria, and Bulgaria. It would not be safe to issue the licenses, however exemplary may have been the conduct of their representatives in this country since the United States entered the war. They would find it impossible to control their pro-enemy subordinates who had access to buildings, among them munition factories, docks, storage warehouses, and wheat elevators, for purposes of inspection and appraisal.

All the certificates of character in the world would not deter a man bent on striking a stealthy blow for the enemy from conspiring to bomb or burn a building and its contents that were needed by the Government in prosecuting the war. There have been too many unexplained fires, too many mysterious explosions. The United States is in this war to whip the enemy, and not to be of any help to him in a business way. It is practically impossible for representatives of enemy fire insurance companies to dissociate themselves from the enemy. As their word cannot be taken for it, the sole question is the security of our Government's war resources. The inconvenience, and even the pecuniary loss, that these enemy companies would suffer by not getting a license is a minor matter. Justice is not involved at all. The United States is at war, and must protect its own interest, also those persons it contracts with and employs.

There is another consideration. As the premiums collected by the enemy fire insurance companies could not be sent out of the country, some of the money taken in and available might be used in propaganda work. Is that fanciful? Only the enemy in a spasm of pumped-up moral indignation would say it was. There may be agents who would not put their funds to such use, just as there are understrappers who would not be privy to a fire or an explosion; but all the representatives of enemy fire insurance companies might not be proof against the temptation to put money at work in the Teutonic cause.

It is said that no American company has reinsurance contracts with enemy fire insurance companies today. Aside from patriotic sentiment, that would obviously be bad business. The enemy companies cannot plead that if they were refused licenses the domestic companies would be handicapped and inconvenienced. By the way, domestic companies would have but little extra business to divide if the enemy companies received no licenses. The premiums they obtain are an insignificant percentage of the total; even that small share has dwindled since Germany started the war.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Indeed We Did Lose Something. In the part of the New-Yorker Staats-Zeitung that gives the readers of that paper a daily lesson in excellent English, BERNARD RIDDER yesterday discussed at great length the unwisdom of those Americans who are endeavoring, not altogether in vain, to stop the teaching in our schools and colleges of what he calls "the language of a people with whom we are for the moment at war." He means, as the rest of the article shows, German, so there would be no use in complaining about the large inadequacy of that particular description of them.

It pleases Mr. RIDDER that somebody connected with the Federal Bureau of Education has recently declared that "a knowledge of German is now more important than it was before the war," and that therefore the study of it should not cease in our high schools and colleges. So far as we are aware, there has been no real antagonism to the teaching of German in colleges—no denial of the many advantages listed by Mr. RIDDER as obtainable by Americans, as by everybody else, from knowledge of as many languages as they can conveniently acquire.

Indeed, we would go even further than Mr. RIDDER does, and lament that so few of us knew German in the years before the war began. Had more of us done so, more of us would have been warned betimes of the plans and preparations for world-conquest that were going on in Germany, and we would not have been as much startled as we were when we finally discovered what doctrines were preached in the German-American press, including the Staats-Zeitung, in the days when practically nobody outside the circle of their own readers paid any attention to what they were saying.

It is highly significant that, aside from realization of the fact that the teaching of foreign languages in public schools of the lower grades is worse than a waste of time, there is no opposition to the study of any living tongue except one. The present hostility to German—such as there is of it—is not due to ignorance of its utility, but because "for the moment," as Mr. RIDDER puts it, the associations of the German language are deeply and justly obnoxious to all who know—and resent—what the German Government has done in the last three years.

Call Knitting a Waste of Energy! Both Secretary DANIELS and Secretary BAKER are quoted by a staff correspondent of The Tribune as saying, in effect, that the clothing provided by the Government for our soldiers and sailors adequately protects them from all the severities of weather they encounter. For that reason, these eminent officials added, the women all over the country who are working so hard to knit woolen sweaters, helmets, wristlets, and stockings for the men in the training camps and in France are wasting their time, or would be, except for the fact that these activities have a reflex influence on themselves—give them a pleasing sense of doing something for their country, and so make them happier and in some degree better!

This is—well, to put it gently, surprising talk. To call it untrue would be disrespectful, but avoidance of a suspicion or fear that it may not be entirely correct—that Messrs. DANIELS and BAKER, in this one matter, have been misinformed—is made difficult by knowledge, or what has very confidently been thought to be knowledge, possessed by a good many thousands of us who have talked with or received letters from men in the service. Great numbers of these men are daily expressing opinions which differ strangely from those ascribed to the two Secretaries, both as to the sufficiency in cold weather of the clothing provided by the Government and as to the very great utility of the garments about which the Secretaries could say nothing better than that they were an innocent and pleasing luxury.

And the Red Cross, an organization not noted for sentimentality or an inclination to waste its energies on supplying luxuries, agrees with the men who are constantly appealing to their friends for more and more knitted garments, and it does not agree with the two Secretaries. At any rate, the Red Cross persistently urges women to ply their needles as fast as they can, and tells them that, no matter how much they do, the needs of the men in training and in service will not be fully met.

Now, who is right and who is wrong? And has Secretary DANIELS's quarrel with the Navy League anything to do with this amazing and highly disquieting conflict of authority?

We Must All Be Detectives. There is no tendency toward a spy-psychosis in the mental constitution of the average and typical American—if any such creature there be. On the contrary, as a result of living all his life in conditions that justified him in taking for granted the loyalty of all his neighbors, he finds it difficult seriously to distrust any of them, even now, and there is yet to be established in him the beginning of a full realization that he cannot safely discuss any subject that interests him in the hearing of anybody who happens to be near.

It is for these reasons, doubtless, that the Department of Justice and the Secret Service officials have united in preparing and circulating a careful and detailed warning to all and sundry to be on their guard against spies working in the interest of the national enemy. They further urge that every good citizen do more than this—that he not only talk only to those whom he thoroughly knows about matters directly or remotely of military importance, but that he take upon himself the duty of reporting promptly to the proper authorities for investigation every suspicious act that comes under his observation.

That is not a pleasant task, but it is one that should be performed, and performed quite regardless of friendly relations that may have existed before the war. We are at war with a desperate foe, and with one that has demonstrated not only its own complete disregard for all the ordinary amenities and restrictions of civilized life, but also an astonishing ability to inspire with its own ruthlessness and utter lack of scruple a minority of uncertain size, certainly not small, of those who feel to it any sort of allegiance, no matter how far or how long they have wandered from their old home.

We need not become hysterical over the spy danger, and we will not become a nation of secret informers, but we must deal with facts and protect our own lives and property. It is well to keep in mind, too, that in all probability most of the spies now used in this country are not Germans.

ART NOTES.

The exhibition at the MacDowell Club this month has a number of admirable features. The pictures look well in one-man groups and there are individual canvases of much more than average merit. Among these are the handsome paintings of Moose Island and its environment, by George Pearse Ennis. A number are full of humorous comment on human types. "Noon at the County Fair," showing a couple of women cooking in a tent, for example, with the gesture of the cook, who is stirring something in a bowl, capitally suggested, and the attitude of both women, at once busy and bored, very cleverly given. The big folds and warm color of the tent lend dignity to the composition. "Moose Island Inlet" is a more serious and difficult piece of work. The painter has made us feel the flat plane of the sea at the horizon, where the color is lightest, and the jeweled glow of the bright houses and sails in the sunlight, without hinting at tawdriness. Bion Barnett is now a camoufleur, which may have suggested his title, "The Red Blueberry Bush," a rather striking little picture in the purity of its reds, which are massed, however, too much in one spot. Martinus Andersen's "Nasturtiums" is an ingenious composition with the flowers in a bowl reflected in the low, curving mirror of an old fashioned sideboard, the frame of which plays an interesting part in the pattern of the design. Alice Judson is at her best in a pearly little coast scene, which she calls "Lobster Boats and Old Houses." William McKillop, Dent Robinson, James Weiland, Maurice G. Debonnet, and Frederick G. Detwiller are the other exhibitors. The exhibition lasts until the 25th of this month.

Cutting Trees for a Retreat?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

When the Germans felled or girdled the fruit trees in the part of France that they abandoned, the excuse was that all leafy trees are a military advantage to the army occupying a territory, since they screen movements from the eyes of aerial scouts.

Accepting this excuse at par, it follows that an army is fighting against itself if it destroys the trees of the territory which it occupies and in which it fights.

If so, and if the reports are true that the Germans are now felling the trees of all Belgium, does it not mean that the German Generals do not expect to be holding any Belgian soil when the leaves grow broad next Spring? STEVEN T. BYINGTON.

GERMAN SANS "KULTUR."

A Problem for American Schools and Universities.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On the part of those who have to do with the making up of curricula in our schools and colleges, the question of the place of the German language is receiving considerable attention. There is a reaction, and a perfectly natural one, against everything that has to do with anything that is German. It will be a long time before the allied nations will come to think of anything that bears the mark of Germany other than with abhorrence. Falling in line with this natural reaction there are many educators who are demanding that the study of the German language and German literature shall be completely banished from our schools and colleges. Indeed, there are a number of institutions which have already decreed that no courses in these subjects shall be offered during the present year. They urge that the world has suffered so much from the importation of German notions that it is better entirely to eliminate all things German than to run the risk of further contagion. There is much to be said on this side of the question. Nearly every one who is engaged in college teaching is aware that one or more of his colleagues who obtained their training in Germany are obsessed with the idea of German uprightness and German infallibility. They tell us that they know Germany and the Germans, and that it is simply impossible for them to do the things which have been laid to their charge. The testimony of Dr. van Dyke and Ambassador Gerard, Lord Bryce and Mr. Hoover, and others who are in a position to know with exactness just what they are talking about, is brushed aside because of the deep-seated conviction that the things they tell about simply cannot be true.

Fully admitting the truth of these contentions, and acknowledging that we do not want any further importations of German "Kultur," would we not make a serious blunder if we excluded the German language and literature from our courses of study? The argument that we need German to aid us in scientific investigations still holds, although with diminished force. It is not likely that we shall look to Germany in the future as we have in the past for leadership in scientific investigations. Indeed, the student who should elect to do his work in a German university in the next five years would probably lay himself open to suspicion of disloyalty to his own country. The fact remains, however, that in the German language are stored vast numbers of scientific treatises as yet untranslated which are very necessary for the student of science to read. Again, it cannot be questioned that Germany has produced a great deal which is valuable in literature and music. It would be an illustration of the old adage wherein one cuts off his nose to spite his face if we should deprive ourselves of the opportunity to read Goethe and Schiller and to listen to the music composed by Wagner, Beethoven, and Mozart.

It must not be forgotten that in permitting our students to study German we are taking something of a risk. It is of the greatest importance that care should be exercised in the selection of teachers of German. If we select for our German teachers men who are natives of Germany, there is little doubt but the offensive doctrines, the carrying out of which has caused the great war, will be insidiously instilled into the minds of our students. If German is to be taught, it should be by American teachers who are perfectly clear in their own minds that we are getting the German for the purpose of availing ourselves of what has been accomplished in science, literature, and music. The characteristic features of the German ideals of civilization and progress should constantly be held before the students as ideals to be shunned as we would shun a plague. In this way it would seem that we could get such advantages as would obviously benefit us, freed from the influences which in the past twenty years have corrupted the German nation, and which in a lesser degree have made themselves felt in the influences they have exerted upon Americans whose loyalty was not sufficiently vigorous to withstand the domineering influence of German "Kultur."

Work for Suffragists.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As a strong believer in suffrage for women, may I extend through your paper my grateful thanks to Mrs. Harriot Stanton Blatch for her letter? There is and should be only one cause before the people of the United States today—America and the winning of her war against Germany. It is futile to say that granting suffrage will make woman's war work more effective. Englishwomen won suffrage by dropping everything concerning the attainment of the vote to work for England. Let us New York women help the women of other States to obtain suffrage at the proper time by working, not to uphold feminine office seekers, not to push further our own recent success, but for America and her war victory first, last, and all the time, and in so doing show every patriotic man in the country what safe, wise, and valuable co-workers we can be, now when each individual American has so much at stake. MARGARET LEIGH.

New York, Nov. 15, 1917.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I send a word of thanks to Mrs. Harriot Stanton Blatch for her letter in THE NEW YORK TIMES? It must be a help and an inspiration to all women in these troublous days, coming as it does from an acknowledged leader among women. May her counsel be heeded! L. P. B.

AMERICA TO FRANCE.

Take them, O beautiful France,
  Close to your generous breast;
Keep them, my dear dead sons,
  Honored, beloved, at rest.
Under your glorious flag,
  Under your red, white, and blue,
Near to your gallant boys,
  Bury my laddies, too.

France, there are tears in our hearts;
  Bravely we bite back our pain,
Proudly we try to smile
  Over our children slain;
Over the soldiers we bore,
  Over our bravest and best,
Over our loved and lost—
  Lo, we will stand the test!

Sister and comrade and friend,
  Lift up your heart and your head;
Mothers of men are we,
  Mothers of noble dead!
Liberty, Justice, and Right;
  These are the price of their blood,
Shed on your sacred soil—
  Glorious, gallant flood!

Steadfast, I come to your aid,
  Steadfast, I stand by your side,
There where our heroes fell,
  There where our great sons died.
Take them, then, beautiful France,
  Close to your generous breast;
Keep them, my dear dead boys,
  Honored, beloved, at rest.

PLATTSBURG MEN CHOSEN.

84 Per Cent. of Students Said to Have Won Commissions.

Special to The New York Times.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., Nov. 16.—With the exception of possibly fifty students, who were specializing at the camp, all the candidates who are to receive commissions have been selected and the names have now gone on to Washington. Officially, no information was given as to the number commissioned, but from a well informed quarter it was stated that the printed list would show not less than 84 per cent. of the camp strength.

As was the case in the first camp, the men commissioned are aware of the fact and have been told not to inform their relatives and friends by telegraph or give the information out publicly as the War Department desires secrecy, but somehow military tailoring establishments in New York City and New England seemed to have made some remarkably close guesses, with the result that the parcel post department of the camp and city post were suddenly loaded down this morning upon the first mail train's arrival with large sized cardboard boxes and all are suspected of containing officers' uniforms made to fit and held under an arrangement whereby the recipient will not have to accept unless commissioned.

This was somewhat of a shock to the one hundred and fifty military furnishing shops which have been run up here to furnish the students. Home tailors in a great many instances got the chance of supplying their former customers, the arrangement and measurements having been accomplished by mail, visits by students, recently, or visits here by the tailors.

The students who have been specializing in various units will all be commissioned, according to the camp commander, but there will be delay and these men will have to return to their homes and await the commissions from Washington. Among these are machine-gun students and those of the camouflage section and the delay is occasioned by the Department failing to provide for them in the instructions, but it is the belief of the camp officers that there will be but little delay. Their names have gone in on an "eligible list."

While not firing at it, artillery students of the New England division had the honor of sending several shrapnel shells over a German U-boat this morning. Two batteries of two three-inch field guns were in position on the reservation near the lake front sending shells across Lake Champlain, a distance of three and a quarter miles, in an attempt to demolish man-size targets set up on a farm at Cumberland Head. Two scows, loaded with the U-boat which was used in New York during the Liberty Loan drive, passed between the firing point and the objective on their way to Montreal, but the fact that it was a U-boat was not recognized at the time.

VENIZELOS COMING HERE.

Intends to Visit America to Express the Gratitude of Greece.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Premier Venizelos of Greece, who is here conferring with the British Government and also will have a conference with Colonel E. M. House, head of the American Mission, regarding the war, announced today his intention of visiting the United States next Spring. He will be accompanied by M. Versseiopulo, Manager of the Orient Bank in Athens, and expects to visit the chief cities of America.

The Greek Premier, who came to London from Italy with Premier Lloyd George, said today that the spirits of the Greek people were rising and that they were preparing to participate more wholeheartedly in the war.

M. Venizelos said he was anxious to go to America personally to express the gratitude and appreciation of his country for the help and moral support given by the American people and by Greeks in America.

"The friendship of Greeks toward Americans," he continued, "is based not only on American sympathy and aid but on our understanding of American ideals and aspirations, so worthily reflected in President Wilson's utterances in the course of his inspiring leadership."

The Premier, who appeared to be in splendid health, said that only the fainthearted could be affected by the vicissitudes of the war, and that the determination to win the victory could not be shaken.

In connection with the visit to London of Premier Venizelos it is announced that Greek naval airmen participated in recent air raids on the Gallipoli Peninsula and Constantinople. For their work three Greek officers have received British decorations.

Lieut. Commander Moraitinis has received the Distinguished Service Order Medal, and Lieutenants Meltopoulos and Constantinou have won the Distinguished Service Cross. One machine manned by two Greek officers, Chalkias and Lazaris, failed to return.

In the same connection it is announced that "Greek naval and military forces are taking a gallant part in the operations on the Saloniki front."

ISSUES RECRUITING APPEAL.

Chief of Ordnance Wants Several Thousand Skilled Men.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—A request was made today that the newspapers give publicity to the following official announcement:

Men with experience as mechanics, machinists, blacksmiths, and storage battery experts, are wanted.

"There are four ordnance training camps where men with mechanical ability enlisting for the Ordnance Department are sent for special instruction to fit them for the grades of first-class Sergeant and Ordnance Sergeant. Many of these will later be placed in charge of enlisted men in this service.

OPPOSE TAX LEGISLATION.

Federal Advisers Would Avoid New Revenue Laws at Present.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—The committee of expert advisers to the Internal Revenue Commissioner on the problems growing out of the collection of war taxes on excess profits let it be known today as their attitude that there ought to be no further revenue legislation until the business men were able to know just what they had to pay under the present excess profits law.

Business men have been wondering as to what further taxes they might be called upon to pay under the wartime demands, and the Government is still wrestling with the problem of the exact definition of capital under the new law.

The committee, which comprises Representative Hull of Tennessee, and well-known bankers, railroad and other business men and economists, is working under the Treasury plan of having constructive co-operation between the Government and the taxpayers in the proper collection of the full amount of all revenue authorized by Congress. They felt, it was stated from the committee today, that talk at this time of further legislation on the subject unduly disturbed business interests at a time when the complexities of the present excess profits law were being straightened out.

Tells Needs of Pershing's Men.

The first official message from the special commission of four men whom the National War Work Council of the Y. M. C. A. sent to France to report on the needs of General Pershing's men, so far as the Y. M. C. A. can supply them, came through by cable yesterday. The men who reported were John Sherman Hoyt of New York, Franklin D. Kirkbride of New York, Douglas L. Elliman of New York, and Philip L. James of Chicago. Their message read as follows:

"Not until we had gone personally over the field had we any conception of the tremendous opportunity and grave responsibility which General Pershing has committed to the Y. M. C. A. In this critical hour helping the men to be true to the highest American ideals may be a deciding factor in winning the war and keeping steadfast to the spirit and aims of its founders the men who will in the future direct the destiny of the nation.

"Facing hardship, unaccustomed conditions, lack of comforts and restraints of home our men need instant help which the Y. M. C. A. only can give if able men, supplies, and the means to support its work are given in lavish measure by the whole country. This Winter is bound to be a critical time for thousands of splendid young Americans. For their sake and in their name, we call for volunteers and the money to provide them with the help and comforts they so richly deserve. The Y. M. C. A. stands for a touch of home in a strange land.

"We must express our absolute indorsement of the splendid work done by our representatives here under the most trying conditions. They, with meagre facilities, have accomplished remarkable results, but, now at the breaking point, they cannot continue to do the impossible unless they receive immediate and adequate support from you and the country at large."

It was announced yesterday that 100,000 members of the Boys' Department of the Y. M. C. A. were engaged throughout the country in earning $10 apiece for the fund, thereby contributing $1,000,000 in all. Scattered reports of the boys' campaign up to yesterday noon showed the Central Department leading with $73,000 and the Eastern Department second with $42,750. The Northeastern Department reported $40,300, the Southeastern $2,400, and the Southwestern $7,240, making a total of $165,710.

Ex-President William Howard Taft started on a speaking tour for the Y. M. C. A. fund yesterday, beginning in Gloucester County, N. J. He spoke last night in Philadelphia. He will speak in Paterson, N. J., today, and tomorrow afternoon he will deliver an address at Poli's Theatre in Washington.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—President Wilson today sent his check for $100 to the Young Men's Christian Association War Camp Recreation Fund. It was received by the local committee, which has about $54,000 of its $150,000 allotment.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 16.—Less than $102,000 remained to be subscribed tonight to complete Pittsburgh's quota of $1,500,000 to the Y. M. C. A. war fund. Today's subscriptions amounted to $338,827, making the total amount pledged during the campaign $1,318,035.

BOSTON, Nov. 16.—New England subscriptions to the Young Men's Christian Association war work fund reached a total of $3,304,756 today.

The fund is to be handled by the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. It also was announced that the students had subscribed $55,875 to the second Liberty Loan.

Ambassador Sharp Escorts Bride to the Altar in the Church of St. Pierre du Groscaillou.

Relatives of Mrs. Ferdinand Blumenthal in this city were notified yesterday of her marriage in Paris, on Tuesday, to the Duke of Montmorency, who is a Captain on the General Staff of the French Army. She has a son here, Cecil Blumenthal, and two brothers, Joseph S. Ulman and J. Stevens Ulman. Another son, William Blumenthal, is living abroad.

BELGIAN ORPHANS RELEASED

A thousand Belgian orphans, between 4 and 13, carried far into the interior of Germany when the Teutons first overran Belgium, have been released by their captors and are being cared for by the American Red Cross in France. The monastery of La Grande Chartreuse in the town of Troche has been remodeled into an asylum for the sick and undernourished youngsters. Beyond the fact that "thousands" still are in captivity, no information was conveyed as to the total number taken prisoner, nor as to the prospect of rescuing more of those upon whom agencies devoted to the restoration of Belgium regard as the main hope for the future. The cablegram announcing these facts said:

"Permission was given to use this place for the Belgian children, and it was rented from the Government by the Red Cross, which supplies the funds for the work, while the personnel and management are provided by the Belgian Committee. On Oct. 15, the first 500 little Belgian boys and girls arrived and a week later 500 more, all collected by the Committee de Secours National de Belgique."

COURT WILL SENTENCE MRS. WARREN TODAY

One Man Smuggler Gets a Year and Another Eight Months in Prison.

Mrs. Charlotte A. Warren was not sentenced yesterday on her plea of guilty of having made a false declaration to the Customs officials of the value of wearing apparel brought from France in November, 1915. She was in court, but Federal Judge Manton, at the request of her counsel, John W. H. Crim, postponed the matter until this morning. Mr. Crim complained that he had not had sufficient time to inquire into the statement made by Frank E. Carstarphen, the special Government prosecutor, that Mrs. Warren had been guilty of a similar offense in 1905. Mr. Carstarphen objected to further delay, but the court granted the postponement without demur.

Adolph Tenenbaum and Jacob Seiler, diamond cutters, were sentenced by Judge Manton for smuggling. They were charged with returning here from abroad on Dec. 31, 1916, and again on March 10, 1917, with $45,000 worth of bort diamonds, useful for mechanical purposes, on the first trip, and $33,800 worth of the same and $8,000 worth of colored stones on the second trip.

In passing sentence Judge Manton said: "Fines don't seem to do much good in preventing law violations of this character. I have sent people to prison on similar charges who were only mere tools, but I feel that rich and poor must be dealt with alike. The matter has reached a point where severe punishment must follow for the protection of society."

Tenenbaum was sentenced to the Federal prison at Atlanta for a year and a day, and Seiler's sentence was eight months in the Mercer County, N. J., penitentiary.

Mrs. Warren is accused of making a false declaration of the value of her property, and so there is a difference between the two cases.

NEW HERO LAND ATTRACTION

Cheshire Cheese and Its Famous Puddings to be Reproduced.

With the arrival of Edward James Scott and James Wortham, who have been sent under the initiative of the British Foreign Office, another new feature is assured for "Hero Land," the great war relief spectacle, which opens at the Grand Central Palace a week from tonight. The former was for thirty-four years in charge of the famous Cheshire Cheese restaurant, and Wortham is the son of the present manager, and they have come to give New Yorkers both a taste and a glimpse of the Cheshire cheese as it has existed in England since the fifteenth century.

Not only has the British Foreign Office sent the two men here to participate in "Hero Land," but it has made it possible for them to bring a large number of rare old prints, ancient play bills, and much of the china, pewter, and other tableware which has distinguished the Cheshire Cheese. Among other things these men brought more than 1,000 larks, in cold storage, which will go into the famous Cheshire puddings which are to be served at the bazaar. This small game bird is unknown in America, though noted in English cookery and literature for hundreds of years. It is regarded as essential to the success of the Cheshire pudding, of which other ingredients are rump steak, kidneys, mushrooms, oysters, and the secret spice of the Cheshire Cheese, which has been handed down from generation to generation. The pudding tips the scale at 80 pounds when cooked.

That part of the Cheshire Cheese known as the Dr. Samuel Johnson Chop Room is to be reproduced to the minutest detail at "Hero Land."

The fact that Miss Beatrice Stevenson, daughter of William W. Stevenson, Controller of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, is to be married next week to Milroy S. Stanoyvich, a Serbian, until recently editor of the Serbian paper Sloboda, became known yesterday when an antenuptial agreement executed by the couple and Mr. Stevenson was filed in the Supreme Court.

WOMEN'S WAR WORK CHIEF FORUM TOPIC

WHERE THEIR MONEY GOES

The present-day industrial condition of woman was the topic of the women who spoke at the regular session of the Woman's Forum, which met at the Hotel Biltmore yesterday morning, although several other subjects had been assigned to the speakers. There was a little talk about the new woman voter.

Mrs. Charles S. Whitman, wife of the Governor, who is a member of the forum, was the guest of honor. Mrs. Whitman is supposed never to make speeches, but rose to say a few words to the women.

"We must congratulate ourselves," said Mrs. Whitman, referring to the enfranchisement of the women, "upon our new privileges and responsibilities, and, O women, let us use them to the best of our ability."

Mrs. Claudi Quigley Murphy, scheduled to speak on "Philosophy of the Kitchen," branched off almost at once to tell of war work conditions of women in Iowa and Ohio, where she had been making a professional survey. Before she began on that topic she told the women that the war might send some of the industries which had been taken from the home back to it—breadmaking for instance. "They say women waste," she said, "and if each woman wastes an ounce of flour on the sides of her pan each time one makes bread, 200,000 women would waste as many ounces, which would be a serious loss. If the baker can make the bread cheaper, let him have the job, for we have a Government standard now which he must keep to."

The women of Iowa, Mrs. Murphy said, have up to the present time done little in the way of self-support. There have been some women teachers and a few in offices. "Now," she said, "I find the women getting into banks, carshops, and acting as ticket agents. In one place women were husking corn, not a few women, but a whole bunch of them. A number were in agriculture. In some of the Ohio towns I found women working in carshops and munition factories. In Toledo they were working in the roundhouse, wiping and oiling the engines and washing cars. They were in the railroad shops and acting as track walkers.

"So many of these women have practically never made money before that it is interesting to know what they do with it. They spend a good deal for clothes, and those who had good clothes before have better ones now, and those who dressed poorly are now dressing well. I heard a story of a girl who was buying shoes. The clerk had brought out tan, gray, and black shoes at $9 a pair. The clerk advised the girl get the gray shoes. 'I'll take them all,' she said. There is one town where the sale of perfume since the girls have gone to work has increased 200 per cent. The sweet odors that rise to heaven from that town must amaze the angels."

Mrs. Murphy told of a discussion among street car men of the proposal to take on women as motormen. Some argued that the women had not the nerve and that they would lose their heads. Finally the President of one company said:

"I have noticed a great many women driving automobiles and they do not run on tracks. If women can drive automobiles through State Street, Chicago, as I have seen them, they certainly can run street cars."

Mrs. Roy Emery Fletcher, Vice President of the Forum, disagreed with Mrs. Murphy as to great numbers of women taking men's places, and doubted that there was at present need of them at least in New York. She spoke as a member of the Committee on Industry of the Council of National Defense.

"I agree that women who have never made money before spend a great deal of it on clothes," she said. "I saw that condition in England, where they said they had sold more cheap furs and more cheap jewelry since women had been doing war work than ever before. They are spending money for food, too, and the women and children are much better for the improved diet. The number of women in industry because of war conditions is more apparent than real," said Mrs. Fletcher. "And I beg to differ with that minister who said the other day that he wished that from one-half to two-thirds of the women knitting were in the munitions factories. There is as yet no shortage of cheap labor in New York State. There are men now looking for work. There is always a greater demand for expert labor than can be supplied. We know that in our own houses we would never let a first-class cook ask a second time for a place."

Mrs. Fletcher had something to say about equal pay for equal work, and said that if the women received the same pay as the men they must do the same kind of work under the same conditions. If special conditions had to be made for them they could not expect it. She said the morals in the munitions plants in England were splendid and that the introduction of women had been a benefit.

Mrs. Jessie L. Higgins as a Liberty Loan worker, spoke on "Feminism and Finance," and told the women they must do all they can to educate the community to buy the new certificates and war saving stamps. She told two stories, showing the ignorance of finances. One was of an old lady who went to her bank to buy many dollars worth of Liberty bonds. When asked about the denomination, she thought it was a personal question and answered that she was a Methodist.

"That is no worse than a man in a book shop," said Mrs. Higgins, "who, when a woman went in to sell him a Liberty bond, said: 'Why I thought that Liberty Statue was paid for long ago.'"

Mrs. Marcus M. Marks was to have spoken on "The Lure of the Knitting Needle," but was unable to be present and Miss Anne Rhodes, who was to have talked on "Americanism," had lost her voice speaking on other topics. Mrs. Robert McKee, daughter of the late President Harrison, and Mrs. John L. Griffith presented a patriotic book, "Defenders of Democracy," which is being sold in the interest of the work of the Militia of Mercy.

JOHN D. CRIMMINS LEAVES $5,000,000

GIFTS TO OLD SERVANTS

Trust Fund to Little Sisters of the Poor to Provide Christmas Dinners.

The will of John D. Crimmins, filed yesterday, disposes of an estate estimated at more than $5,000,000, the bulk of which goes to his children. His son, John D. Crimmins, Jr., does not share in the residuary estate as do the others, but gets only half the income from a trust fund of $240,000. The will also gave $1,000 to Mrs. John D. Crimmins, Jr., providing she was living happily with her husband when Mr. Crimmins died. Mrs. Crimmins divorced her husband in Connecticut in June, 1915, on the ground of intemperance, and under the decree receives $125 a month alimony for each of her two children.

The largest charitable bequest is $25,000, to St. Patrick's Cathedral, for the Cathedral College in East Fiftieth Street. The Little Sisters of the Poor get $3,000 in trust, the income to be used for the Christmas dinners established by Mr. Crimmins. Bequests of $1,000 each went to the St. Vincent de Paul Society, St. Vincent's Hospital, and Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum. The following get $500 each: School of St. Catherine of Sienna, St. Francis's Hospital, Presbyterian Hospital, Seton Hospital, Roosevelt Hospital, Mount Sinai Hospital, House of the Good Shepherd, and Servants of Relief for Incurable Cancer. Gifts of $250 each went to Misericordia Hospital, Mission of Our Lady of the Rosary, Sanatorium Gabriel, and Columbus Hospital. The Monastery of Corpus Christi receives $2,500 for the upkeep of the Crimmins family vault.

Bridget Geoghegan, a servant, receives $500, and $1,000 is to be distributed among other family servants. Mr. Crimmins directs that part of his library be sold and that the collection of Irish history and literature be given to the American Irish Historical Society on condition that it is to be well cared for. Otherwise the Catholic University at Washington gets the books.

In Memoriam.

GALLAWAY.—At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Merchants National Bank of the City of New York held Nov. 15, 1917, the following minute and resolution were unanimously adopted: The Board of Directors of the Merchants National Bank of the City of New York record upon their minutes the death of Robert Macy Gallaway, until lately President of the bank. His wise and prudent administration of its affairs extended to nearly twenty-five years, and during all that time he maintained undiminished its honorable tradition among the banking institutions of this city and of the United States. The integrity of his character was its security and its ornament. Large experience and intimate relations with commerce and finance informed his sound judgment and enabled him greatly to enlarge the business of the bank and to increase its prosperity. His name will remain worthily linked with the notable succession of eminent men who for more than a century have filled the office which he so long occupied.

Resolved, That a copy of this minute, suitably engrossed, be sent to the bereaved family of Mr. Gallaway.
RAYMOND E. JONES, Vice President.
OWEN E. PAYNTER, Cashier and Secretary of the Board.

DR. KARL LIEBKNECHT

"'And for all that, mind you,' Bertrand went on, 'there is one figure that has risen above the war and will blaze with the beauty and strength of his courage—'

"I listened, leaning on a stick towards him, drinking in the voice that came in the twilight silence from the lips that so rarely spoke. He cried with a clear voice—'Liebknecht!'" — From LE FEU (Under Fire) by Henri Barbusse.

Liebknecht revealed the basis of autocracy to the Germans. He was imprisoned for his daring and his book was destroyed. It is now available!

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Ticker Has Little to Do While Floor Traders Stand Aloof —List Irregular.

An interesting situation has grown out of the attempts of the Stock Exchange authorities to regulate short selling. When the original ruling was made calling for statements from brokers of stocks borrowed to make deliveries for customers no appreciable change appeared in the volume of activity. The supplementary ruling asking for the names of floor traders selling stocks short was undoubtedly responsible for an immediate reduction in activity and for a further contraction yesterday. The total dealings were but 273,000 shares, the smallest day's business seen since the middle of August. Conditions have made for less activity, aside from the new policy of supervision of floor traders, but they fail to account for such a drastic falling off in business and the conviction that it has been largely due to the temporary withdrawal of the floor traders from the market has been borne out by the attitude of the members themselves. It is evident that some of them resent the action of the Governors or fear to go on record at this time. It is not to be supposed that this aloofness will long continue, but the withdrawal of professional operators is undoubtedly serving a very good purpose just now in making it easier for the market to adjust itself to the rapid changes in both the domestic and foreign problems, and while price changes, lacking the stabilizing influence of the buying and selling that only originate on the floor, have been somewhat more violent, the net result on the whole has been highly beneficial.

Yesterday's market was very irregular, but inclined to firmness. There again occurred some wide price swings on small transactions, but in most instances the net changes were of little importance. There is little investment business coming in outside of odd-lot buying and the general disposition is to proceed cautiously until the critical developments under way on the Continent have been completed.

A significant reflection of the workings of the higher costs of materials and labor is to be seen in the application of the express companies for an increase in rates on their transportation business. This industry is handling more shipments than ever before and on the surface should be exceedingly prosperous, but present day costs, not allowing for any return upon the capital stocks, are larger than the gross revenues from the packages handled. The inevitable conclusion drawn by the express company executives is that shippers must either be prepared to pay higher rates, or see the service discontinued.

No testimony so far introduced at the railway rate hearings has carried such weight as that given yesterday by Paul M. Warburg of the Federal Reserve Board. Mr. Warburg, by virtue of his position, comes as near to being a disinterested expert as could be found, and his wide experience as a banker entitles his diagnosis as to the causes for the inability of the railroads to borrow money to the thoughtful consideration of every one, whether interested in the pending cases as a stockholder or as a buyer of transportation.

LONDON MARKET IS QUIET.

Money in Better Supply and Discount Rates Are Quiet.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The stock market was quiet today, with shipping shares and Scandinavian bonds again firm and active features. The war loan was steadily supported and American Marconi was firm, but several industrials reacted under profit-taking. Russian issues were steady.

Money was in better supply and discount rates were steady.

Trading Quiet on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, Nov. 16.—Trading was quiet on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes 59 francs 75 centimes for cash. Exchange on London (unofficial) 27 francs 32 centimes. Five per cent. loan 87 francs 70 centimes.

Russian Banks Reported Closed.

LIMITS TAX ON EXPRESS.

One Charge for Newspaper Packages Divided in Transit.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Secretary McAdoo approved a ruling today which relieves newspaper publishers and express companies from a burdensome feature of the new war tax on express packages.

The practice of sending packages of newspapers by express to news dealers and subscribers along a railroad route presented a problem. The express companies take such packages with the agreement to break them, and throw off specified portions at the various stations to which they are addressed, but charge only the lump rate for the whole package, which is taken by weight. Some parts of the package may go only two or three miles, and others may go a hundred miles or more, but the single payment covers the entire bundle.

The office of the Internal Revenue Commissioner holds that the single payment is the one to be subjected to the tax. The tax is 1 cent in every 20 cents that may be paid to an express company for carrying a package from one point to another point in the United States. If it had been held that every part of a package of newspapers was a separate shipment the tax would have been very much increased.

THE CONDITION OF TRADE.

Commenting on the condition of trade and the business of the banks, Dun's Review says:

With the increasing restraints imposed by war conditions, and with the many uncertainties of the period, business is handicapped in various ways and its progress is necessarily checkered and irregular. Not through lack of confidence, but owing to the drawbacks in production and distribution, and also because of diminishing supplies of materials and merchandise, some important transactions are being held in abeyance, and the difficulties of filling requirements are not calculated to lessen with Winter drawing nearer and a still greater congestion in transportation foreshadowed.

Payments through the banks, as reflected in Clearing House transactions at the principal cities in the United States, amount to $5,494,060,970, a decrease of 12.8 per cent. compared with the same week last year, but a gain of 24.6 per cent. over the corresponding week in 1915.

Bradstreet's says:

The stream of business in ordinary channels runs quite freely, considering that the Government has preference in the matter of deliveries, but there is some evidence of conservatism and more or less uncertainty respecting the future trend of prices and the course of the stock market. In the latter respect, however, there is rather more of a feeling that pressing liquidation has been fairly well completed.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

More Gold for Chile.

It was announced yesterday that the National City Bank was making an additional shipment of gold bars, amounting to $1,000,000, to Chile. Earlier in the week this institution arranged for the exportation of $2,200,000 also to Chile. It is understood that the metal is consigned to the Chilean Government, and is sent in payment of American purchases of nitrates. The Liberty National Bank received yesterday a request from a Canadian bank for the shipment of $100,000 in United States gold coin in exchange for a similar amount of gold bars. This is a rather unusual transaction, but the bank did not hesitate to fulfill the order after receiving permission from the Federal Reserve Bank.

Day's Clearings Relatively Small.

Although Thursday's financial transactions incident to the payment of the 18 per cent. installment on the Liberty Loan were the largest in the history of Wall Street, yesterday's Clearing House figures did not break any previously established records. The exchanges totaled about $792,000,000, and the balance was slightly more than $81,000,000, while the Federal Reserve Bank came out with a credit balance of $54,512,912. The day's exchanges compare with $601,000,000, the average for the year; and yesterday total transactions of $873,000,000 compare with $1,265,758,049, the record made on Feb. 6. The largest balance ever reported was $133,761,391 on Aug. 29. The relative smallness of yesterday's Clearing House figures is accounted for the fact that $48,000,000, only about 7 per cent. of the $678,000,000 received in payment of the Liberty Loan on Thursday was in cash, the balance being in the form of book credits and Treasury certificates of indebtedness.

Crucible Steel Meeting.

The status of the Crucible Steel Company in the Government's war preparations was well established at the annual meeting yesterday. Chairman Du Puy informed shareholders in response to questions that fully 98 per cent. of the capacity of the big plant at Newark was engaged on Federal orders, while the organization as a whole was turning out practically all the steel for rifle barrels which military plans call for. The prices for crucible steel have not yet been fixed by Government regulation, and in the absence of quotations, Mr. Du Puy made clear, the company was not wasting time trying to figure what its future profits might be. Stockholders were told that dividends on the common stock were not being considered by the management as yet, owing to the uncertainty about excess profits taxes and steel prices. A factor in the dividend question, also, is the need of the company to maintain heavy working capital to handle its work.

Solar Refining Extra Dividend.

Directors of Standard Oil concerns have ever been noted for conservation in respect to dividends, and for this reason the declaration yesterday of an extra payment of $25 a share by the Solar Refining Company was taken in the trade as further evidence of a high degree of prosperity among producers and refiners of petroleum. The company distributed several substantial extras in the two years following the dissolution of the old Standard of New Jersey, but yesterday's was the first ordered since December, 1913. The former extras were disbursed on capital of $500,000, while the capital now is $2,000,000.

Direct Imports of Tin Talked Of.

It is credibly reported in metal circles that the Tin Committee of the Council of National Defense has successfully negotiated an agreement with the British authorities for the direct importation of tin from the Straits Settlements into the United States. This should have a very beneficial effect in many ways. The efforts of American manufacturers to secure adequate supplies of crude tin have been very seriously hampered by the difficulty of securing permits from the British; these permits, in fact, having been dealt with on the market at stiff prices, and the long and roundabout route which the tin necessarily took before reaching this country. Bringing tin direct from the East to the Pacific Coast would not only improve the manufacturing situation here, but would play its part in relieving the shipping situation.

The New Government Charter.

The final form of the new Government time-charter, applicable to all American ships requisitioned by the Shipping Board, which has, it is understood, been decided upon by the board, is not expected to contain any very new and startling features. It is believed by shipping men to be based largely on the standard "Government-form" time-charter long used in the trade, with a number of features taken from the form developed by the New York Produce Exchange, and some special clauses having to do with unusual conditions of the present time. The charter is not likely to answer the question which is still most vexing the shipping industry—the scale of compensation to be received by the firm or individuals who operate their own or others' requisitioned vessels for the Government. No decision on this point was believed to have been reached yesterday.

The Hardest-Hit Industries.

An official of one of the big companies which, while not exclusively a "war industry," has by the nature of its business been in line for a tremendous amount of war business, with corresponding profit to itself, recently was discussing its fortunes with a newspaper man. "Yes, I suppose we have been pretty lucky," he said. "On the other hand, there are three industries that, from their very nature, have suffered far more heavily from war conditions than any others. I should put them in this order—the street railways, the newspapers, and the railroads. The newspapers haven't been tied to the stake quite as helplessly as the street railways, but, on the other hand, the newspapers constitute the only big industry in the country that has been whacked with an extra tax just when it was struggling to keep its feet under the added load of war conditions."

ASK MORTGAGE ON SHIPYARD

American International Seeks Consent of Stockholders.

The American International Corporation, which has received a contract from the Emergency Fleet Corporation for the construction of a fabricating yard for standardized steel merchant ships, and the construction at the yard of fifty 5,000-ton freighters of this description—this contract, it is understood, to be extended to cover a complete program of 200 such ships—has sent out to its stockholders a request for their signature to a form of consent to the execution of a mortgage on the land upon which the yard is being built at Hog Island, on the Delaware, below Philadelphia.

In requesting the consent of its stockholders, the American International Corporation asserts that, contrary to the previous general understanding regarding its contract with the Emergency Fleet Corporation, the Hog Island yard remains its property after it has executed the contract, the mortgage being taken by the Emergency Fleet Corporation as security for the money which it is to advance, covering the cost of construction of the yard and of the ships, the American International Corporation obtaining only a fee for building and operating the yard and constructing the ships, which is arranged on a sliding scale, with bonuses for quick delivery, the contract being of the "cost-plus" variety.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—The Interstate Commerce Commission today authorized the railroads east of Buffalo and Pittsburgh to apply for increased commodity rates on iron and steel products of about 15 per cent., in conformity with similar increases granted on the same articles carried under class rates and with similar action taken in other territory.

SHARP CONTRACTION IN WALL ST. TRADING

Shrinkage of 120,000 Shares Since Wednesday Attributed to Short Sales Curb.

QUIET MARKET WELCOMED

Governors Say Public Information on Extent of Short Operations Is Undesirable.

A sharp contraction in business on the Stock Exchange yesterday caused the Governors to believe that their measures to reduce short selling had brought material results. The total of stocks sold was 273,000 shares, being the smallest turnover for a full business day since Aug. 20, while the shrinkage from Wednesday's transactions was about 120,000 shares. It was on Wednesday afternoon that the Governors passed an additional resolution, directing that the names of all persons who "sold and bought in" stocks the same day were to be filed daily with the Committee on Business Conduct. The former rule in respect to short sales did not affect this class of trading, as the names filed were only of traders who borrowed stock to carry short sales over night or longer.

Governors who discussed the diminution of business said that a quiet market, free of undue speculative efforts, was what had been aimed at by the short sales regulations. While they were unwilling to say that the relatively small business yesterday and the day before proved the desired result had been obtained, they appeared satisfied with developments.

"We sought to bring about more settled trading," said a leading Governor, "until some of the problems brought about by the war had been worked out, and, also, until investors regained confidence in securities. It looks as though some progress has been made to this end."

Some Floor Traders Displeased.

Gossip on the board room floor indicated that members whose chief business is trading for their own account had practically dropped out of action. The Wednesday ruling by the Governors was aimed directly at them, making necessary the filing of names with the Business Conduct Committee of each man who sold stock short. Some of the floor traders made no secret of the fact that they were displeased with the Governors' action. They had no liking for a measure which put them on record as short sellers, even though they had no fear that their names would become known to any persons besides the members of the committee, provided that their operations came within the bounds of "legitimate" transactions on the short side.

Brokers in position to know something of the quality of business said that the small turnover did not indicate a total cessation of short operations by any means. Commission house customers continued to trade moderately on the short side, as they had done daily since the new rules went into effect. In some quarters the prediction was made that the floor traders, who account for a large part of total transactions in normal markets, would gradually renew their activities. The Exchange authorities have insisted that they had no desire to do away with short sales within the proper limits, as they consider such transactions of real value in stabilizing quotations.

A number of Governors were asked yesterday whether it would not be beneficial to the whole stock market situation if daily announcements were made of the total of stocks sold short. Names of the sellers were, of course, to be kept secret. The general reply was that several factors made it appear undesirable to make public definite information on the extent of short operations, while the Governors said they could not see that any benefit to investors or speculator could result.

Opposes Publishing Figures.

"I would oppose such a procedure," said one of the Exchange leaders, "for one reason, because exact totals of short sales every day might react to the harm of securities, causing violent movements up or down. It might happen that over a period of days or weeks the reports indicated that the short interest had been greatly reduced. This could bring about a market condition where, with few holders of short contracts to put in covering buying orders, a little liquidation might easily bring about a break of 10 points. There would be too many sellers and too few buyers. From the opposite point of view, the figures might show a top heavy short interest. Then investment buying might move stocks up enough to scare the shorts, and a precipitate covering movement might bring about a skyrocket rise.

"There would naturally be less objection to an extraordinary upward movement than a drastic decline, but I do not think anything should be done which might cause any radical swings. Again, the records of the Business Conduct Committee, if made public as compiled, might be misleading for the reason that reports on borrowed stocks do not necessarily prove that the borrowing was necessitated by short sales. Stocks are frequently borrowed by brokerage firms in the loan crowd on the floor to be used as collateral for loans. Another reason why I should oppose the announcement of short sales is that it would be disturbing to the business machinery of the Exchange. The confidential relations between broker and customer are not to be affected, even indirectly, without possible embarrassment to both. The Exchange is keeping a record of short sales as a war measure purely, which appeared necessary because of suspicion that pro-German influences might be behind some of the recent sales for the short account. It would be bad business to put anything into effect which acted to upset the conventional methods of doing business in stocks."

CHECK ABUSES ON THE CURB.

Dealers in Unlisted Securities Quickly End Fictitious Trading.

Bear raids on unlisted securities, and in particular on issues of public utility corporations, which have been more glaring than those suspected of having taken place on the Stock Exchange, have come to light with the informal organization of dealers in unlisted securities to check abuses of the trading privileges of the Curb market. Most of the transactions in public utilities take place over the counter or by means of the telephone, and it is difficult to establish a fair market quotation. Realizing this, unscrupulous traders are said to have created a phantom market on the Curb by offering one another stocks at considerable recessions from prices which have been made by reputable dealers. In some instances the outside brokers have sold stocks without attaching any definite date for deliveries, making it possible for them to remain short until lower prices on actual offerings enabled them to buy shares to make deliveries.

When this practice came to the attention of dealers in unlisted securities they sent representatives into the open market to take all stocks of the companies in which they were interested at the offering prices, at the same time insisting that transactions should be made under the Stock Exchange rules calling for deliveries of the certificates by 2:15 P. M. the following day. This immediately ended the fictitious trades which have been creating havoc among holders of public utility issues. It has also been made difficult for short sellers to borrow stocks, some of the issuing companies taking it upon themselves to warn holders of their shares of the purpose for which they were being borrowed.

THE COTTON MARKET

The cotton market yesterday came to the end of its latest upward swing, and comparatively early in the session experienced a strong reaction, on which, in the course of the afternoon, a good part of the gains of the preceding two days was lost. The drop in prices was attributed by some to rumors of Government price restrictions, but the general opinion seemed to be that, although talk of this kind played its part and may have sent prices lower than they would have otherwise gone, a reaction from the rapid advances of Wednesday and Thursday was to have been expected in any case. At the close the market was quite easy, off from 45 to 70 points. January, the leading month, sold off to 27.38 early, rallied to 27.70, and broke to a closing price of 27.14.

Both the President and Vice President of the New York Cotton Exchange are in Washington, and it was reported they had gone there at the invitation of Government officials to discuss price restrictions. This was not confirmed, nor was any official comment obtainable upon other reports that their trip had to do with the application of the stamp tax schedule or with the ocean freight rate situation. A special meeting of the Board of Managers was held during the day, but no statement was given out.

The market opened barely steady, at a decline of 3 to 18 points, and sold 20 to 30 points net lower soon after the call. The trade demand, which had been such a prominent feature earlier in the week, was much less in evidence, while there were scattered Southern selling and local pressure. Offerings were not badly taken at the decline, and early sellers turned to cover during the middle of the day as though disappointed that the Southern selling had not assumed more important proportions. Prices just about recovered their early loss, then broke under renewed liquidation, reaching the lowest levels in the late trading.

Reports of increased spot offerings were received from both Eastern and Western sections of the belt, also reports of an easier basis. At the same time Southern mills were reported good buyers, and according to advices reaching here early in the afternoon, there had been a large turnover of actual cotton during the morning. No fresh developments were reported in the ocean freight situation. Exports for the day were 15,593 bales, making 1,509,772 so far this season. Southern spot markets as officially reported were unchanged to 40 points lower, with the Southwestern markets relatively easy.

Move to Adjust Cotton Rates.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Negotiations are in progress between agents of the American and British Governments to change the agreed Atlantic freight rates on cotton. Some time ago a rate of $5 was fixed on cotton from northern ports and $6.25 from southern ports. Complaint has been made that the differential is too great, and that it is discriminatory against southern shippers. A readjustment necessarily involves cotton prices.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Trading on the Consolidated Stock Exchange was dull, and with the exception of a few specialties, prices moved within a narrow range. The tendency, however, was toward higher levels, with final quotations generally showing small net gains. There were indications that the dividend-paying shares were being quietly purchased for investment account. Professional traders were wary of selling stocks and buyers found supplies scarce. The better feeling was induced largely by consideration of the case with which the 18 per cent. installment on the Liberty 4s had been carried through.

28 NEW BANKS IN RESERVE.

Resources Increased $845,796,400 by Added Membership Since Nov. 1.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—The showing of State banks and trust companies that have come into the Federal Reserve system in the last two weeks is more significant than for any similar period since the recent legislation adopted by Congress to accomplish the transfer of such banks to the national system. Twenty-eight banks joined between Nov. 1 and Nov. 15. While the amount of capitalization thus transferred is not as great as occurred in September, the encouraging sign is the large number of substantially large banks embraced in the statement. The total amount of capital brought into the Federal Reserve system is $33,685,000, surplus $41,187,231, and total resources $845,796,400.

The list follows, with the total resources of the banks indicated:

Brooklyn Trust Company, Brooklyn, N. Y., $40,270,629; St. Clair County Savings Bank, Port Huron, Mich., $1,319,436; Citizens Bank, Clinton, Wis., $478,360; Miners Deposit Bank, Lykens, Penn., $679,897; Citizens Commercial Trust Company, Buffalo, N. Y., $15,031,812; Baltimore Trust Company, Baltimore, Md., $15,990,745; Citizens Savings and Trust Company, Cleveland, Ohio, $74,532,631; Manhattan Company, New York, N. COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

The movement of wheat at primary points has fallen off somewhat this week, and receipts for the last five days show a loss of 451,000 bushels, compared with the previous week. Flour production continues very active, however, and comparatively few complaints are being heard regarding the distribution. According to The Modern Miller, Winter wheat already seeded will exceed 12,000,000 acres, and in some districts in the Southwest they are still seeding, mainly in Texas and Oklahoma. Further complaints were received of frost damage in Argentina.

RYE.—Market firmer; No. 2 Western, $1.39½, cost and freight New York.

CORN.

Corn traders are finding it very difficult to arrive at a definite basis of calculations regarding probable future price movements. Some authorities are inclined to look upon the supply and demand situation as distinctly bullish, at least for the balance of the present calendar year, and some think that there is little probability of much accumulation until well into 1918. The attitude of the Government against aggressive trading on the bull side has a tendency to discourage buying, however, and the market in consequence has become narrow and is easily influenced by comparatively small operations either way. Prices yesterday showed resistance to pressure and the undertone was firm, closing ⅝@1¼c net higher. The local cash market was unsettled, new yellow corn being quoted at $1.65 to $2, and 3 mixed at $1.53¾, cost and freight New York.

OATS.

The oats market showed decided strength early with an active demand from December shorts. Offers from the country were of limited proportions and the cash demand seems capable of taking care of the present movement. Exporters, however, were less in evidence and appear to have withdrawn from the market on account of the recent upturn in values. The local cash market was strong; standard quoted at 73½c to 74c; No. 2 white, 74½c; No. 3 white, 73c to 73½c; No. 4 white, 72½c to 73c; fancy clipped white, 74½c to 76c; ordinary clipped white, 71c to 75c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market was only moderately active and after an irregular opening prices moved in a feverish manner, closing easy, although slightly above the lowest. Sentiment is somewhat mixed over the hog situation and the question of Government control, although the cash position continues to show considerable strength. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 21,000, estimated for Saturday, 16,000; Kansas City received 11,000 and Omaha, 4,600 hogs.

COTTONSEED OIL.

Trading operations in the market for cottonseed oil were again of small proportions, as outstanding accounts are being steadily evened up. As a result the market was very feverish and prices moved according to the orders at hand, closing 40 points net lower for December, while other months were unchanged to 5 points higher. Total sales were 1,500 barrels. Range of prices:

COFFEE.

A somewhat steadier tone developed in the coffee market yesterday. While not particularly heavy or urgent, there has been steady liquidation for the last several days, and offerings yesterday morning were lighter. This suggested that the scattering long interest had been reduced to comparatively small proportions, and the opening advance of 1 to 2 points probably reflected a steadier technical position. The market closed steady at a net advance of 1 to 3 points. Business included exchanges of December for March at 27 points, for July at 60 points, and September, 77 points. Closing quotations for spots were on the basis of 7⅝c for Rio 7s and 9¼c for Santos 4s. Range of prices:

SUGAR.

The general situation shows a slightly easier tendency, due to the distribution in this territory of sugars held here for export account. No relief, however, has come from the Western beet crop, offerings being promptly absorbed for use in the Western territory. About the only new business put through was a sale of 450 tons of Demerara sugar, November arrival, at a price equivalent to 6.90c, duty paid. Late Thursday there was a sale of 25,000 bags of Cubas, specified November clearance, at 5⅛c, cost and freight. Spot prices follow: Centrifugal, 6.90c; molasses, 6.02c; cost and freight, 5⅛c.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 5,587 packages. The market looks a little better. The demand for choice and fancy grades is rather in excess of the supply and prices are hardening a little. Medium qualities still quite plentiful, but there is less pressure to sell. More doing in storage creamery, and a little firmer feeling on the better qualities. Renovated still neglected, and ladles and packing stock are extremely dull. Creamery, higher than extras, per pound, 45½@46c; extras, (92 score,) 45c; firsts, (88 to 91 score,) 42@44½c; seconds, (83 to 87 score,) 40@41½c; thirds, 38@39c; creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 46½@47c; extras, 45½@46c; firsts, 42@45c; seconds, 41@42½c; creamery, held, higher scoring than extras, 43@43½c; extras, 42¼@42¾c; firsts, 40½@42c; seconds, 39½@40½c; thirds, 38@39c; State, dairy, tubs, finest, 43½@44c; good to prime, 40½@43c; common to fair, 35@40c; renovated, extras, 41c; firsts, 39½@40c; lower grades, 35@38c; ladles, current make, firsts, 33½@34c; seconds, 32½@33c; lower grades, 31½@32c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 33c; No. 2, 32c; lower grades, 30@31½c.

EGGS.—7,036 cases, not including 1,700 cases in transit for export. Fresh-gathered eggs are still in light supply, and values are fairly well sustained, high qualities showing considerable firmness. Some receivers, however, report the demand rather less active, and undergrades are of irregular values. Storage eggs are still unsettled and irregular. The moderate business reported is about at yesterday's quotations, but the tone is unsettled, and, to force business, concessions would have to be made. Nearby eggs continue in light supply, and of very irregular quality and value. Fancy goods command full former prices, but buyers are critical when paying top quotations, and the mixed and lower qualities range widely in price. Fresh-gathered extras, per dozen, 54@55c; extra firsts, 52@53c; firsts, 48@51c; seconds, 42@46c; thirds and poorer, 35@40c; fresh-gathered dirties, No. 1, 34@35c; No. 2 and poorer, 28@33c; fresh-gathered checks, good to choice, dry, 32@33c; undergrades, 25@31c; refrigerator, special marks, fancy, storage and insurance paid, 34½@35c; firsts, storage and insurance paid, 32½@34c; seconds, storage and insurance paid, 30@32½c; lower grades, storage and insurance paid, 28@30c; refrigerator, nearby whites, 39@44c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 75@80c; ordinary to good, 60@72c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 58@75c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby whites, pullets, 32@60c; Western and Southern, gathered whites, 52@65c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby hennery browns, 55@61c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 46@55c.

FARMERS ASK LABOR FOR CLOSER UNITY

BRITISH UNIONS STAND FIRM

Delegates Tell of Sacrifices and Confidence That They Have Not Been Made in Vain.

BUFFALO, Nov. 16.—A plea from the farm that closer co-operation with other branches of the nation's industries to the end that victory over autocracy might be the sooner achieved, and reports from two great British labor organizations stating that union labor there still faces the enemy determined and confident of victory, brought enthusiastic cheers from the delegates attending today's session of the thirty-seventh annual convention of the American Federation of Labor.

The farmers were represented by A. C. Townley, President of the Farmers' Non-Partisan League, and L. V. Strayer, Second Vice President of the National Farmers' Congress. Emanuel Koveleski of Rochester reported on the last annual convention of the Canadian Trades and Labor Council, and John Golden, President of the United Textile Workers, and James Lord, President of the mining department of the federation, reported on the meeting of the British Trades Union Congress and the Allied Labor Conference.

"We found," said Mr. Golden, "a people who have held fast to their ideals, confident that their sacrifices have not been in vain. Union labor in Great Britain believes that when it is all ended the gates of opportunity to greater liberties, greater lives, and an enduring democracy will be opened throughout the world.

"We were assured from what we heard and saw that no matter what the cost in suffering, the armies and the peoples of the allied countries are going on to a victorious conclusion, a victory that will mean the beginning of the end of militarism the world over."

Mr. Golden urged the convention to have the American Federation of Labor represented at all future allied labor conferences.

The committees spent another busy day. Two resolutions dealing with the federation's close relations with the Government on war work are understood to be giving the federation leaders some concern. Either one of them, it is said, is likely to precipitate sharp debate on the floor of the convention.

One of the resolutions was introduced by delegates representing the Bridge and Structural Iron Workers. The preamble declares that American labor is loyal and patriotic, and determined to use its best efforts to establish and maintain the co-operation of all organized workers to assist the Government to carry on the war to a successful conclusion. It then states that a great amount of the materials necessary for Government work is being furnished by the United States Steel Corporation and the Bethlehem Steel Corporation for work erected by or through firms who are members of the National Erectors Association.

"For the last twelve years," the resolution continues, "the United States Steel Corporation, the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, and the National Erectors Association have steadfastly refused to enter into an agreement or in any way negotiate with our international union, in which 75 per cent. of the men who follow our trade are members."

The resolution then calls on the Federation to take up the matter with the Secretary of War, Secretary of the Navy, and the Council of National Defense, "in an effort to have the workers accorded the same recognition given to other organized workers on war work." This resolution is in the hands of the Committee on Resolutions.

The second resolution was introduced by P. H. Jennings of the Massachusetts State Branch. George H. Wrenn of Springfield, and Edward H. McGrady of Boston. It refers to President Wilson's proclamation of March 4, which stated that all Government work should be performed on a basic eight-hour day, with not less than time and one-half for overtime. This has been interpreted by certain Government officials, the resolution states, in such a way that many of the manufacturers supplying the Government are working their employes more than eight hours.

The Executive Council is asked "to call the matter to the attention of the proper Government officials with the view of placing all Government supply contracts on an eight-hour basis in compliance with our understanding of the proclamation."

The backers of these resolutions say their adoption will not slow up any war industry, but will tend to establish fairness in the application of the principle of the eight-hour day.

END STRIKES AT WAR PLANTS

Building Trades Council to Discuss Terms with Federal Officials.

BOSTON, Nov. 16.—Strikes which have impeded construction on important Government war plants in this vicinity for the last few weeks were called off by the Building Trades Council tonight. The men will return to work tomorrow on all plants affected except the $9,000,000 shipbuilding plant at Squantum. Leaders announced that the action was taken on receipt of definite assurances that representatives of the Navy and War departments would confer with them here tomorrow on conditions at Squantum.

The so-called open-shop conditions at Squantum precipitated a series of strikes which spread to the Watertown Arsenal, the Boston Navy Yard, the Naval Hospital at Chelsea, the Federal Appraisers' Stores in this city, and the magazine station at Hingham. On these jobs 1,500 mechanics will resume work tomorrow, but the men will not be ordered back at Squantum, it was said, until the matter has been gone over tomorrow morning at a conference between agents of the joint council of the Building Trades Unions and Admiral Harris of the Bureau of Yards and Docks at the Navy Department, and Stanley King, Third Assistant Secretary of the War Department.

The decision to resume work, it was said at union headquarters, was reached in a "spirit of patriotism," after an almost continuous session of seven hours.

UP TO NEW ESTIMATE BOARD

Present Administration Postpones Condemnation of School Site.

The Board of Estimate yesterday passed along to the next administration the proposed condemnation of a new public school site at Stoddard Place, Sullivan Street, Ludlam Place, and Montgomery Street, Brooklyn. Immediate acquisition of this site was protested against by the members-elect of the new Board of Estimate at a meeting last Tuesday. At the meeting of the Board of Estimate last Friday action on the proposal was postponed for one week.

President Dowling of the Board of Aldermen, acting as Chairman of the Board of Estimate, asked for objections, and, there being none, the matter was laid over until January.

A little later Controller Prendergast and Mayor Mitchel reached the Board of Estimate meeting. When told of the action taken on the school-site matter Mr. Prendergast said he had intended to suggest the same proceedure.

The action of the Board of Estimate was taken as indicating the policy of the administration toward the acquisition of property. Mayor Mitchel has said that the new Tammany officials need have no fear that they would be deprived of the privilege of buying such real estate as they may think the city needs.

URGES FEDERAL LOANS TO AID THE RAILROADS

John D. A. Morrow of National Coal Association Says Assistance Will Help Win War.

The proposal of Samuel Rea, President of the Pennsylvania Railroad, made on Thursday at a hearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission in the 15 per cent. advance rate case, that the time had arrived when Government loans to the railroads should be seriously considered, found a hearty approval yesterday at a luncheon given at the Whitehall Club by members of the recently formed Wholesale Coal Trade Association, held to further co-operation with the Government in conserving this country's fuel supplies for the winning of the war. The members made it plain that they were ready to meet the Government more than half way, even if their business suffered. A resolution to this effect was adopted and sent to President Wilson and the National Fuel Administrator.

James A. Hill, President of the Knickerbocker Fuel Company, and President of the oCal Trade Association, presided at the luncheon and at the general meeting of coal operators and jobbers which followed. John D. A. Morrow of Washington, General Secretary of the National Coal Association, and Noah H. Swayne, 2d, Commissioner at Washington for the National Coal Jobbers' Association, made the principal addresses.

Mr. Morrow said that he appreciated the Chairman's remarks when he said that it was our first duty to win the war. It was the judgment of the coal trade, the speaker said, that this nation and its allies would win this war by organization or lose it through lack of organization.

"It is up to us and to the Allies to match long-built German efficiency with an organization of our own which will give us the benefits and strength and the amplification of it, that we must have in this struggle. The coal operators of the United States have recognized for a long time the moral responsibility attaching to them. They have determined to effect an organization which will make this industry as serviceable as it can be made for the United States Government at the present time. In the first place, since this industry is under the control of Government regulation, it is of vital importance to us and to the Government that the agencies of Government which are regulating, should be accurately and fully informed."

"I noticed yesterday," Mr. Morrow said, "that Mr. Rea said to the Interstate Commerce Commission that he felt we were up to the point where the Government ought to loan money to the railroads. We will not even debate that question. I would loan money immediately to the railroads—as much as they need to put them on the most efficient basis of operation we could get. This war is costing us $60,000,000 a day. Gentlemen, this is no time to start and argue about will we, or won't we, stop and pick up pins, for $50,000,000 or $500,000,000 loaned to the railroads will save this country $60,000,000 a day in ending this war. For that reason I would not even debate the issue whether we would or would not loan it to them. I would ask them where they can take it, and how quick they can take it, and I would give it to them."

"Every man in this industry," the speaker continued, "has realized for a year that the key to the coal trouble in the United States was not at the mines, nor the retail yards. It was in the railroads. We are not in a position to blame the railroads at all. It is simply a condition that we need to recognize, deal with, and remedy as best we can. The simple fact is that the railroads have not been able to handle the business that was thrust upon them, and, following traditional railroading moved coal after they moved everything else, and they furnished the mines with cars after they gave care to everybody else. We feel that with the country at war that kind of traditional railroading has got to stop."

FUR TRADE CONDITIONS.

Despite High Prevailing Prices, Demand Continues Good.

While the new price levels established on many kinds of furs at the public auction here last month, several of which are higher than in many years past, have retarded the sale of some of the more extreme-priced skins, the report of the New York Fur Auction Sales Corporation says that beaver, lynx, American opossum, and civet cat are selling strong at figures higher than those reached at the sale. Red fox and wolf are not moving so well, because of the very high prices at which they are held. Cross and blue fox are bringing last sale prices, and the same is true of marten and muskrat.

A special demand for Northwestern skunk and for "coat stock" raccoon is in evidence, as well as for fresh dark mink. Ermine, fisher and the heavier qualities of wildcat also are selling well, but sales of gray fox and otter are lagging.

Prices for the coming season, the report continues, will to a great extent depend upon the size of the catch that is now coming in and also upon the influence of war conditions on the market. It is expected that the prevailing high prices will result in increased trapping in practically all sections. This will tend to counteract the decrease in the number of trappers, many of whom have entered the army or have been attracted to better-paying employment.

While the pinch of the war, as reflected in increased income taxes and successive Liberty Loans doubtless must be taken into consideration in determining market conditions, it is nevertheless true that the trade for the present can be guided by the experience of the European fur market. There, in spite of three years of warfare and of added financial burdens, the consumption of furs has increased beyond all expectations, and this in the face of the fact that prices have advanced greatly over those current before the outbreak of hostilities.

Considering the large disbursements to be made by the Government, it is only reasonable to expect that the large sums expended will eventually find their way into the hands of the buying public. For this reason the corporation anticipates the maintenance of prices on substantially all articles and looks forward with confidence to a successful January sale.

BIG DRY GOODS SHIPMENTS.

Road Sales Are Far Ahead of Those at Same Time Last Year.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 16.—Marshall Field & Co. in their weekly review of the dry goods trade say:

"Current wholesale distribution of dry goods is running ahead of the heavy shipments for the same period a year ago. The total volume of road sales for both immediate and future deliveries has been in excess of the same week in 1916. Merchants have been in the market in fewer numbers. Collections are well ahead."

GIGANTIC FOOD EXPORTS.

Our Meat Sales in Three Years of War, 5,447,429,046 Pounds.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Almost five and one-half billion pounds of meats and meat products were exported from the United States in the first three years of the war. Department of Commerce statistics show almost 2,000,000,000 pounds were exported during the fiscal year of 1917. The exact three-year total was 5,447,429,046 pounds.

Other foodstuffs exported during the three years were: Wheat, including flour, 779,160,700 bushels; corn, including meal, 157,318,425 bushels; oats, including oatmeal, 294,678,643 bushels; barley, 70,608,739 bushels, and potatoes, 9,642,235 bushels.

Higher Pay for 35,000 Workers.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 16.—Notices were posted in nearly all the cotton mills of the State today, announcing an increase in the wages of 35,000 operatives, effective Dec. 3. The amount of the increase will depend on the result of negotiations between Fall River mill owners and operatives. The new scale will make the wages of mill workers the highest ever paid in Rhode Island.

ORDER FOOD JOBBER TO OPEN HIS BOOKS

Experts from National Food Administration Will Search for Concealed Facts.

SUSPECT EVASIVE ANSWERS

Sugar Shortage in This City Relieved in Part by Arrival of 2,000 Tons from the Philippines.

Experts from the National Food Administration will today go over the books of a large food jobber in this city to find out whether there is any reason for the evasive answers given by the head of the firm to questions that are required to be answered as a requisite to obtaining a Federal license. Arthur Williams, City Food Administrator, while he confirmed the report, would not go into details until investigation had shown whether the jobber had anything to conceal from the Food Administration.

Upon the examination of the blank filed in Washington by the jobber Mr. Hoover, it is said, notified the administration office here. Experts were summoned and within an hour the alleged offender had been ordered to submit his books to Government scrutiny. The jobber is reported to have been perfectly willing to do this. He asked, however, an hour in which to summon his head bookkeeper so he could be on the job. A preliminary examination into sugar transactions, it is said, has been started.

It is understood that the Federal Government intends to deal with a firm hand with business concerns suspected of concealing part of their business operations. Mr. Williams said he believed business men are beginning to understand this position of the Administration. He added that so far as prices are concerned he believes they have reached the top notch.

The sugar shortage has been relieved by the arrival here of 2,000 tons of Philippine sugar. The 2,000 tons of sugar just arrived is being lightered to the Jersey City plant of the American Sugar Refining Company. At the present time, the company announced, it has at this plant approximately 1,000 tons of Peruvian sugars, used mainly to supply the army, navy, the Belgian Relief and the Red Cross. In addition to the 2,000 tons just arrived, there are about 1,900 tons of other raw sugars, consisting of a small amount of Cuban and Philippine sugars, which will arrive between now and Dec. 10.

It is reported in the trade that a ship is due for loading at New Orleans about Nov. 17. This sugar has been bought from the planters at 6.35 cents a pound free on board New Orleans. The price originally announced was 6.35 with the cost of delivery at New York divided between the producer and the consignee. The planters contended that they could not afford to sell at that price. The Warner Refinery at Edgewater, N. J., started on Monday refining odds and ends of Peruvian, Venezuelan and Philippine sugar. These allotments are for France, it is said.

A ruling has been received by Urner-Barry Company of 173 Chambers Street from the National Food Administration relative to the holdings of storage poultry and defining dates on which stocks must be closed out from storage warehouses. The ruling, as made public by the company, follows:

"We are advised by our legal department that the carrying of last year's stock beyond the present packing season constitutes a violation of Section 6 of the Food Control act, which prohibits hoarding. The Food Administration, however, in order to provide for the equitable distribution of these foods to the consumer, are therefore informing all dealers that no action will be recommended by the Food Administration provided that at least half the turkeys are disposed of before Thanksgiving and the remaining half before Jan. 1, 1918, and provided that the other poultry shall be disposed of before March 1, 1918."

Urner-Barry have notified the trade against shipping immature turkeys into the market. They hold that turkeys should not weigh less than eight pounds. John J. Dillon, who remains as head of the Bureau of Food and Markets under the new Council of Farms and Markets, was in conference with John Mitchell, head of the State Food Commission, yesterday. In the afternoon he left for Chenango County to confer regarding milk prices with the producers in that section.

The Producers Price Current contained yesterday extracts from the monthly report of the Bureau of Markets of the Agriculture Department showing the holdings of frozen poultry on Nov. 1. These showed that in 275 storages reporting there was held 46,206,059 pounds of frozen poultry. The 195 storages reporting this year and last year showed present holdings to be 33,250,839 pounds, as compared with 31,174,509 pounds last year, an increase of 6.7 per cent. As throwing a light on the movement of storage stock under the urging of the Food Administration the report notes that during October this year storage stocks decreased 9 per cent., as compared with an increase of 57.3 per cent. during October, 1916.

Increase for Granite Workers.

BARRE, Vt., Nov. 16.—Fifty-five hundred granite workers in this district will receive a 20 per cent. advance in wages beginning April 1. It was announced tonight the action was voluntary on the part of the employers.

DIVERT FOOD TO GERMANY.

Soldiers Send Home Packages from Occupied Districts.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 16.—In consequence of complaints that the families of German officers stationed in occupied regions were at a special advantage, as compared with the families of enlisted men, in the quantity of food they were permitted to receive from the occupied territories, the army authorities state that officers and soldiers are on exactly the same footing, being permitted to send home food packages up to twenty-two pounds in weight, but no larger.

This announcement is of interest to America in view of the efforts to establish a food supply organization for Poland and to provide for Belgian relief.

Earlier in the war German soldiers were permitted, in addition to the regulation quantities of food sent by field post, to take with them when furloughed as much as they could carry. Stories of soldiers breaking down before reaching the railway station under the weight of their packages, and of the frequency of furloughs taken by officers to carry food to their families, were staple jokes at the front. Vast quantities of provisions are thus drained from the occupied regions, notwithstanding the assurances of the Government that no food is taken from them to Germany.

COMMODITIES PRICES.

Most of the Revisions During the Week Were Advances.

A drop in flour was the only foodstuff decline of importance that was shown this week by Dun's wholesale price list. While the list did not show so many changes as that of last week, the tendency was strongly upward. Forty-six of the sixty-six revisions shown this week were advances, while in a total of seventy-five changes last week only forty-five were upward.

The following list gives the minimum wholesale prices quoted on thirty-eight standard commodities this week at this city, unless otherwise specified. They are corrected to yesterday, and with them are given comparative prices for last week and the corresponding week last year:

Spring patent flour declined 20 cents a barrel here during the week, while the drop in Spring clear was 35 cents. The Winter grades were not quoted on. At Chicago mess pork was actually unchanged, and short ribs nominally so. Advances occurred in live beef, hogs, and sheep, and prime lard also was higher. Bacon advanced here.

The price situation in the dairy products was again unsettled. Advances occurred in the best grades of both butter and cheese, while the poorer grades were cheaper. In the eggs, on the other hand, there were sharp advances. Nearby fancies moved up 3 cents a dozen as compared with last week, and the best Westerns went up 4.

Neither the fresh nor the dried fruits in the lists showed change one way or the other, and the only vegetable price revisions indicated were rises in choice white and choice red kidney beans. After one week of firmness, the price of No. 7 Rio coffee again hit the toboggan, but Santos No. 4 did not change. There were no fluctuations in the teas, nor in the sugars either. In the spices the only changes consisted of advances in mace and in white and black Singapore pepper.

In the miscellaneous markets a rise in tallow contrasted with declines in hemp and Brazilian crude rubber. Leathers were generally unchanged at the levels reached in the recent advance. In the hides there were no advances, but the declines were confined to No. 1 heavy cow and No. 1 buff stock. In the grains a drop in malt was offset by advances in corn, oats, rye, prime timothy hay and No. 2 long straw.

The metals list showed only one change outside of the fluctuations in the minor ones. This was a drop in refined iron bars at Philadelphia. In the minor metals ordinary antimony declined, and foundry coke, pig aluminium, in ton lots, spelter, and tin all advanced. The combined lists for drugs, chemicals, dyestuffs, and oils showed 17 advances and but 5 declines. The only feature was the general strength shown by the soda products, all of which, save soda benzoate, are now higher than they were at this time in 1916.

In the paper list there was a rise shown in No. 2 jute wrapping stock, against a decline in M. F. book paper. The textiles, aside from burlaps and cottons, did not produce much of interest during the week. Burlaps rose to unprecedented levels here as a result of active buying of the small supplies available and bullish news from the primary markets. A strong market for the staple and good buying brought higher prices to several constructions of gray print cloths and brown sheetings. Prices on finished cottons did not vary much through the week.

Opera Hats Back Again.

The collapsible opera hat, so long taboo by the dictates of fashion, has been coming back again for evening wear. A large number of sales have been recorded this Fall, to young and old men alike, of this practical hat for evening wear. Its return to popularity will be welcomed by those who have put a newly pressed silk hat under a seat in the theatre only to take it out a complete wreck.

Are Copying the British Now.

Apparently, having exhausted the various branches of the American arms as models for the designing of young boys' clothing, makers of these goods are now turning their attention to the British. The result is that already little uniforms are being seen that parallel those of the latter. Not only are they as resplendent in the showing of shiny brass buttons as the uniforms of King George's men are, but some of them are finished off with small-sized copies of the Sam Browne belt. Still further than this are seen copies of the field service gilt uniforms of some of the Canadian Highlanders. These copies are made of the same kind of material as the uniforms with trousers and have the same array of brass buttons.

Cotton Hose Not Wanted.

The demand for misses' and ladies' mercerized cotton hosiery has been very slack during the last month or so, according to reports from the local trade. Silk hose, however, has been actively sought, though the market has had only a limited supply to offer. Several large houses are said to be in the market for silk hose for Spring, but so far have been unable to find a mill that was willing to take business so far ahead. The labor situation in the mills, from all accounts, seems to be going from bad to worse, with more girls every day going into some other industry at higher wages. What the outcome of it all will be no one can predict, and mills, apparently, do not care to be loaded down with orders which it might be impossible to fill later on at present prices.

Complaints About Women's Shoes.

A complaint about women's shoes which has been heard frequently this year, according to the head of one of the largest local department stores, is that the stitching, even in some of the finest grades, is poor and has ripped out. "With shoes at their present prices," says this authority, "I think such a thing as this unpardonable. When a woman pays $16 or $18 for a pair of shoes, she naturally thinks she is getting an article that is first class in every respect. She does not expect the shoes to fall apart. When they do, it not only casts discredit on the maker, but it reflects on the store as well, even though a perfectly satisfactory adjustment is made. If shoe people can't turn out good shoes at these prices, they ought to go out of business."

Gray Goods Buyers Still Active.

Low-count printcloths were among the features of the business put through in the local gray goods market yesterday. Large early 1918 delivery sales of 38½-inch 44-40s were reported at 7¼ cents, with several houses now asking an eighth more for them. For 38½-inch 48 squares and 44 squares, both of which were wanted for shipment early next year, the prices paid were 8⅝ and 7⅞ cents, respectively. March-April shipments of 39-inch 56-44s were sold at 8⅞ cents, with business in spots of the same construction done at 9 cents. Spot 39-inch 68-72s again brought 12½ cents, but it is thought that the supply of them which is still available at that price is small. The general asking price for spot 38½-inch 64-60s is 11½ cents, and it is said that sales have been made in certain quarters at that price. For delivery through the first quarter of 1918 it is necessary to pay at least 11 cents for them. Among the day's business in sheetings were further sales of 56-60 four-yards at 13¾ cents, and of 48-square four-yards at 13¼ cents. Spot printcloth prices were:

Bustle Gains Approval.

The bustle effect, which created so much adverse criticism at the opening of the Fall season, is said to be gaining momentum as the season progresses. More and more calls for this feature of the Fall styles are said to be coming in from many widely separated sections. While its popularity in suits is not so pronounced, it is used extensively in various forms in dresses for afternoon wear of the medium and higher priced lines. In this city, Boston, and Chicago it is said to be attracting particular attention from young women with slender figures, both tall and medium height, and its introduction this Fall is no longer looked upon by most members of the trade as a failure.

Fits Toys to the Season.

It is not difficult for retailers of toys to do business all the year around, according to an executive of a store here that has solved the problem. Up until a few years ago, he said yesterday, that store, in common with the others, did about 50 per cent. of its year's business in December alone. This handicap has been offset, though December continues to be the biggest single month for sales in the whole year, by fiting the toys to the season. Instead of stocking up with toys that could be bought at one time just as well as another, it went in for all kinds of baseball stuff in the Spring, for instance, and football equipment in the Fall. The show windows were used to great advantage in stimulating the demand, entire "trims" being given sometimes to one lot of associated and seasonable playthings.

Veils Are Moving Well Here.

From the local trade in veils and veilings come reports telling of the continuance of good business. Goods having striking patterns in scroll effects are doing very well, and designs making use of good-sized "coin spots" of velvet also are selling. Other active numbers include applique effects in chenille and silk, together with embroidered lace veils in all-over patterns, mostly in floral effects of a single motif. Other good sellers include novel effects in chiffon bordered veils, in self and contrasting colors, and large veils of Chantilly and net. Russian mesh seems to be coming back to favor, while filet and hexagon meshes are being taken freely in scroll and hand-run effects. Some of the latter show the use of flower and leaf patterns combined with small velvet spots. The leading colors in veils for street wear include blue, fawn, black and taupe.

Some Spring Coats Ready.

A number of coat manufacturers in the local women's ready-to-wear industry have gotten out their early Spring lines, and already, it is said, have booked a fair volume of orders considering the time of the year. Some new and attractive arrangements of materials are introduced, though, generally speaking, outside of these few details, style changes are small. Silk jersey has been used extensively in several lines, and the same weave in wool has also a prominent place. While brilliant colors do not predominate, they are by no means neglected. Khaki color, as was to be expected, is much in evidence, and in these garments, as in a number of others, military effects have been very attractively worked out.

ASK RATE RISE SANCTION.

Express Companies Present Grievances to Traffic League.

Some of the difficulties confronting express companies in doing business at this time were discussed yesterday at the closing session of the annual meeting of the National Industrial Traffic League, held at the Waldorf. G. M. Freer, President of the league, presided.

W. H. Chandler, Chairman of the Express Committee, reported that he had received a petition from the express companies asking the league to indorse a 10 per cent. increase. The petition set forth that the companies were operating at a loss, as the Government had taken over so much of their equipment. Chairman Chandler said that personally he thought it not unreasonable to agree to this advance for the period of the war, but to terminate when the war ends. No action was taken by the league.

Complaint was made that the express companies in some instances were unable to supply space for shipments. E. D. Wilson said the Government had recently taken over forty express cars and filled them with blankets for a cantonment. He thought box cars could have been used, thereby expediting the movement of private express shipments. Mr. Wilson asked the league to bring the matter to the attention of the Government authorities. F. B. Montgomery of the International Harvester Company opposed such action and said the Government knew what it was doing, and that any action along the suggested line would be in bad taste. Chairman Chandler said many traffic men were now in the employ of the Government, and added that they could be relied upon to do all that was possible to prevent undue interference with private business.

A good deal of time was devoted to a discussion regarding the alleged dilatory methods of express companies in settling claims. According to E. D. Wilson, it was a common practice to hold up claims until the claimant's patience became exhausted.

The remainder of the meeting was given over to the reading of reports of a routine character. The place and date for the Spring meeting was left in the hands of the Executive Committee. In the afternoon the members of the league and others were guests of the Erie Railroad for a trip around the harbor.

Stocks Lead in Late Fall Collars.

Stocks and jabots are easily the leading items in the late Fall demand for women's neckwear. The high-priced favorites of this type show much use of attractive lace and net combinations. Georgette collars, though still good, are said to be losing some ground. For wear with suits there is a growing demand for collars of whole broadcloth or of white serge. Several varieties of collars make use of embroidery, and many are finished off with fine braid of silk floss. Picot edges, pipings, &c., are also used to give an "air" to the collars they decorate. The usual run of staple collars, sailor, flat, rolling, reversible, &c., are selling, as are neat effects in upstanding collars with openings in the front. One-piece effects in collars and yokes are good, too. As for style leadership, tailored and fancy collars are vying with each other. Next to white, the darked shades are most in demand, though some bright colors are seen.

FAVOR SLOW CHANGE IN WAR'S INDUSTRIES

Washington Officials' Plan for Gradual Readjustment on Percentage Basis.

TO NAME A SPECIAL BOARD

No Arbitrary Classification of the Essential or Non-Essential Lines of Business.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Conferences were begun today to determine the extent to which non-essential industries must be curtailed to aid in carrying forward the Government's war program, and the manner in which such a step can be accomplished without radical disturbing the nation's business. A Bureau of Manufacturing Resources probably will be organized at once under the War Industries Board to obtain the fullest data on which decisions will be made.

The plan now under consideration, it is understood, will provide for curtailment of the non-essentials on a percentage basis, thus bringing about a gradual readjustment which would not cause industrial upheaval. This would mean a gradual development of the resources of the country for war purposes—a program which would be extended as the demands increased.

As far as possible, it is the intention of the Government to use the full capacity of the manufactories throughout the country, and furnish war contracts where curtailment of other products is directed. In the jewelry business thousands of skilled workmen, it is said, may be called upon to turn out delicate surgical instruments which will be required in great quantities.

That is but one instance, and the new bureau will determine to just what extent piano, furniture, automobile, and hundreds of other factories can be devoted directly to war work. By a gradual process it is believed the war machinery of the country could be built up to a high point of efficiency without throwing employes out of work or seriously disturbing the financial situation.

No Arbitrary Classification.

It was stated authentically that the council would make no arbitrary classification of industries as necessary and unnecessary, but would let the question of curtailment be decided by the available supply of raw materials, coal, and transportation facilities. To characterize any business as non-essential, it was pointed out, might foster an unfair public sentiment against a legitimate trade, highly desirable in peace times, and jeopardize its credit. When the demands of the army and the demands of an industry conflict the industry must give way, but it is expected that complete co-operation with the Government will be given by all, and that the new Bureau of Manufacturing Resources will be able to apportion war contracts in some measure to every factory deprived of its usual work.

The question of housing new workers in cities where living quarters are inadequate will be placed before Congress next month, in requests for appropriations to carry out the recommendations of the Defense Council's Commission on Housing, which reported that Government aid was the only solution of the question. At present, advances on contracts are being made to manufacturers who show that without additional housing facilities Government work cannot be carried on.

Plans for the proper distribution of labor to obtain the highest efficiency and maximum output of essentials will be worked out in co-operation with the Department of Labor and officials of the American Federation of Labor. The industrial rights of the workmen and their comfort and general welfare will be carefully considered and every effort will be made to bring about a situation which will best attend the Government needs and win the hearty co-operation of labor leaders and the rank and file of the workingmen.

In all of the matters tending to place the country on a broad war basis there will be the closest co-operation with the interests involved. The War Industries Board of the Council of National Defense, the Priority Board, the Food Administration, the Fuel Administration, and the Railroads War Board will be among the bodies engaged in the consideration of the problems.

At present the Railroads War Board is endeavoring to aid the Government officials to obtain the highest efficiency in transportation in face of the car shortage, and many requests for the movement of shipments where the war activities are not directly involved have been referred voluntarily to the War Industries Board and the Priority Board for a decision. In this manner the Government has been kept in close touch with the general railroad situation, and serious congestion and delay have been averted in many instances.

Economy in Coal Discussed.

The movement of coal is one of the pressing of the present problems, and Dr. H. A. Garfield, the Fuel Administrator, was in conference today with the War Industries Board in connection with the question of curtailment of supplies in some directions. This matter also will be worked out with the greatest care.

Officials explained today that there was no reason for alarm in any quarter because of the steps proposed, as ample warning would be given before steps which might have far-reaching consequence would be taken. There will be no action which will shut down factories over night or throw employes out of work. On the other hand, the entire scheme is being taken up with the object in view of bringing about the necessary adjustments in a manner that will leave business on its present sound basis. There will be an increasing rather than a decreasing demand for labor.

The co-operation of industries throughout the country is sought by the officials in any program which may be put gradually into effect. It is considered highly essential that the financial condition of the country be kept thoroughly sound, with future Liberty Loans to be subscribed for, and other unusual demands in sight.

A long list of non-essential commodities in which it is felt shipments should be curtailed to lessen the burden of the railroads has been submitted by the Railroads War Board to the War Industries Board, but no definite information was obtainable today concerning individual recommendations made. This information will be withheld, it is understood, pending final decisions and the completion of the plans for gradual readjustment.

1,000 LAWYERS VOLUNTEER.

Boards That Will Classify Men of Draft Age Not to Lack Advice.

More than 1,000 New York lawyers have volunteered their services to the Government to aid in carrying into effect the new selective draft regulations, which among other things will call for the classification of every man of draft age in New York City who is not now in the active service of the United States. The above statement was made yesterday by Daniel W. Blumenthal of the Judges and Lawyers' War Committee of the Bar Association, of which Henry W. Taft is the Chairman, who received the following telegram from Provost Marshal General Crowder last night:

> Data concerning legal advisory boards being mailed to you. All lawyers and Judges should tender their services to the Governor who has entire supervision of this matter. CROWDER.

The average number of lawyers who are volunteering to aid the Government is now about 200 daily. Judges of the Supreme Court, County, City, and Municipal Courts have also volunteered to act in advisory capacities to the boards which will be in charge of the work of classifying New York City's men of draft age. The regulations which will govern the classification will be made public by General Crowder within a few days.

SPEEDS SAVINGS CAMPAIGN

Movement to be Promoted in Every State—Appeal to Children to Invest Pennies.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—The district and State directors of the war savings certificate campaign decided tonight to inaugurate a general plan of enlisting co-operation and interest in the plan to convert the small savings of the American people into a war asset by holding conventions in every State in the Union. The first conventions will be held in New England, New York, and New Jersey Nov. 20, and others will follow in close succession. These conventions will choose publicity managers and other officials, and will make arrangements for conducting the campaigns in the States.

The directors called in a body on President Wilson at the White House today and were presented to him by Secretary McAdoo. With the delegation were Assistant Secretaries Rowe, Moyle, and Leffinwell, and Frank A. Vanderlip, President of the National City Bank of New York, Chairman of the War Savings Committee. The President spoke in hearty commendation of the campaign.

Time to Check Waste, Wilson Says.

"I suppose not many fortunate by-products can come of a war," said President Wilson, "but if this country can learn something about saving out of the war, it will be worth the cost of the war; I mean the literal cost of it in money and resources.

"I suppose we have several times over wasted more than we are about now to spend. We have not known that there was any limit to our resources; we are now finding out that there may be if we are not careful.

"One of the most interesting things to me about the recent loans that have been floated is the extraordinarily large number of persons who have invested. The number of investors in securities before these loans were made was comparatively small, remarkably small, considering our population and its wealth, and now it has swelled to millions—to almost one-tenth, I believe, of the population of the country.

"That is an extraordinary circumstance, and it may have some very fortunate results. But the thing that you are undertaking is more intensive and in a sense more important still. It is the matter of small savings, the detailed thought of the matter of preventing waste and managing some kind of accumulation from day to day, that will fall to you, and I want to say that I for one warmly appreciate the number of volunteers of capacity and experience who are coming to our assistance at this time and doing things as interesting and important as this."

Samples of the new savings certificates are being printed to be sent out to banks, committees, and various officials who are interested in the scheme. They are in the style of a Government bond and carry savings tickets, larger somewhat than ordinary bond coupons, each bearing a handsome design of the liberty torch.

Money in Toy Banks Wanted.

The Director of the Mint, Raymond T. Baker, issued today, in line with the activities of the Savings Committee, an appeal to children all over the country who have savings banks to stop hoarding money at home and let their pennies get back into circulation by buying the war-saving certificates.

"The time has come for the passing of the penny bank," said Mr. Baker. "These receptacles, which are to be found in half the homes of America, will be made superfluous by the issuance by the Government beginning Dec. 2 of war-savings certificates, war-saving stamps, and thrift stamps. Investment in them may begin at 25 cents.

"The entrance of the United States into the European war has enhanced the need for increased quantities of almost every known commodity. The penny is no exception. The United States Government is in need of all the pennies, nickels, dimes, and other subsidiary coins that can be drawn into circulation. Millions of dollars in these minor coins are now idle in toy banks, coin savers, and other small receptacles used chiefly by children to aid in accumulating savings.

"The War Revenue act has brought a tremendously increased need for small coins, especially pennies. Taxes, designed to help win the war, must be collected in small amounts, frequently made up of odd cents, on all sorts of amusements, methods of communication, and travel, and by many other means. The increased demand for these small coins is obvious. The United States Mints are working twenty-four hours a day and Sundays in an effort to supply the demand. For this reason the co-operation of the American people in releasing from private hoards all possible minor coin is especially urged.

"The saving of small coins is a thrifty habit by no means reprehensible, but a truer method of accomplishing thrift and at the same time aiding the United States Government has been provided through the issuance of war savings certificates and war savings stamps. The small coins formerly hidden away in toy banks may be put into these obligations of the United States. A handful of small coins permitted to remain in a slotted box yields no more at the end of a period when it is hidden away. A handful of coins put into certificates or stamps brings the owner interest in the maximum amount of 4 per cent., compounded quarterly.

"Enough small coins should be shaken out of the toy banks of the country to relieve the present stringency of this form of money."

5,000 WOMEN ON RAILROAD.

In Many Jobs on Pennsylvania Lines East of Pittsburgh.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 16.—Approximately 30 per cent. of the entire force of employes of the Pennsylvania Railroad lines east of Pittsburgh are women, according to a report of the General Manager. All told, there are slightly in excess of 5,000 women on the payroll today, as compared with 1,956 June 1.

These women are holding all kinds of jobs, from train dispatcher to section hand, the list including signal tower operators, station cleaners, drafting, station agents, machinists, watchers at dangerous crossings, drawbridge attendants, clerks, stenographers, and telegraph and telephone operators.

Meat Prices Up 62 Per Cent. in Year

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Prices of meat animals—hogs, cattle, sheep, and chickens—were 62.2 per cent. higher on Oct. 15 than a year ago, 87.3 per cent. higher than two years ago, and 88.1 per cent. higher than the average of the last seven years on that date, the Department of Agriculture announced today. Prices increased 1.9 per cent. from Sept. 15 to Oct. 15, compared with an increase of 1.4 per cent. in the same period in the last seven years.

Ban on Free Lunch in Boston.

BOSTON, Nov. 16.—The Boston License Board, at the suggestion of the National Food Administration, today notified saloon proprietors to eliminate free lunches. Clams, chowder, and a variety of sea food, plentiful here, were withdrawn from the counters of many saloons when war-time economy was first agitated, but the board's order will apply also to establishments along the waterfront and in manufacturing districts, which have continued to serve free meals with drinks.

DANES APPORTION BUTTER.

Plan to Divide the Surplus Between Britain and Germany.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 16.—The Danish Government has before Parliament a bill which provides for the continuation of the export of a certain quantity of butter, while adopting the principle that the needs of the home population must be considered first and before the maintenance of the export butter trade upon its regular scale.

The bill provides for the reservation of enough butter to furnish a half pound ration weekly, or about 1,700,000 pounds weekly, before any is sold for export. This will consume between 60 and 70 per cent. of the estimated production of butter this Winter on the basis of the figures furnished by the Government.

It is expected that 700,000 to 800,000 pounds will be available for export weekly, to be divided, if the present arrangements are continued, between Germany and England, with small quantities also to Norway and Sweden, although at present exports to England are suspended owing to the adoption of a maximum price for butter in England. Danish producers say they cannot sell at the price, which is well below that now obtained, and the English exports are now being placed in storage here pending the reaching of an agreement.

The Government's rationing bill provides that the butter ration must be sold to consumers at less than it will be sold to retailers. The difference will be met partly by the State and partly from excess profits on butter sold for export or to restaurants and bakeries. The burden upon the Treasury will be from 30,000,000 to 60,000,000 crowns, a considerable part of which the Government plans to meet by a heavy excise tax on whisky.

The Food Commission, which prepared the butter bill, will submit later a bill for the rationing of pork and lard in order to insure a fair distribution of foods rich in fats and to provide the necessary quantity of this element of diet for each person.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

One of the largest deals closed in the Times Square section for some time has practically been completed, and will bring a prominent retailer, as tenant, to the three-story building at the southwest corner of Broadway and Fiftieth Street.

The Regal Shoe Company has finished negotiations for the lease of this property from John E. Dietz for a twenty-one year term, with renewal privileges, at a rental aggregating about $1,500,000.

The building has a frontage of 50 feet on Broadway, and measures 77 feet on the street. It will be altered to meet the requirements of the lessee. Harris & Vaughn negotiated the lease.

Hebrew School to Enlarge.

The Talmud Torah Association, now occupying the property at 147 East Broadway, has purchased from Dr. Bernard Lazarus the four-story tenement adjoining, at 145, on a lot 25 by 75. The newly acquired parcel will be altered at a cost of about $8,000 for the school requirements of the buyer, and the two buildings will be connected.

The combined site, which measures 50 by 100 feet, will eventually be improved with a modern school building. The brokers in the sale were Arthur A. Goldstein and Peter P. Cappell.

The reported consideration is $200,000. Harry B. Cutner negotiated the sale. The sellers acquired the site in 1909 from Montague Aaron and others, and four years later erected the garage.

Squares Out Site.

Edward H. Van Ingen has purchased from the Charlotte Mount estate, the four-story building at 4 West Twenty-first Street, on a lot 21.6 by 92, adjoining the Mohawk Building, at the southwest corner of Fifth Avenue and Twenty-first Street, which he also owns.

Horace S. Ely & Company and the Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Company, were the brokers in the sale. Mr. Van Ingen owns the three westerly houses at 6, 8 and 10, and now controls a frontage on Twenty-first street of 289 feet. He has announced no plans for reimproving the site.

Key to Events of the Day

The New York Times Index is a perfect digest of the year's events—a comprehensive reference to all newspapers. The Index is acknowledged to be as necessary in every library as an almanac, and it is the more valuable in that it has a permanent value as a work of reference. The Index points the way to the source of all information—the newspapers—and saves time, trouble and expense for those to whom research is a part of every day's activities. The Times Index is issued in quarterly volumes of more than 400 pages of alphabetically arranged references and cross references to the skeletons of over one hundred thousand of the year's events. Testimonials from bank Presidents, editors, lawyers, librarians, teachers, trade associations, insurance and steamship companies and hundreds of others.

Memorial Tablet on Bridge at Broadway and 230th Street

Have you ever considered

Why BROADWAY at 34th St., at 42nd St., at 59th St., are such great traffic centers?

The reason is that several main thoroughfares meet at these points

The traffic converges and is distributed
That is the reason that at these centers
Property is the most valuable in the city.

To-day, just as for generations,
Broadway at 230th & 231st St. (Kingsbridge)
Is a great traffic center.

As this section grows
This must become one of the Greatest traffic centers in the city.

RECEIVER IS NAMED IN DWIGGINS THEFT

Life Insurance Officials Waiting for Agent's Arrival Here Before Taking Action.

GRAND JURY HEARS FACTS

Man Who Confessed to Liberty Loan Fraud Tried to Buy Stock Exchange Seat, Associate Says.

In order to conserve as many as possible of the assets of Elmer Dwiggins, the agent of the Bankers' Life Insurance Company, who has confessed to defrauding Liberty Loan subscribers out of thousands of dollars collected by him, an involuntary petition of bankruptcy was filed against him yesterday by Archibald M. Palmer of 320 Broadway, acting for three of Dwiggins's Liberty Loan creditors, Theodore J. Hetzer, Mark Oppenheim, and Dorothy Spero. Judge Augustus M. Hand of the Federal Court appointed Francis J. Kohlman, receiver in bankruptcy for Dwiggins, fixing the latter's bond at $1,000. Mr. Palmer said yesterday that Mr. Kohlman and himself would await Dwiggins's appearance for a statement from him regarding his assets and liabilities before making any assertions about the case.

In addition to the receiver and the thousands of persons who stand to lose the money which they paid every week to Dwiggins in installments for Liberty bonds, both the Federal and the County District Attorney are awaiting the life insurance agent. Also, officials of the Bankers' Life, here from Des Moines, are anxious for a conversation with their former employe before they announce what action the company is going to take in regard to backing up the promises made by their agent. It was learned yesterday that following a hastily summoned Directors' meeting in Des Moines to consider the report sent the company by I. M. Earle, Vice President and general counsel, George Kuhns, President, and Simon Cassidy, Treasurer, of the company have started for New York. It is understood that they with Mr. Earle are empowered to take any action they see fit toward assuming liability for the company in the case of the defrauded investors.

Mr. Earle, Elizabeth Robinson of 182 West Eightieth Street, and Miss Isabel Lightbody of the same address were summoned by Assistant District Attorney Bohan yesterday to tell the Grand Jury what they knew about Dwiggins's activities. Miss Robinson bought a $100 bond from the agent and paid for it, but never received it, she said. Miss Lightbody bought two bonds for $50 each, paying half of the money on each, and she has never received a bond. Action by the Grand Jury was postponed until Monday.

It was said by one of Dwiggins's old associates that in October of this year the agent had tried to buy a seat on the New York Stock Exchange. He had summoned his son from Milwaukee, who is the Bankers' Life agent there, and tried to persuade him to go into the bond business with him. Dwiggins's son repudiated his father at the time, it was said, and left here after a quarrel. At the time he tried to purchase the seat on the Exchange Dwiggins had no visible assets except his earnings from the insurance company of about $15,000 a year.

In his confession made in Montgomery on Thursday the agent said the Bankers' Life Company would owe him $40,000 on renewals of insurance. Officials of the company yesterday were not so sure of this fact. They contended that Dwiggins had violated his contract with them. Dwiggins is on his way north from Montgomery in custody of two Post Office Inspectors. He is expected here late today.

AID FOR SOLDIERS' HOME.

About $10,000 was realized from the Fête des Allies, which was held yesterday on the roof of the Waldorf-Astoria under the auspices of the National Emergency Relief Society for the benefit of the home which is to be established for the soldiers and sailors of the allied armies, including men in the United States services, when in the city. George C. Boldt loaned the entire roof for the occasion. There were various booths for the sale of useful and fancy articles, and many valuable gifts were sold at auction.

A keen interest has been shown in the affair, since it was learned that more than 400 enlisted men of the army slept in the Grand Central Station last week when on leave here, and Governor and Mrs. Whitman came down from Albany for the occasion, attending the fête in the evening.

Artists of the Metropolitan Opera House and Broadway productions appeared on the program, including Eleanor di Cisneros, Mme. Gana Walska, Willa Holt Wakefield, Grace La Rue, Amparita Farrar, Hortense Dorvall, Anna Wheaton, Raymond Hitchcock, San Ash, Ed Wynne, the Misses Duncan, Mlle. Desiree Lubowska, Bror Meyer, and Emmy Bergfeldt, who appeared in the skating carnival with Hilda Ruckerts, Harry Paulsen, and Halla Kosloff.

Among the members of the National Emergency Relief who were interested in the fête were Mrs. William Cummings Story, Mrs. Simon Baruch, Mrs. Clifford T. McAllister, Mrs. Rolfe E. Bolling, Mrs. Theodore Pettigrew, Mrs. Charles L. Goldsborough, Mrs. R. D. Sheldon, Mrs. Eugene Sayer and Mrs. A. T. Baldwin.

CHANGE IN CONTROL OF MARSHALL FIELD & CO.

Estate Withdrawn From Share in Management—Takes Over All Preferred Stock.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 16.—John Shedd, President of Marshall Field & Co., today announced plans for certain readjustments in that firm. Under the arrangement the estate of Marshall Field will be connected with the firm only to the extent of holding a considerable part of the preferred stock.

The common stock, under the new plan, will be owned by persons actively engaged in the management of the business. In his statement Mr. Shedd announced that Stanley Field has retired from active participation in the management of the business.

"For more than a year," says the statement, "the trustees of the estate of Marshall Field have been working with Mr. James Simpson, Mr. Stanley Field, and myself on a plan by which the estate should withdraw from participation in the business except through ownership of preferred stock bearing a fixed return.

"This plan has now become operative, and in carrying it out the par value of the shares of stock has been diminished from $100 a share to $10 a share, and the number of shares increased from 60,000 to 600,000 shares, the total amount of the capital stock of the corporation remaining unchanged. The papers necessary under the statute to effect this change have been filed at Springfield.

"One-half of the shares of stock are now preferred and one-half common. The preferred stock has all been taken by the estate of Marshall Field, myself, and Mr. Stanley Field.

"The trustees of the estate of Marshall Field have set apart a considerable share of the preferred stock held by them, in which employes who are not owners of common stock will be able to invest their savings under especially favorable conditions. In addition to the regular dividends which the preferred stock pays, Marshall Field & Co. will pay $2 a share per annum on the preferred stock which is held by its employes under the plan, so that they will receive a return of 9 per cent. upon their investment.

"Stanley Field retires from active participation in the management of the business. Upon his return from France, where he is now serving as manager of the Purchasing Department of the American Red Cross, he will devote his time to the management of his private affairs and in the discharge of his duties as trustee of his father's estate and as President of the Field Museum. James Simpson will become First Vice President and John McKinley, Second Vice President; Fred H. Reynolds, Treasurer, and Kersey C. Reed, Secretary."

RAILROADS HALT MEDIATOR'S PLAN FOR ARBITRATION

NOW THE PRESIDENT'S TASK

Congress May Also Take Hand to Avert General Brotherhood Strike This Year.

UNION MEN TO SEE WILSON

Committee Representing Companies Says It Has No Power to Give Pledge on Pay Question.

Judge William L. Chambers, Commissioner of the United States Board of Mediation and Conciliation, met with a setback yesterday in his effort to get the railroads on record as agreeing to the arbitration of the new demands of the railway brotherhoods for more wages before the heads of the unions meet the President at the White House next Thursday. He came to New York Friday night to confer yesterday with the leaders of the National Conference Committee of the Railways, which represented all the carriers in the eight-hour negotiations. This committee has been superseded by the Commission of Eight, made up of members of the original committee, and headed by Elisha Lee, General Manager of the Pennsylvania, who was head of the Conference Committee, which is concluding the work of making eight-hour labor contracts with the brotherhoods.

Judge Chambers met Mr. Lee and other members of the commission yesterday morning, and after the conference left for Washington. No formal statement of what took place was forthcoming from either the Board of Mediation or the Conference Committee, but it can be stated that Mr. Lee and the other railroad managers told Judge Chambers that their organization had been created for the purpose of representing all the railroads in the eight-hour negotiations, and that it had no power beyond the limitations of that proposition. Therefore, the managers told Judge Chambers, they had no power to pledge the railroads to the arbitration of the new demands of the brotherhoods for increases in wages totaling $100,000,000 a year.

It was suggested to Judge Chambers that, inasmuch as there was no one body authorized to speak for the railroads on the new wage demands, he confer with the Railroads' War Board in Washington, of which Fairfax Harrison, President of the Southern Railway, is the Chairman. Stating that they had no intention of shirking responsibility, the managers suggested that, inasmuch as there had been conferred upon the Railroads' War Board plenary powers over the railroads of the country during the war, that body would be most likely of all railway organizations to assume the responsibility of saying what the attitude of the railways may be.

The President's Proposal.

In a letter which was presented to the brotherhood leaders in Cleveland ten days ago the President suggested both mediation and arbitration of the new wage demands. The brotherhoods accepted mediation, but would not pledge themselves to arbitration. It is understood that when the President meets them next Thursday he will discuss with the labor leaders the proposal to allow a board to hear and determine the settlement of their new demands. It was the purpose of Judge Chambers to have the railroads on record before the President's conference with the brotherhood leaders.

There is strong indication that as the eight-hour mixup was settled by Congress in the enactment of the Adamson law the new wage demands will come on the floor of Congress. The brotherhood vote on whether to submit the demands will be completed Nov. 25, although there is no doubt that the vote will be in the affirmative. The demands will be presented to the railroads on Dec. 1. The brotherhoods have signed an agreement not to take any further action until after the United States Board of Mediation and Conciliation shall have exhausted its efforts to effect a settlement "out of court." Thus, it is practically certain that the matter will still be in the balance when Congress meets and that Congress will have time to take action.

One of the factors in the presentation of the wage demands is the contention of the brotherhood leaders that because of the relatively higher wages paid in many of the industries hundreds of the railroad men are leaving the trains. The danger of the weakening of the force of the carriers will make a strong appeal in Washington.

Favor Increase in Wages.

Railroad managers are not averse to increasing wages if they can get the money to pay them. In fact, many of the managers stated to the Interstate Commerce Commission that in view of the high cost of living some of their employes should get more money. This, however, did not apply to the members of the four brotherhoods, but rather to unorganized workers, who outnumber the trainmen four to one on the list of 2,000,000 railway employes in the United States.

Whether Congress acts on the wage wage demand direct will depend in large measure upon the spirit of conciliation exhibited by both the railroads and the brotherhoods. If the railroads and the brotherhoods cannot get together, and the union leaders proceed to take a strike vote, as it is said to be their program, there is not the slightest doubt that the President or Congress, or both, will step in and wield an iron hand. The taking over of the railroads by the Government is far down the list of things the President would prefer as a solution of the problem, it is understood, and would probably be done only after other methods of settlement had failed.

But the railroad men are confident, and the brotherhood leaders know, that the National Administration will not permit a railroad strike this year, nor will they permit it to get as near as it did in September of 1916, when only an eleventh-hour message from the brotherhood chiefs averted a strike they had called while the President was yet trying to effect a settlement.

Hoover Board Prohibits Combination Food Sales

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Retailers have been directed by the Food Administration to stop combination sales. Many complaints were received that some retailers in New York and other large cities were refusing to sell sugar unless customers purchased from $1 to $2.50 worth of other commodities. The Food Administration tonight issued the following statement:

"On and after this date all combination sales of food commodities are forbidden, with the one exception stated below.

"The sale of one or more food commodities, upon condition that the purchaser shall buy one or more other food commodities from the seller, is regarded as a combination sale within the meaning of this ruling.

"Combination sales frequently result in the sale of more foodstuffs than the particular purchaser would ordinarily buy, and are therefore determined to be a wasteful practice within the meaning of Section 4 of the Food Administration act of Aug. 10, 1917.

"Exception: Pending further notice and as a wheat conservation measure, the dealer may sell sugar in combination with corn meal, at the rate of one pound of sugar with two of corn meal. No other combination will be permitted, nor will any other ratio than that here stated be allowed.

"The dealer shall not sell either the sugar or the corn meal at a price yielding him a profit greater than he has normally enjoyed upon the particular commodity. The dealer is not required to make combination sales of sugar and corn meal, but may do so at his discretion."

HAMPERS MAKING OF OUR BIG GUNS

Need of Tools and Materials Threatens the Government Ordnance Output.

ALLIES STRIPPED MARKET

Lathes and Similar Apparatus Scarce—Labor Trouble in Arsenals a Factor.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—At the moment when it needs all the ordnance possible to obtain from any and all sources, the Government finds itself embarrassed by a situation due in part to the strikes at Government arsenals and in part to shortage of tools, machinery, and material.

The supply of rifles for soldiers is wholly inadequate, with only about 5,000 available for each cantonment or camp of approximately 40,000 men. But according to officials their worries are directed at this time more to field pieces and heavier artillery, with the matter of supplying service revolvers having a place of secondary importance.

The continuing labor troubles at Watervliet and Watertown arsenals threaten to diminish the already inadequate supply, latest advices to the War Department showing no change in the sentiment of the men at the places as a result of the assurance from the Buffalo convention that no strikes would be allowed to interfere with vital Government work.

To this labor handicap has now been added another and even more serious deterrent in the lack of important tools and machinery. The two and a half years of war which had ensued before the entrance of the United States resulted in England and France sweeping the rest of the world for heavy-duty lathes, drills, slotters, and planes used in the making of large guns and of armor plate.

There are comparatively few firms manufacturing these types of machinery, and the stockrooms of these have been bare for more than a year. Moreover, the entire output of these factories has been booked up in many cases until late in 1918. The sub-committee of the Council of National Defense handling priority of contracts has relieved the situation to a slight degree by arranging for the transference of a part of these orders to the United States Government.

Private manufacturers who have contracts with the Government for millions of dollars' worth of ordnance are faced by the necessity of canceling such orders because of their inability to equip their plants and to replace wornout tools. Recently an American firm sought from the War Trade Board permission to export a "heavy duty lathe" measuring 30 inches by 30 inches by 10 feet.

The expert on the board who has jurisdiction over machinery applications told the applicant frankly that no such permit could be granted for the remainder of this year. Moreover, the expert said, if the Government could obtain information as to the source from which the firm hoped to procure this machinery it undoubtedly would be commandeered forthwith. The firm making the application thereupon notified the board that it would be glad to turn the machine over to the Government.

"The output of the Government arsenals at Watervliet and Watertown is being seriously curtailed because of our failure to secure lathes, slotters, and large drill presses," said this official. "If the equipment were in sight, we would proceed immediately to triple the size of certain departments in these arsenals. The skilled labor, hitherto a problem, has been secured, but we cannot find the machinery for this labor to use. If one of the nations allied with us should ask for permission to export a single machine of certain type we would weigh the application most carefully before deciding."

In connection with the question of supplying Government arsenals and other plants with skilled labor, it is learned that the Government now has in active and successful operation employment bureaus scattered throughout the country. These bureaus keep in touch with the classes of workmen who are urgently needed, and advise them of the openings available.

PRAISE FOR WILSON'S MOVE

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

Copyright, 1917, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—When Colonel House arrived in England with his mission he handed the press representatives a statement in general terms of America's position in the war. One of his shipmates tells me the Colonel prepared that statement the first day out, and spent the rest of the voyage paring it down. It was a model of succinctness, and made a hit here.

Having issued this statement of principles the Colonel disappeared under ground, where no doubt he is digging away most strenuously. What he is aiming at or has so far accomplished only Colonel House knows, and he won't tell.

In a general way it would not be a violent inference to say that the Colonel is here as the direct representative of President Wilson on the following basis:

While Mr. Wilson was unwilling to part with his power and delegate it to a central authority permanently sitting in Europe and charged with conducting the war, and while the President realized that it was much easier to enunciate a formula of unity of control than actually to put a theory into operation, he became convinced that a vast betterment was possible in methods which permitted the chaos in Russia and the consequent rout in Italy. It is not unlikely that President Wilson and Lloyd George reached similar conclusions. The latter adopted plain speaking as his remedy, while the former sent his particular friend to Europe to study the situation deeply and quietly, to keep constantly in touch with Washington and submit some plan for closer coordination that a consultation with the European Governments marked out as acceptable and workable.

The President's mission has arrived in stormy times. It seems odd that the quiet man who a few years ago directed a bank in Austin, Texas, should now be the bearer of encouragement and reassurance to all civilized Europe, but it is the literal fact. Never in history has any foreigner come to Europe and found greater acceptance or wielded more power. Behind this super-Ambassador, whose authority and activities are unique, stands the President, now rated in Europe as the world's greatest living statesman, and behind the President stands the country whose measureless resources and unshakeable will are counted a sure shield against the successful sweep of Prussianism.

Ready to Give Us Full Power.

Such are the peculiar circumstances in which Colonel House comes. There is scarcely any plan that he can devise and America will support that won't be accepted. Europe is almost ready to hand America blank power of attorney to finish the war as she deems best, and Europe is convinced that with Japan's friendship and backing, America's participation means the Kaiser's ultimate defeat whatever temporary advantages are gained by superior military organization and concentration of authority.

English opinion is much struck by the admirable organization of the American mission. Instead of putting Colonel House in a position where he would be smothered by details the President freed his hands for dealing with the general situation by sending an exceptionally fitted staff to handle the financial and economic matters, and thus ouild the

Northcliffe Finds King Studies America's War Work

LONDON, Nov. 17.—Lord Northcliffe authorizes The Associated Press to state that in an audience extending over an hour today he heard from the lips of King George at Buckingham Palace his Majesty's view of the present state of the war and the world importance of American intervention.

Speaking of the American mission and of Colonel House, whom he had known for years, King George said that the personnel of the American mission displayed knowledge and alertness indicative of the American character and purpose.

Lord Northcliffe was surprised by the King's intimate knowledge of the possibilities of aircraft production in the United States, and his Majesty's great interest in the Liberty engine and his knowledge of the men who have evolved it and the method by which it has been produced.

Lord Northcliffe was commanded by his Majesty to convey his thanks to the members of the British war mission for their good work, in which they were so consistently assisted by their American colleagues. The King is absolutely confident of complete victory.

SHELLS KILL MORE OF PERSHING MEN

Livelier Artillery Fighting in Their Sector Also Causes Shrapnel Wounds.

COMMENDED FOR BRAVERY

Officers and Others Cited by a French General—Note on Trench Raid.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Friday, Nov. 16, (by The Associated Press.)—The artillery fighting in the sector held by American troops has become even more lively, and there have been further casualties, shrapnel wounding some men in the trenches.

An enemy shell hit an American gun today and caused casualties. Some of the men wounded in the last two days have died.

The American batteries have been firing rapidly in turn. The visibility is beginning better, and it is considered certain that more damage and casualties have been caused in the German lines than the Germans have inflicted on the Americans.

Patrolling continued actively last night.

The American troops witnessed their first aerial encounter today. Three enemy airplanes appeared overhead. Soon all of them except one fled at the approach of five French machines. One of the French outmanoeuvred this German and "got on his tail." The German aviator then bolted. The rattle of machine guns finally died away as the two airplanes disappeared to the west.

The French General commanding the sector has mentioned in the dispatches fifteen American officers and soldiers, including three who were killed, for excellent military qualities and for bravery displayed in the recent trench raid. A note accompanying the citations says that between 8,000 and 10,000 shells were used in the attack, which had been in preparation for three months, down to the finest details.

The results obtained by the enemy were very small, he having been unable to penetrate more than the first line trenches because of the resistance of the American soldiers with rifle and pistol fire and hand-grenades. The enemy had to content itself, the citation continues, with carrying off a few prisoners.

The General in the order mentions the —— Company, commanded by Lieutenant, (name deleted by censor,) as follows:

"On the night of Nov. 2-3 this company, which was in the lines for the first time, met an extremely violent bombardment, despite which it seized arms and offered such stubborn resistance that the enemy, though numerically superior, was obliged to retire."

The General specially cited in the order of the day Corporal James Gresham and Privates Merle D. Hay and Thomas F. Enright, "who died bravely

Soldiers to Guard All Docks and Piers Here; Germans Must Register and Report to Police

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—President Wilson today approved the new regulations governing the treatment of enemy aliens in the United States. The regulations are described as strict enough to prevent further outrages on munitions of war and American industry.

By a proclamation of the President the regulations will be promulgated either on Monday or Tuesday and will become effective at once. The Department of Justice experts, who framed the regulations, are of the opinion that with the enforcement of the new rules the United States will be protected against German activities which have been used to destroy war materials and cripple industry. They say if the new regulations are ineffective the Administration will adopt more drastic means, but the President is reported as being hopeful that such a course may not be necessary.

While the President has approved the regulations in their unfinished form they are complete enough tonight to permit THE TIMES to give some of the essential features as follows:

Docks and piers throughout the country at which vessels of 500 tons or over berth will be made military zones and guarded by soldiers.

Sections of the waterfront in New York and Brooklyn will be made a military zone. Soldiers will be on constant guard in New York City from Forty-third Street on the North River around the Battery and to Twenty-third Street on the East River. The entire front of Brooklyn and practically the entire New Jersey and Staten Island water fronts will be proclaimed military zones.

Regular army soldiers will guard these zones, which will extend several squares from the wharves.

The District of Columbia will be made a military zone. The present regulations provide that no Germans shall be permitted to enter the District, and those now residing in it will be forced to leave.

There will be a registration of enemy aliens throughout the country which may include women. Those who are registered will be compelled to follow the German system of reporting at regular intervals to the police of the precinct in which they live.

Munition plants, Government arsenals, and all industries, the output of which is largely for the Government, are to have military zones thrown around them, and the protection of a military guard.

All permits issued to Germans at the outbreak of the war to live within restricted districts will be revoked, and these Germans must be registered under the new regulations and furnish photographs of themselves to the Government. Each registration card will bear a photograph of the holder.

While there are a number of details in the rules themselves, those referred to are the six chief restrictions, the enforcement of which by soldiers is expected to put a stop to pro-German efforts to cripple war progress.

Kaiser Ascribes Victories in Italy to Judgment of God

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 17.—Advices received here from Berlin say that the German Emperor, in addressing a Brandenburg regiment on the plains near the Tagliamento, recalled these soldiers' share in the battles of Champagne, Verdun and Tarnopol. The Emperor said:

"But you have had a greater task, that of breaking through the Italian front near Flitsch [Plezzo] and Tolmino—a hard task, considering the high mountains and the enemy's immense means of defense. Your success exceeded all calculations so greatly that a higher power than the power of man must have been at work. The enemy's collapse was the judgment of God."

In a later speech the Emperor said: "We are fighting for faithfulness, justice and truth, and it is these that will win."

By The Associated Press.

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS, Nov. 17.—The Austro-Germans today made furious attempts to break the Italian line and crossed the Piave River at two points, but were annihilated at one point and driven back at the other. The Italian lines are holding, but the situation is considered to be grave.

ROME, Nov. 17.—On the northern mountain front and along the lower Piave River, across the plain, the Germans and Austrians yesterday continued with violence their efforts to break the Italian lines. They effected crossings of the Piave at two more points, but were driven back by the Italians with large losses, including nearly 1,000 men who were made prisoners. In the mountains the Italians defended their positions effectively.

From the Asiago Plateau to the sea the enemy, without considering his losses, renewed his attacks on our mountain positions and his attempts on the plain to force the line of the Piave. Our troops with great stubborness offered an effective defense, opposing an enemy numerically stronger and counterattacking him with admirable élan.

Yesterday fighting occurred from Monte Fior to Monte Castelgomberto, at the defensive line of San Marino, at Monte Prassolan and to the north of Quero, along the Rosca Cisa-Monte Cornelle-Piave Valley line.

On the plain between Salettual and Sant' Andrea di Barbarana, (on the lower Piave just above Zenson, at which the Germans effected their first crossing,) the enemy at dawn, under protection of the most violent artillery fire, forced a passage of the river. His troops crossed to the right bank at Follina and at Fagare.

The troops at the former place were destroyed by our artillery and by a sudden attack of the Lecoe Brigade. The survivors, more than 300 men, with ten officers, were made prisoner.

The troops, by far the greater number, which had crossed at the latter place were heavily attacked by the Fifty-fourth Division, whose troops, the Novara Brigade and Third Bersaglieri, excelled in courage. At the end of the day many enemy dead remained on the ground. About 600 men and twenty officers were brought back prisoner and the remainder, driven up to the embankment of the river, was shelled by our artillery, which hindered the return of these troops to the other bank.

At the Zenson loop the enemy is being closed up in a zone more and more restricted.

On the lower reaches of the Piave the Royal Navy, with aircraft, floating, and ground batteries and light forces, is contributing effectively to the defense.

Favored by atmospheric conditions, our airmen during the day profitably carried out work against massed bodies of enemy troops.

Central Powers Hatching Vast Commercial Plans At Cologne Conference to Combat Entente After War

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 17.—Vast projects of far-reaching importance are being discussed, according to the German papers, at a conference at Hamburg of German, Austrian, and Hungarian economic associations. So important are they, says the Cologne Gazette, that in the national interest it is not desirable to disclose more than the bare outlines. This newspaper vouchsafes the information that the discussions have turned on big schemes to procure raw materials after the war and defeat the Entente's plans to isolate the Central Powers commercially. The organization is planned of an all-embracing system of economics in the interest of the Central Powers, including the development of inland waterways from the Elbe to the Danube, probably with German control of the estuary of the Danube.

The rebirth of the Polish mercantile marine is the object of a league founded at Cracow under the auspices of the Foreign Legion. The league has undertaken an active propaganda in Polish trade circles, and the incorporation of a joint stock company to finance the new commercial fleet is contemplated.

GERMANS NOW FOR ANNEXATIONS

Pan German Movement Has Been Encouraged by Successes in Russia and Italy.

STUNG BY WILSON'S SPEECH

His Reference to Alsace-Lorraine Evokes a New Storm of "Never" Protestations.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 16, (Delayed.)—German press and parties, with the exception of the Socialists, are becoming distinctly more annexationist since the victories on the Russian and Italian fronts. There are signs on all sides that Germany is expecting expansion in Europe.

The National Liberal leader, Dr. Gustav Stresemann, recently found it necessary to state the party's attitude regarding annexation, practically disavowing the majority and asserting that even the Center Progressives were not opposed to expansion, thus definitely rejecting the resolution of July 19.

Count zu Reventlow has been indulging in daily shrieking of arguments to show that Germany must have part of the Belgian coast. It will be remembered that the idea of annexing Belgium had been tacitly dropped by most of the press, with the exception of Reventlow and his following for some time before the successes in Russia and Italy.

Von Tirpitz's speech to the "Patriotic Party" may also be considered a sign of the times. He asserted that Germany's military protection against France and England lay in Belgium, as also Germany's one great economic compensation for the tremendous losses she had suffered.

Even Count Czernin, known as the "peace plotter," is said to have revised his policy and is, it appears, no longer so popular in Austria-Hungary as he was. A Socialist recently asked him publicly if he would still stand by the peace policy outlined in his famous Budapest speech, in spite of the events in Russia and Italy, whereupon Czernin answered:

"The policy of the united Central Powers is the only basis upon which the leaders can work for an honorable peace."

President Wilson's statement regarding Alsace-Lorraine in his Buffalo speech and Arthur J. Balfour's statement in the House of Commons have brought about renewed activity and protests that Alsace-Lorraine shall never be the subject of negotiations. The official and usually sedate Kölnische Zeitung even has big headlines, "Never Shall They Have Them." All the papers refer to von Kuchlmann's "No, never!" on the question of Alsace-Lorraine, and Reventlow remarks that evidently Germany's enemies have not taken this statement seriously and are still under the impression that there is a chance of negotiating. The Weser Zeitung of Bremen says that President Wilson is greatly mistaken if he imagines that Germany would discuss the status of Alsace-Lorraine with any other power.

A political leaning towards the right may be expected in the Reichstag, and the humorous weekly, Ulk, has a cartoon of the Vice Chancellor arriving at a Berlin station, with the title: "Turn to the left and bear to the right." The Reichstag will reassemble Nov. 29 when, according to the Frankfurter Zeitung, Count von Hertling may state his program. This paper says that the advantage of this would be that the Government could at once ascertain whether it had the support of the majority, which it needs for new credits.

According to the Berlin Tageblatt, Austria-Hungary is considerably disappointed that the Polish question was suddenly droppped. Leo Lederer, writing to the Tageblatt from Vienna, says that the news of this shelving of the question fell like a bombshell in Vienna, where a settlement was considered a foregone conclusion. The Tageblatt says that it was expected that after the Crown Council held at Bellevue Castle the news of the settlement would be published. It accuses the Lokal-Anzeiger of making an announcement prematurely with the object of putting matters in a wrong light to arouse German opposition. It adds that Count Czernin must have remarked that in parliamentary circles and the press he is no longer so popular since his return to Vienna, where it is apparently thought that he failed in his mission.

WARSHIPS CLASH NEAR HELIGOLAND

Germans Retire at High Speed, with British Vessels After Them.

FEW DETAILS RECEIVED

Heavy Firing, Followed by Great Explosions, Heard Off the Island of Mano.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—British light forces today engaged German light cruisers off Heligoland, the British Admiralty announced today. The German warships retired and the British forces are now chasing them.

The announcement follows:

"British light forces operating in Heligoland Bight have been engaged with German light forces this morning. The only information we have received thus far is that our vessels have engaged enemy light cruisers, that the latter have retired at high speed, and that our vessels are in pursuit."

It is not likely that any details of the naval engagement will be received until the British ships return to port, as it is not customary for them to send wireless reports of their movements and actions while close to the enemy bases.

On a few occasions when British cruisers, which constantly are sweeping the North Sea, have been able to encounter German war vesels the enemy's tactics have been of the hit and run character. They hurry toward home with the purpose of trying to bring the British into their mine fields and, if possible, under fire of the large land guns.

The bare facts embodied in this morning's official bulletin from the British Admiralty indicate that in this engagement the Germans followed their usual tactics.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 17.—Advices from the Island of Mano say that a most violent cannonading was heard from the North Sea between 8:30 and 10 o'clock this morning. At intervals during the firing there were great explosions. Several warships were observed on the horizon.

FRENCH SEEK TO BUILD NONSINKABLE SHIPS

Apply to Our Shipping Board for Leave to Build Twenty of New Type Here.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Interests which it is stated have the sanction of the French Government have made application to the United States Shipping Board to begin the construction of twenty cargo ships of 4,000 tons each which are claimed to be "unsinkable." The formal request was made through the Foundation Company of New York, which asked that materials be supplied for the building of eight or ten of the ships at once, with permission to expand the program if it proved practicable.

It is reported tonight that a favorable decision will be given and that the ships will be constructed in Southern yards. The plans submitted are receiving the careful attention of engineering experts and, if worthy of further consideration, may be used in some of the Government contracts. It was said that word to that effect was cabled to France today.

Huge cylinders to run the entire length of the ships, and which will be reinforced above and below, will be an important part of the construction of the proposed type. These cylinders, divided into compartments, will be used both for carrying cargo and to protect the engines and other internal equipment of the vessels from torpedo attack.

MOSCOW WON BY REBELS

Socialists Seize Control of Finland and Aim at Complete Independence.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—Scattered and belated dispatches from Petrograd give a partial and by no means clear view of the situation in Russia.

It seems to be clearly established, however, that Premier Kerensky is in flight, following the defeat of his forces by the Bolsheviki, when he was virtually deserted by his officers and ordered to surrender to his foes. One report says he made his escape in the disguise of a sailor.

According to a dispatch from Haparanda, Sweden, the defeat of Kerensky came as an immediate consequence of the intervention of Lettish forces, amounting to 30,000 men, on the side of the Maximalists. The power of the Maximalists at Petrograd is said to have been strengthened.

The only dispatch from Petrograd dated today, says:

"Peace has been definitely declared in Moscow, with victory for the Bolsheviki. The White Guard has been disarmed, and likewise the military cadets. Two train loads of the Red Guard en route from Petrograd to Moscow to support of the Bolsheviki soldiers there have been stopped. At the same time railway telegraph reports indicate that the Cossacks are making progress northward, and that the Bolsheviki are in panic in consequence of their near approach.

"It is likewise reported that approximately a corps of mixed troops from the southwest front, intent on putting an end to civil war, are en route to Petrograd and have reached Luga. All reports are impossible of confirmation, as the city is flooded with exaggerated rumors of every description."

A previous Reuter dispatch said:

"A lull is reported in Moscow after fighting that lasted a week and involved most of the city. There was a constant bombardment by cannon and machine guns of the Kremlin and the Town Hall, which are the chief strongholds of the military cadets and other adherents of the Provisional Government. Many shells burst in private houses and started fires. The latest reports say that three-quarters of Moscow are in the hands of the Maximalists."

A Reuter dispatch from Petrograd, dated yesterday, gives this view of the situation in the north:

"Maximalist troops have occupied Gatchina and Premier Kerensky's staff has been arrested. Kerensky fled from arrest, but orders have been issued by wireless for his apprehension.

"The Maximalist Council of Commissioners has proclaimed the right of the different peoples of Russia to the self-determination of their form of government, including separation and the formation of independent States. The Maximalists insist on the inclusion of Nikolai Lenine and Leon Trotzky in any composite Socialist Government, and that their party shall have a majority of the portfolios, including the Foreign, Interior, and Labor Ministries."

Told Kerensky Army Opposed Him.

The report of General Krasnoff, Commander of the Government forces, on the disappearance of Kerensky, coming in a Petrograd dispatch of yesterday's date, says:

"At 3 o'clock on the afternoon of Nov. 1, (old style—Nov. 14 new style,) I called the quarters of the Commander in Chief. He appeared nervous and excited.

"'General,' said he, 'you have betrayed me. Your Cossacks say they will arrest me and give me up to the sailors.'

"'Yes,' I answered; 'such a discussion is now going on. There appears to be little sympathy for you.'

"'Do the officers feel the same way?' he asked.

"'Yes.'

"'What shall I do? Will I have to commit suicide?'

"'If you are an honest man you will go to Petrograd under a white flag and appear before the Revolutionary Committee, where you will negotiate as head of the Government.'

"Kerensky agreed to this and he was promised a guard. He objected to a guard of sailors on the ground that some enemies were among them. He wanted to wait until night, but finally agreed to make the trip by daylight. I went and called Colonel Kishkoff of the Tenth Don Cossacks and ordered him to appoint a guard of eight men. A half hour later the Cossacks told me that Kerensky could not be found. I raised the alarm, thinking that he could not have left Gatchina."

The same dispatch states that M. Bienko, member of the Committee on War and Marine, reported to the Workmen's and Soldiers' Congress that Kerensky had fled previous to this. Bienko said that he talked to the Cossacks and found that they were willing to come to an agreement with the Maxi malists, only the officers being opposed Bibenko denied that Michael Romanoff (the former Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch) was with Kerensky. He denied also that General Kornilioff had escaped from prison.

Story of the Battle.

A dispatch from Petrograd, dated Wednesday, says that the correspondent visited the scene of the fighting that day and was surprised to find aristocratic officers commanding the Bolsheviki.

The Colonel of one of the guard regiments, who is now commander of the Bolsheviki staff and directs operations from a house on a hilltop two miles from Pulkova, described the battle thus to the correspondent:

"The battle began Saturday and continued until Monday night. Kerensky had only 5,000 Cossacks, several hundred military cadets, a considerable quantity of light and heavy artillery, and one armored train. Our forces included four of the famous Petrograd guard regiments together with several battalions of sailors and a large number of the Red Guard.

"Our forces were under a continuous shell fire, and many were wounded. Only a few were killed. At one time a squadron of Kerensky's Cossacks attempted a charge near Tsarskoe Selo. They evidently were not familiar with the fact that officers of veteran regiments were with the Maximalist forces, and, to their surprise, they were met by organized resistance. A heavy volley, which toppled over many of their horses, caused them heavy losses. This was the last active attempt of the Kerensky forces to attack, and afterward they retreated. We now hold Tsarskoe Selo."

One soldier who was captured by the Cossacks and escaped back to his own lines told the correspondent that Kerensky's Cossacks had determined to surrender, unless he was able to reinforce them with "60,000 troops." The Premier, the soldier said, promised to get them.

The correspondent made a tour of the battlefield in a Petrograd droshky, whose driver calmly directed his fat horse over the military road, dodging huge lorries and Red Cross motors homeward bound with wounded. He goes on:

"Members of the Red Guard, coming from the battlefields, walked along the roads singing. Some carried pretzels on their bayonets. These are obtainable in Tsarskoe Selo, but not in Petrograd, where only black bread is sold.

"The droshky passed numerous sentries unquestioned, the soldiers apparently considering the ludicrous conveyance of the correspondent above suspicion. A constant stream of ambulances discharged their cargo of wounded at hospitals along the road just outside the city.

"At Pulkova, where the soldiers, sailors, and the Red Guard shared their soup and black bread and discussed the victory which had startled the inhabitants of the small village, the correspondent was directed to staff headquarters. There was an extraordinary contrast among the occupants of the bare, lamp-lighted room, which apparently had once been the parlor of a farmhouse. Seated about a pine table were some officers, who, though unshaven and battle-worn, showed evidences of their aristocratic training. With them were a few common soldiers, sailors from the Baltic Fleet, and one workman wearing the badge of the Red Guard. These shared their common fare with the correspondent and explained that they were all fighting against Kerensky.

Why They Fought Kerensky.

"A staff Colonel remarked to the correspondent:

"'You probably are surprised to find officers, many of whom fought bravely and were wounded in the campaigns against the Germans, fighting with the Bolsheviki. The truth is we were disappointed with Kerensky, who first destroyed discipline in the army, and we are against him first of all.'

"This attitude was observed at regimental staff quarters, where the officers rejoiced over the victory, but bemoaned the reported decision of the Maximalist Government to reduce all officers to the same pay as privates—7½ rubles a month—and to force them to wear the same uniforms.

"The Bolsheviki troops display an anomalous attitude in obeying the officers without question, but at the same time calling them 'Tavarish' (Comrade) and insisting on equal rights elsewhere than on the battlefield.

"That there was efficiency in the direction of the Maximalist army could be noted by the long motor trains of stores, ambulances, and artillery which were going toward Pulkova tonight as the correspondent's droshky returned to Petrograd."

A dispatch from Petrograd, dated Thursday, carries events along a little further. The correspondent reports that Maximalist headquarters had received from the commander of the Bolsheviki forces this message, dated at Gatchina:

"Gatchina has been occupied by a Finnish regiment. The Cossacks are retiring. It is reported that General Krasnoff and Kerensky's staff have been arrested."

The dispatch goes on:

"Martial law has been declared in Petrograd. The banking situation has improved slightly, and the banks are now open part of each day. Private banks are suffering from a shortage of cash owing to the failure of the State Bank to resume business. The strike of the employes, who refused to work under Bolsheviki Commissioners, has curtailed the operations of that institution. Relief measures are promised by tomorrow.

"The formation of a Democratic Congress of Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates, to which it is proposed that all Socialist Governments shall be responsible, is under discussion by the Railwaymen's Union, the Committee on Safety, Bolsheviki leaders, and the town Duma. According to the plans outlined, the municipal Dumas of Petrograd and Moscow would have a majority representation on the ground that they are the only legally elected bodies. Other elements to be elected to the Congress in the order of their strength would be the army, fleet, and peasants' deputies.

"A telegram to the Railwaymen's Union reports that Moscow is the scene of great disorder, and that hunger riots have occurred there. From other sources it is reported that the Kerensky Government has bombarded the Kremlin, that there has been much looting, and that several buildings have been burned."

Rebels Control Finland.

Advices received in Stockholm from Finland say that the entire country is under the control of the Socialists, who are supported by armed workers and Russian Bolsheviki soldiers. Only the trains that carry provisions are permitted to operate.

The revolutionists have established a strict censorship over the telegraph lines and usurped control of the border stations, recognizing no passports not stamped by Socialist "authorities," and refusing admission at Torneo to any but Finnish or Russian subjects. Even official couriers are not permitted to enter or leave the country.

A Socialist workman has been appointed commandant of Torneo and a former switchman has been put in charge of the Torneo railway station. The streets are patrolled by Socialist workmen bearing arms given them by Russian soldiers.

Bloody conflicts are reported from Abo between the rebels and the law-abiding populace.

The bourgeoisie elements thus far have made only a passive resistance. State employes in general are leaving their posts, which are being taken over by untrained men where any effort is made to carry on the work.

Socialist leaders in Helsingfors, who term themselves the "Revolutionary Committee," have had placards posted in all the Finnish cities, announcing that a general strike has been called to put into effect the law of July 18, passed by the old Diet, declaring the Diet to possess sole power over Finland and aiming at complete independence; to institute an eight-hour day and carry out other reforms demanded by the Socialists. The Diet, elected in September, in which the Socialists lost the majority seats, is declared illegal, and the former Diet, in which the Socialists had a majority, is declared reconvened.

Oskari Tokoi, who has been entrusted with the task of forming an All-Socialist Cabinet, spent ten years in Siberian working as a goldsmith. Tokoi was considered before the Russian revolution an especially moderate Socialist, but he has been steadily becoming more radical in the last months, and was one of the loudest defenders of "extra parliamentary action," an euphemistic expression of the methods by which the Finnish Socialists now have come into at least temporary power.

The Socialists, aided by Russian soldiers, are searching the houses of non-Socialist citizens in various places for provisions and weapons. The postoffices have been occupied by the Revolutionists. The mails have been seized and no long distance telephone communication is permitted.

PEOPLE WANT A STRONG MAN.

PETROGRAD, Monday, Nov. 12.—Returning from a short visit to the northern Caucasus I traversed Russia from south to north. Rumors of the Bolsheviki rising had reached Kislovodsk before I left on Thursday—rumors wildly contradictory, exciting, and alarming. Throughout the ten Kuban territories order was undisturbed. At Rostoff on Friday I learned a few details of the rising of the garrison, while the workers were in a state of ferment and had passed Bolsheviki resolutions. But in the neighboring town of Novotcherkask, capital of the Don Territory, the Cossack Government under Kaledines had immediately declared for the Provisional Government, assumed full power in its own territories and established contact with the Cossack Governments of the neighboring territories.

Shortly before the rising the Cossacks of the Don Kuban Ter and Astrakhan territories, the Kalmyks of the Steppes, and the mountain tribes of Daghestan and the Black Sea coast had formed a league of autonomous units with a common federal government over the whole territory north of the Caucasus between the Caspian and the Black Sea. The existence of this league guaranteed complete order in that territory, which includes the richest granary of Russia.

On Thursday the Kaledines Government declared martial law in the distubed mining area of Donets Basin and an engineer whom I saw later in the train declared that the miners had resumed work.

The Cossack Congress which happened to be sitting in Kieff immediately took command of the situation there and arrested the Ukrainian Council and suppressed Bolshevikl. The last I heard in Rostoff was that the Cossacks were arresting the Bolsheviki at Novotcherkask.

From Rostoff onward there was a complete absence of definite news. Order prevailed at all the stations and fewer soldiers than usual besieged the train. The more intelligent soldiers with whom I talked were indignant with the Bolsheviki and although the Socialists declared for Kornilioff, other and simpler men knew little of politics and cared less.

Nowhere throughout the journey did I hear a word of sympathy for Kerensky. Educated passengers were infuriated by his laxity in permitting the Bolsheviki agitation, and soldiers were indignant that he was unable to maintain authority and order. One railway man said that Kerensky, Lenine, and Trotzky ought all to be thrown into the Neva.

There was not a trace of enthusiasm for the Provisional Government, which was felt to have deserved its fate. But everywhere along the line was expressed a longing for real order, for real authority, for some one who could save Russia from her terrible fate.

At Kharkov Station on Saturday there was again a scarcity of news owing to a local newspaper strike.

A Bolsheviki committee had appointed its own commissary as Governor, but a passenger from Kharkov declared that there was no outward change and that the banks were open for business as usual.

At Kursk and Orel again I found complete order, but there were vague rumors and contradictory reports from Petrograd. Once we heard that the Cossacks had got the upper hand and again that the Bolsheviki were still in power.

At Tula we had news of trouble in Moscow. Approaching Moscow on a bright sunny afternoon we looked across the low-lying meadows and scanned the towers and cupolas of the city for traces of the smoke of battle. But the old capital stood out still resplendent, with no outward sign of any war.

On the Upskirts the train stopped. We heard the sound of guns, and were told the officers' training school was being bombarded. Women told terrible stories of the fighting and bloodshed throughout Saturday and Sunday, and declared that whole lines had been mowed down by machine guns.

At the station there was not a single intelligent person, and all we could gather was vague rumors of continuous fighting, of houses destroyed by artillery and fire, of thousands of killed and wounded.

The streets near the station were lined with persons listening for the sound of firing, but we were told that further on the streets were empty.

As the train glided out of the station the sound of a volley came up from somewhere near the central post office.

The only passengers who joined the train at Moscow was a soldier whose information was confused and fragmentary. He said that foreign soldiers were helping the Government troops.

At all stations further on we again heard contradictory reports, and I got no idea of the real situation until passengers from suburban stations joined the train this morning.

At the Petrograd station there were no visible signs of traffic. The streets looked bedraggled and grimy. There were shutters on most of the shops, and many were closed, but the trams were running as usual. Near my house I met a squad of red guard on patrol work. At the entrance to my flat two young men, residents of the house, were on guard. Residents of each house now take turns in policing the doors and gateways. We are all special constables now.

And then I plunged into the thick of Petrograd rumors and party wrangling and furious recriminations, and felt again the bitterness of the Russian tragedy as I had not felt it through all the long journey over the plain. Outside of Petrograd it is easier to believe in Russia: here the atmosphere of catastrophe is stifling.

BOLSHEVIKI PRESS GERMANS.

Say Prompt Action by International Socialists Will Decide Civil War.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The Chronicle publishes two dispatches from Stockholm, dealing with the Russian situation, both being dated Friday. The first says:

"News has begun to arrive from Petrograd after a week's silence. Today's Stockholm Tidnge reports from an authentic source the actual situation in Petrograd is that the town is in the main controlled by the Bolsheviki, but that some quarters are in the hands of Kerensky forces. Kerensky's supporters are developing some degree of acuvity even in South Russia. It is said that the Bolsheviki troops are characterized by utter lack of discipline and are without officers to lead their operations.

"Travelers from Petrograd informed the Dagbad that, in their opinion, Kerensky would succeed in mastering the situation. Popular sympathy has turned toward him, and there seems to be a common desire for a strong head at the helm and a restoration of the death penalty.

"Representatives here of the Bolsheviki have wired to the German minority leaders, Haase, Ledbour and Mehring: 'Your telegrams and the manifestations of the other brouner parties have been sent in by courier, as telegraphic communications are cut. The whole struggle will not be concluded by victory or defeat. A lasting civil war is impending in Russia and its issue depends on swift and decisive effort by internationale.'"

The second dispatch reads: "The Italian Minister at Petrograd has arrived in Stockholm on leave from considerations of health. He left Petrograd Saturday and on Sunday evening was in telegraphic communication with Petrograd from Torneo. Interviewed by your correspondent, the Minister made the following statement:

"'The rapidity with which Maximalism has been able to spread in Russia may be explained by the fact that it makes an appeal to the ignorant masses in virtue of two ideas, which they easily understand and accept. These are: 1, distribution of land, and 2, immediate peace. Nevertheless, as these two ideas are as difficult to realise as they are easy to talk about, disappointment will come soon and the disorganization of the Maximalists will then be as rapid as its progress had been.

"'The Maximalists will have still another disappointment. They have promised a revolution in Germany. On this illusion they have based their hopes regarding their "democratic peace." The fact is, however, that revolution in Germany is not only not in sight, but even unthinkable. German socialism is solidly behind the imperialistic Government and will be unmoved by the proclamations of Lenine.

"'The present crisis in Russia will end by clarifying and demonstrating these three huge errors of the Bolsheviki and by openeng the eyes of the people.

"'On the other side the Central Powers are making a fundamental mistake if they think that Russia has lost all consciousness of its mission and its power. Real Russia knows very well that it cannot defend its freedom and its future in any other way than by weapon in hand and by defending the common cause of the Allies.'

THINK KERENSKY DOOMED.

Washington Observers See Little Hope for His Authority.

WASHINGTON, Nov 17.—Belated dispatches from Ambassador Francis reaching the State Department today told of the fighting in the streets of Petrograd, in which students of the military academy and women were slaughtered by the Bolsheviki troops.

The latest dispatch was dated Nov. 13, last Tuesday, and told how the Socialist factions had formed a government of a coalition nature, with only Socialists allowed to participate.

Another interesting thing in the dispatches was the statement that when Lenine, Premier of the Bolsheviki Government, presented his personal check for 100,000,000 rubles and demanded payment all the banks in Petrograd promptly closed.

Messages from the department to Ambassador Francis have been held up, evidently in Petrograd, for the Embassy reported that it had received no messages since Nov. 3. No Americans had been injured in the fighting.

In some circles there was apprehension that not only the Bolsheviki, but other elements also, including even the aristocracy, have joined in an effort to compass Kerensky's fall. Doubt was expressed in several quarters today for the first time of the possibility of Kerensky's returning to power.

Russian circles here still hold that the fighting which is in progress in Petrograd, Moscow, Kiev, and probably other important points in Russia, is whole some and will assist in the swifter determination of the final issue as between the Maximalists and the intelligent democratic forces. When the fighting ceases, it was said, the defeated party, which they were assured would be the Extremists, would never be able to give a new Government any further trouble. One difficulty in the way of the Maximalists which sooner or later, it was thought, will force them to capitulate, is their inadequate sources of supply. The arsenals are at the front or immediately behind the lines, and when the Bolsheviki use up their munitions they will be unable to replenish their supplies. They also face a drastic situation in Petrograd, where famine is threatened by a shortage of foodstuffs and the refusal of peasants to send foodstuffs to the capital.

The delay of the Maximalists in carrying out their promises respecting dispossession of large land owners and donation of estates to the landless or small land owners also is causing some defections from the Maximalists, it was believed.

Stirring events are taking place in Finland, according to unofficial advices received from Stockholm. After the Conservatives refused a demand from the Socialists to abandon their program the Socialists called a strike and arranged to form a Socialist Parliament for Finland. The situation is complicated by threats of the committee of Workmen's and Soldiers' Deputies to organize an uprising against the bourgoisie.

The dispatches state that the Socialists have accomplished a coup d'etat without disturbance, although feeling is running high. The workmen have taken charge of the Finnish telegraph station, but railroad transportation is at a standstill on account of the strike. Communication by telegraph is irregular. There is gossip in Sweden that the Finnish banks are still open, but that Petrograd banks are closed.

BRITISH CAPTURE STRONG REDOUBT

Push on Along Passchendaele Ridge and Drive Germans From Vocation Farm.

BRITISH FRONT IN BELGIUM, Nov. 17, (by The Associated Press.)—During last night the British carried out a small, successful operation northwest of Passchendaele, on the Goeberg spur, by which they advanced a section of their line and forced the Germans to give up Vocation Farm, a strongly fortified redoubt which has been the scene of bitter fighting recently.

The attack was delivered on a very narrow front for the purpose of improving the British positions so as to make the present line across Passchendaele ridge one more easily held. Vocation Farm, which was heavily equipped with machine guns, had been giving the British much trouble in the last few days.

A number of prisoners were captured in the operation.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The British War Office communication today reads:

A successful operation was carried out late yesterday evening by detachments from the Highland, Berkshire and Lancashire battalions in the vicinity of Passchendaele. Further portions of the enemy's defenses on the main ridge north of the village, including a strongly fortified farm, were captured by us. We also took a number of prisoners.

West of this locality also we have advanced our lines slightly at certain points. The enemy's artillery has again been active throughout the night on the battlefront. The German shelling has been particularly severe in the Passchendaele sector.

The night report says:

During the day the ground captured by us last night north and northwest of Passchendaele has been consolidated. The hostile artillery has again shown considerable activity east and northeast of Ypres.

Highland troops carried out a successful raid this morning south of the Scarpe River.

PARIS, Nov. 17.—Today's official war report says:

There were active artillery engagements last night north of Courtecon. We repulsed an enemy detachment which attempted to approach our lines in this region and inflicted serious losses on it. Raids on German trenches southeast of St. Quentin, in the Champagne, east of Teton, and in the Woevre enabled us to bring back prisoners, including one officer, and in the Vosges and in Upper Alsace the artillery fighting was rather heavy at Schonhola. Everywhere else the night passed in quiet.

BERLIN, (via London,) Nov. 17.—According to the supplementary statement from general headquarters this evening, no events of special importance have been reported from any of the fronts.

The day report said:

Front of Crown Prince Rupprecht.—In Flanders, near Dixmude, and between the railways leading from Ypres, Staden, and Roulers, the firing activity revived during the afternoon. By a vigorous thrust our storming troops brought back one officer and sixty-three men from the Belgian crater lines south of Blankaert Lake.

At St. Quentin on the southern front yesterday strong artillery and mine-throwing fire again continued.

Front of the German Crown Prince.—There were successful forefield engagements in the Allette region, northwest of Auberive and on the eastern bank of the Meuse. French prisoners fell into our hands.

ITALIANS HOLDING ON ENTIRE FRONT

eral Staff. Eight hundred Italians were taken prisoner.

The text of the afternoon announcement follows:

In spite of the cold and snow, Austro-Hungarian troops, indefatigable in attack, climbed the steep summit of Monte Prassolan, between the Brenta and the Piave Rivers, which was defended stubbornly by the Italians. A regimental commander, fifty other officers and 1,500 men were captured.

There have been reconnoitring engagements along the western bank of the lower Piave.

Teutons Incurring Heavy Losses.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Terrific fighting is taking place on the Italian front, according to a cable dispatch received in Washington from Rome today. The dispatch says that the Italian forces are holding their own and are inflicting heavy casualties on the Austro-German troops, some of which are following the tactics that have caused the Germans to lose so many men at Verdun. There is nothing in the dispatch to indicate that the Italians are giving way in their defense of the Venetian plains. On the whole, the information contained in the dispatch is encouraging.

Following is the text of the dispatch:

"Violent and sanguinary encounters are taking place along the line extending to the eastern zone of the Sette Comuni Plateau, where our troops are valiantly opposing the advance of the enemy toward the Venetian plains. Along the Piave the intensified enemy pressure compels us to maintain undiminished our units guarding against any attempt on the part of the Austro-Germans to effect a passage of the river. In the mountainous zone of the Piave the enemy is delivering frequent assaults of the most desperate character in order to occupy our positions on Monte Groppa, which is our principal defensive pivot in support of that section, and thereby facilitating manoeuvres on a larger scale for the greater part of his troops, who aim at forcing a passage through the Sette Communi Plateau and invading the plain by the Vicenza-Fontariva-Bassano line. The enemy has already started this stupendous manoeuvre.

"The Austro-Germans, following their method of surprise attacks, have tried repeatedly to wrest from our soldiers important positions on Monte Sisemol, but each attempt was foiled by the Italians after furious fighting, notwithstanding the fact that the enemy was continually bringing up fresh troops in the vain hope of wearing out the resistance of our soldiers. The assaults were delivered with increasing frequency, so as to prevent the defenders from reorganizing their shattered lines. For five days our brave soldiers have been firmly and effectively resisting the desperate attacks of the enemy, who is applying in this sector the system that cost so many German lives in front of Verdun.

"Similar assaults were undertaken in the vicinity of Monte Lome, where the Austro-Germans concentrated in a short time very large bodies of troops, but owing to the difficulty of the ground for the deployment, of great forces, entire battalions of Germans were annihilated by the effective fire of our artillery and bayonet counterattacks.

"In the region of Monte Fior an entire enemy division was obliged to retire after having suffered considerable losses. Our withdrawal from certain positions in the vicinity of Monte Tomatico does not affect the defensive importance of Monte Grappa, since our line near Monte Tomatico was held simply for observation purposes. Our troops, while stemming the pressure of the enemy, succeeded in reaching previously prepared positions.

"Furious fighting is proceeding at Zenson, where the Italians have almost completely expelled the enemy troops that had forced a crossing at that point. Several Austrian groups were made prisoners.

"The operations which are now proceeding in the Sette Communi Plateau constitute the most serious element in the present state of the offensive, and it is expected that in this sector Italy and the Allies will fight most determinedly to protect the Venetian plains from further invasion on the part of the Huns."

GERMANS CONTROL THE AIR

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE ITALIAN ARMY ON THE PIAVE, Nov. 15, (Delayed.)—There was that onrush which was one of the moods of war and in which the slambang of an occasional rifle was startling, and the ten-seconds-long stutter of an occasional machine gun, watchful and suspicious, seemed an importunate interruption. Through the fret of a stone-carved window whose stonework was as fine and delicate as lace I looked forth upon the Piave, flowing beneathe the walls of the house with that full head of water which the last few days of rain had produced.

Within the house all those shutters which the German machine guns had not shattered were closed. One room had received a shell and was open to the daylight as an open grave is open; but for the rest, whoso one moved with precaution to keep the solid stonework between one's self and the fountains of sudden death across the river, there was that shadow which owns and pervades a house in which a corpse lies unburied. Its owners had gone, leaving their tokens in children's dolls, in the china cat on a shelf, in a hundred trivial but significant symptoms of genial and kindly life cut down at the root to make a Hohenzollern holiday, and in their place had entered that ominous spirit who is the herald of strident ruin.

The rooms were still. The well of the wide staircase was silent, and through the broken shutters I caught a glimpse of daylight more ominous than any dark. The bullet-freckled shutter supplied a crevice through which the daylight from without sliced into the gloom like a sabre cut, and through it there was a wide view of the river beneath, of the low, bushy bank beyond where the enemy moved and threatened, of the great Udine-Treviso railway bridge to the south, with a gap in its middle, where guncotton had made a new frontier, and of smoke films yet further south, spires of smoke rising in magic and sinister suddenness, of nightmare architecture and shrapnel clouds appearing and diffusing in madhouse cloud formations, where anti-aircraft fire round the stairwarts of the 3d Army were smashing away at the Austrians, who had pushed their way to the west bank.

Battle Over 900-Yard River.

From bank to bank the Piave showed some 900 yards of an open field of fire, with one channel of perhaps 200 yards wide of swift water, possibly six feet deep, and some three or four other channels varying from ten to fifty yards in width, with high banks of wet shingle. In between, on the eastern bank, there was visible here and there new earth thrown up on the enemy's trenches among the mulberry plantations which clothe this fruitful and beautiful plain, and once, through glasses, I saw men moving among the trees—figures of invaders straying at ease, though they paid rates and taxes in this sweet land which they have usurped.

Below, at the water's edge, a steel-helmeted Italian soldier crouched behind a barrier of sandbags, unmoving as a statue, watching with unceasing vigilance. He was the foremost man of the whole army—the man of the army who was posted farthest east. Near him was a machine gun, and its gunner stood ready to jam home his thumb on the firing lever and create there a sudden arc of death. The river banks are trapped with barbed wire, and the whole capricious and uncertain stream is exaggerated by the arts of war into a horrid obstacle.

On the farther bank, where the distances receded across a maze of green fertility, the glasses revealed one after another of the broken bell towers of village churches, snapped off like rhubarb stalks by the advancing guns of the enemy, for whom all churches are targets, and all that churches stand for is blasphemy against his maniac code of "Upon each war and ill-will to men"; and over all that hush, that bated breath, which is war's alternative to the outrageous uproar of battle. A ripple of rifle fire, a spasm of machine-gun discharges, like a boy's stick along the railing, far and incessant gunnery—these were the mere background to one's sense, like the silence of a garden in which bees are humming. Silence, suspense, and a sense of tragedy impending possesses the moment.

It is an actual and present tragedy which casts its shadow upon the front where I move. I speak not only of the situation in which the Italians now find themselves, with every great height in the Trentino overlooking their retired forces and all their ghastly uphill battle to fight over again, with the mountain saddle looming above Browning's house at Asolo, and German guns screened behind the mountains where Pippa passed, but of the actual Piave.

While I write the Austrians and Germans are magnifying their pressure upon that by means of the great river. It is a platitude of war science that a fordable or bridgeable river is disadvantageous to the defenders rather than to the attackers, since the former must hold the whole line of the river as a precaution against attack, while the latter can concentrate on a feint of crossing and attempt the actual passage where he pleases.

Seven Attacks on the Piave.

This is now proved afresh. Within the last three days the Germans and Austrians have been thrusting at the river at no fewer than seven points between the Trentino foothills and the sea. At Dona di Piave they got across and were driven back to the river bank, and since then their pontoons and their wading men have appeared upon that big, sandy island called "The Grave," where the river divides west of Cimadolmo. How they got across to it is not clear, but the water on their side is not deep, and it is possible that they waded through five feet or so of swift water.

They were attacked at daylight by the Italians, whose shell fire prevented them either from withdrawing or advancing, and they dug themselves in on the shingle of the island, and at this moment are practically besieged there.

South of Dona di Piave irrigation and drainage canals were broken down by the retreaters and the country inundated to a depth of three feet. The enemy was obviously prepared for this, since he has appeared with pontoons and boats toward Cavazuccherina, at the northern edge of the Venetian lagoon, where at this moment he is engaged with the Italian naval forces.

North of Cavazuccherina is that region of mud canals and flood water which intervenes between the canalized lower course of the Piave and the Sile Canal. The rains have turned it into amphibious territory, where men can wade in water and drown on what ought to be dry land. The lower floors of the houses in such villages as Piave Vecchia are under water, and the campanili stick up from the mud-hued level of the flood like strange immense water plants; and here in the silence of the floods the enemy is moving in boats and squelching over mud islands. Peasants, awaiting rescue from the inundation, see him arrive with feelings much like those of shipwrecked people who hail a passing sail and find it a pirate craft.

From the north comes the news of concentrations and attacks at various places on the Trentino front. The Italian line, which was nearly 450 miles long before the retreat, is little more than 180 now.

A measure of the forces assembled against the Italians here is to be gained from the number of aircraft employed. Where once, and recently, the Italians owned the air as definitely as they owned Bainsizza Plateau, there are now daredevil German airmen with the German method of air fighting. Save for the bombing of open towns, where a single bomb may make the world eternally poorer and even uglier than it is now by the shattering of architecture which belongs in the jewel casket of civilization, by the killing of a Raphael Madonna or a Paul Veronese group of saints, together with the soldiers and peasants upon whom they rain death daily, they never come singly. A couple of bombers and a dozen fighting machines appear simultaneously. The defenders are attacked from all sides at once, and here, as in other respects, the enemy has a terrible numerical advantage.

Today he appeared over Padua and was driven off. Asolo, Treviso and all the wonderful and beautiful little towns of the front have known him. I think the very saints under their altars are uneasy in their tombs in these days when the Hun troubles the world.

At the Fourth Army command yesterday they told me of a German officer whom they had captured.

"Yes," he said, "it is a pretty little victory, but the plain of Venice is not going to do much to feed Germany."

DANIELS REVIEWS NEWPORT BRIGADE

Secretary Tells Young Sailors That to Shoot Straight They Must Live Straight.

PRAISES SPIRIT OF NAVY

Declares Nearly Every Young Officer Is Striving for Hazardous Service on the Destroyers.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Nov. 17.—Secretary Daniels, accompanied by his aid, Commander Herbert G. Sparrow, visited the Naval Training Station today, reviewed the brigade, and made a speech to the men. Describing the spirit of officers and men of the navy he said:

"Outside the navy I do not think anybody in America appreciates the rigorous service on destroyers in the North Sea and Channel which confronts the men in this Winter weather, and yet, though each man knows the service is a hard one, he covets it, and I believe every young officer in the navy who knows me personally and who thought he could do it without breaking the regulations has asked to be sent on a destroyer to the North Sea. As I passed down the lines today and talked with those splendid young men, chiefs of their companies, I asked each of them why he entered the navy and what he wished to do, and replies heartened me and gave me a new feeling of confidence and a new thrill in the American spirit because nearly every one said: 'I entered the navy to serve my country in its hour of need,' and their ambition was to go where the fighting was the fiercest and where their services should count most for the liberty of their country.

"Young gentlemen, my message to you is a message of gratitude from the American people for the sacrifice you offer. If a man would shoot straight he must live straight. This is my message to you boys. We have a great contempt for a slacker. In this hour the young man in America, who is physically fit, who does not don the uniform has no place in the esteem or the affection or respect of America. What shall I say to the young man in the service when his country needs him and trusts him who by any lapse of morals shall disqualify himself for the high service upon which his country rests and in some moment, if he has not a steady hand, may fail his country and lose a battle because he has permitted his appetites and passions to weaken his moral stamina.

"We hear much talk of the morale of the service, but we have never yet understood how to spell the word. I tell you there is but one morale of the service and you spell it 'm-o-r-a-l-s.' There can be no high morale in any service whose officers and men do not lead clean lives, do not put upon themselves the self restraint to walk straight and to go into no place, to indulge in no habits that they cannot, when they return to their homes look their mothers in the eye and make them feel they have been true to their training and to their inheritance.

"I wish every American citizen could have gone down the line and looked into the faces of these young men. Every one of them looked me in the eye with a spirit which becomes American manhood, faith in himself, and respect for himself, faith in his country and respect for authority. It is in these things and in cleanliness of living, in earnestness of purpose that we look for the termination of this war, and it will come as sure as God rules in the heavens, for the victory of democracy and liberty and freedom!"

German Paper Says We Will Seize Colonies as Price of Our Aid in the War.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 17.—Although little newspaper comment has appeared, it is evident that Germany is somewhat anxious about the Japanese-American agreement in regard to China. The Kölnische Volkszeitung says that, owing to military events, America's new understanding with Japan has passed almost unnoticed, but that in reality it is an event which deserves close attention. The Volkszeitung argues that it marks the beginning of a new era, and signifies the transfer of world dominion from Europe to Japan and America. The conclusion of the agreement, it says, does not surprise Germany, for it was expected long ago. Since the beginning of the war, it asserts, Japan and America have been busily conferring, and even more busily since America became involved in European interests and money politics.

The Volkszeitung professes to believe that Japan was not so easy to deal with as America had thought, and says that in June it appeared as if everything would fall through, but that the Mikado's Government achieved its purposes by delay, knowing how necessary its help was to the United States, and that the more reluctance it showed the more desirable that help became in the eyes of Europe.

"America has become the new sword that England wields against us with full force," says the paper, "and we must from now on reckon with stronger resistance from the United States on the European Continent, as America has arranged for a full interest."

The paper suggests that, except in the matter of China, Japan has also gained, and will work now everywhere with American capital, which is of the greatest importance for her industrially.

The paper supposes that America has made arrangements about the former German colonies to her advantage, and suggests that circumstances might occur making it necessary for America to hold the Dutch colonies, [these suggestions and many others in the German press are merely intended to incite Holland against America,] and that negotiations between Batavia and Manila suggest this possibility. It is reported further that America has taken possession of the Azores. "All these reports," it adds, "prove the probability that America intends wholesale robbery, and that the small nations possessing colonies will be her prey."

The paper says that England is unable to protest, as this is the price that America demands for her help in the war.

The pro-German Vaderland is much interested in the report that Japan is to send troops to Europe, and says the Entente has now turned toward America and Japan for help.

SAYS U-BOAT MENACE WILL BE CONTROLLED

Pollen Expects Fresh Efforts by Germans, but None More Effective Than Old.

THREAT OF GREATER U-BOAT

Offset by Its Increased Vulnerability—Foresees Some New and Effective Obstacles to Submarines.

By ARTHUR H. POLLEN.

Some four or five weeks ago I ventured, in the columns of THE NEW YORK TIMES, the statement that the back of the submarine menace seemed to have been broken. Things have taken so satisfactory a turn since then that yesterday it seemed justifiable to say that the ruthless campaign had definitely failed in its two main objects, namely, to starve Great Britain and exclude the United States from taking an active part in the war on land—in other words, that the German threat had been signally defeated. This has been challenged in many quarters—especially interesting is Sir Eric Geddes's caveat—as too optimistic a statement, and I am asked exactly what I mean by it.

Well, I mean exactly what I have said and no more than I have said. Great Britain will not be starved nor the Allies; nor can America now be kept out of the war. But I have not said, and I do not mean, that all the German submarines have been sunk or that they will fall in sinking any more ships; nor that the anti-submarine campaign will not be continued; nor that the building of merchant ships will not be speeded up; nor, finally, that the campaign may not be revived either with new material or in a new field. Of course the countermeasures must be kept up as vigorously, nay, more vigorously, than ever. Of course the enemy will try new types and new fields. The point is this: Do we know enough about the character of the submarine war and of the resources of the enemy to say with confidence that these new developments are no mure likely to achieve the German object than those which have already been countered with success? To answer, it is necessary to rehearse one or two of the main elements of the problem.

The submarine cannot be literally and totally defeated until it is made impossible for a single one of these boats to get out of German waters into those where naval and carrying ships are passing. It is inconceivable that any form of barrier could be established, whether by nets, or mines, of observation posts employing any or all of the methods of detecting the presence of invisible craft and, on detection, dispatching craft suitably armed to attack the under-water boat while it is below the surface—no system of barriers of this or any other kind can be completely effective. Consequently there is but one final answer to the submarine, and that is to take the enemy's ports, and so deny him access to the sea altogether. So long as these operations are impossible the total suppression of the submarine is impossible. And, failing this, the submarine must be dealt with by one and all of the following methods:

Means of Combating the U-Boat.

First, its passing from German to Allied waters must be made as dangerous as possible. Next, those that escape this peril must have their task made as dangerous as possible by the concentration of shipping to routes that can be patrolled, by the convoying of ships generally, and through these routes and by the arming of individual ships that cannot be convoyed; thirdly, general and systematic hunt for, and pursuit of, submarines in all areas otherwise favorable to their operations, must be maintained. Finally, their operations must be made difficult or ineffective by camouflage, by equipping ships with the means of evasion and concealment, and by loading ships and fitting them so that when hit by torpedo or shells, as many as possible shall still remain afloat. How have these measures worked in the last nine months?

No detailed history of the progress of the anti-submarine campaign is available to us. But the indications are that its improved efficiency has been brought about partly by camouflage, partly by more vigorous patrolling, partly by the arming of ships, but mostly by the development of convoy. If these inferences are correct, it is more along the line of defensive than of offensive action that the general defeat of the submarine has been brought about.

And this is extremely significant. For it is a commonplace that the defensive is the weakest form of war. It means a dissipation of force. It means that the enemy is left with the initiative and enjoys the greater freedom of action. All we have done is to make some localities more dangerous for him than others. We have done our best to concentrate our own traffic to those localities, to have made the traffic itself combative, or escorted it with combatant ships. The direct attack on the submarine has been incidental to our defensive; it has been more or less limited to the same agencies that made the concentration localities dangerous. In other words, we have only taken the offensive when the enemy gave us the opportunity.

Now, if this form of anti-submarine war has so far succeeded, as it plainly has, that our losses are for the moment negligible, we must next ask ourselves: Can the enemy by any new grouping of his units, or by the employment of units of a new kind, bring our generally defensive measure to naught? And, next, can we pass from the defensive to the offensive in a more direct and conclusive manner and not only complete the work we have already begun against his units of existing type, but make that offensive equally effective against any new type he may produce? The whole thing turns upon what is open to the enemy in new forms of submarines and in the seeking of new fields, and what is open to us in new forms of barriers. Let us deal with the enemy's policy first.

The Rumored Super-Submarine.

For nearly two years now we have been hearing of the new big U-boat able to carry six-inch guns in plated hcods, so as to be immune from danger of any form of fire of guns not exceeding four inches in calibre. Such a boat could survive direct hits made by shells with flat trajectory such as are normally employed for arming ships. There is no mystery about armor-plated submarines. They have long since been recognized to be practicable, and there is no theoretical limit to their size. A 10,000-ton submarine, armed with twelve-inch guns, could be built and would undoubtedly be seaworthy. But a six-inch gun armored submarine would not be practicable unless she displaced 3,500 or 4,000 tons. With her conning tower submerged, she would certainly draw between forty and fifty feet of water. With her upper works armored, her under body could not be protected at all. She would be just as vulnerable to mines, depth charges and howitzer shells—which would burst under water as depth charges do—as any existing type of submarine. Her greater draft and larger bulk would make it more dangerous for her to pass near a mine field, would make her an object more easily detected by the means by which things invisible but moving under water can be found, would make her a mark very much more easy to hit by howitzer fire, depth charges and torpedoes.

In other words, everything gained in protection against direct gun fire must be lost—and perhaps, as we shall see, more than lost—by the greater expanse of vulnerable underwater body, if any other attack than gun attack is developed. And it must be added here also that every fathom added to the draft and girth automatically limits the area within which the submarine can safely operate submerged. The type, then, is very far from being invincible.

Are boats of this type to be expected on the sea routes in the near future? That they have so long been threatened seems to point to the fact that there has been real difficulty—or at least real hesitation—in producing them in quantities. Germany's building facilities are far from unlimited. Her capacity almost certainly does not exceed three submarines a week of the old type. An experimental boat of a larger size may very likely have been started two years ago or more, but when one remembers the infinite (and touching) faith in the success of the old type boats when ruthlessly employed, is it not highly probable that all efforts would have been concentrated upon producing these, at least up to the time when their failure had reluctantly to be admitted? It seems, then, unlikely that Germany can have any large numbers of the six-inch gun submarines ready for sea.

If they exist, what is their value? Clearly, if they have good surface speed, so that escape by flight would be impossible to the majority of carrying ships, then each will be almost as formidable as armed raiders like the Möwe until they meet superior force in the form of ships armed with howitzers that can attack their underwater parts, as well as guns that hit the exposed turrets and conning tower. They could not, of course, carry armor sufficient to protect them against six-inch guns, and convoys under the protection of warships so armed would be as safe from the new type of U-boat as from the old.

Problem Not Essentially Changed.

To deal with such a type, then, is not a problem essentially different from dealing with the smaller type. It certainly calls for a new armament. The necessity of being ready for such a development as this has been foreseen for at least as long as the rumors of its imminence have been in circulation. Should such boats really appear then, they might have formidable local successes, and possibly a temporary general success. But it should not be long before they should be neutralized.

How about the capacity of such boats to go farther afield? A greater radius of action would follow automatically from their greater bulk, and greater radius might be supposed to imply an extension of the danger zone. But the old boats could operate as far afield as they liked. Witness events in the Mediterranean for the last two and a half years, and the adventures of the U-53 off Nantucket thirteen months ago.

It would seem, then, that the enemy had always had it in his power to extend the danger zone by 3,000 miles whenever he liked. He has not done so, it must exist for very good reasons. The reasons, of course, are that it is no use going anywhere except where he is likely to find ships. Prima facie, then, larger and more powerful U-boats will give him no new facilities for attacking in new fields. But this is not to say that the new facilities will not make their invasion of new fields worth while when before it was not worth while. The point is that mere extension of field is not a new development necessarily favorable to the enemy. And, if tackling the larger boat is a mere extension of the old formula of tackling the smaller, it is difficult to see how either the threat of a new type or the possibility of an enlarged zone can change conditions so materially as to put us back where we were six months ago.

And meantime our major coup is still to be played. If the submarines cannot be suffocated in their bases, they can, must, and undoubtedly will be blocked by mine fields and other forms of barriers before they have left their bases very far behind them. For a year the most active scientific and naval brains in England, and for nine months the same admirable agencies in the United States, have been working independently and co-operatively to solve the problem of making a wide waterway impassable by underwater craft. It is, of course, much more than two years since writers in England urged that vast mine fields should be laid across the North Sea, the upper layer deep enough at low tide to enable surface ships to pass over them, the lower layer near enough to the bottom to make passage beneath them impossible, and, where necessary, intermediate layers to catch a submarine at any level of submergence. To make the North Sea impassable, a number of mines would be required which is, no doubt, fabulous. At its narrowest the North Sea is 250 miles across, and when allowance is made for fields at different levels nearly 100 mines to the mile would be required for the original barrier. And it would have to be renewed from time to time.

Some New Obstacle Probable.

Mines, of course, are not the only possible form of barrier. And, whether the obstacle were passive or active, it would involve an immense amount of preliminary work and immense resources constantly devoted to its maintenance. It is not to be expected that the development of some such attack as this on the submarine has not been in active progress during the last year, or at least during the last six months. As we have seen already, it is inconceivable that it can ever be theoretically completely effective. But it is equally inconceivable that an obstacle that is extremely effective will not, in due course of time, be made.

Are not two reflections on this state of things both obvious and encouraging? There is every reason to suppose that the breakdown of Germany's submarine activities has been brought about less by there being an insufficiency of boats with which to carry them on—indeed the First Lord of the Admiralty says the Germans are building faster than we can destroy—than by the insufficiency of the warlike spirit necessary for manning the available boats. In the weakest kind of war, then, we have brought the enemy's morale down to a point at which his offensive has failed. We are, or must soon be, passing to the offensive ourselves, and he can only vary his units of attacks by going in for a type of boat which will be increasingly vulnerable to the measures we are about to adopt.

For the better gunned, the better armored, the faster and more mobile the submarine, the greater the danger to it both from a mine and from any other form of barrier. For you can add nothing in the way of fighting power, protection or speed or fuel endurance to the U-boat without paying for this improvement in size, and with every increase it must lose something of its power of evasion, a faculty the importance of which will increase in proportion as our barriers rise in efficiency. If, then, the main campaign has failed in its two objectives, the starving of England and the exclusion of the American army from France, when we were limited to the defensive, because in spite of these limits so many submarines were ultimately destroyed, is it likely that a new campaign can succeed when we are passing to the offensive? And any German hopes based on larger vessels seem likely to be discounted by the fact that it is precisely size that will be the chief difficulty in overcoming our attack.

We have, of course, to keep things going as hard as ever. Until the barrier is complete, if ever it can be made so, it would be to the last degree unwise to slacken by one of our precautions. And as for replacing losses, while we can keep pace with the present rate of destruction with comparative ease, we must not forget that nearly one thousand British ships have been lost in the last twelve months, so that there is a tremendous leeway to make up before even our old ship capacity is restored. At least half as many neutral ships have been lost, too, and, finally, we can never have too many ships. The moral of the situation, then, is neither overconfidence nor any relaxation, but a greater effort than ever, spurred now not by the desperate necessity of avoiding defeat but by the exhilarating assurance that every blow struck is now a blow for victory.

TURKS TO STAND NEAR JAFFA

Preparing Intrenched Positions North of the City.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The Turkish forces which have been falling back before the British advance in Palestine are apparently preparing to make a stand north of Jaffa, according to today's official statement on the Palestine operations. The text of the statement reads:

General Allenby reports that yesterday there were minor advances in certain sectors of our front. Our yeomanry, who on Thursday took Abu Schuche ridge, five miles southeast of Er-Ramle, captured 360 prisoners and one gun. They carried the Turkish position at a gallop and 431 Turks were counted on the ground. The Australians, in taking El-Tine, captured large numbers of prisoners, one gun, three airplanes and considerable quantities of ammunition and stores. On Thursday one hostile airplane was brought down.

The Turks are reported to be endeavoring to prepare an entrenched position north of Jaffa, roughly parallel to the River Aujer (Nahr el-Aujer).

The river empties into the Mediterranean about four miles north of Jaffa.

German Land Activities Attributed to Fear of Ultimate Doom of Undersea Campaign.

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The message sent out by The Associated Press, giving the opinion of an English journalist now in America to the effect that last week's showing marked the definite and conclusive defeat of the submarine, is much deprecated in circles here which understand the realities of undersea warfare. It is regretted that such importance should be attached to a single week's return. Those who understand the subject best state that there is just as much reason to generalize in the reverse direction.

"More likely they are spitting on their hands for the next go," said an American today.

While there is general gratification at the unique figure, the event is being celebrated as isolated and casual rather than marking final victory over the submarine.

The commonsense of the situation clearly is that while distinct progress has been made in fighting the submarine, we are still far from safe. In the month of October the rate of destruction was considerably higher than in September, a fact that disposes of the ill-founded view that the submarine chapter of the war is closed. The undersea operations have a pendulum-like movement. August was comparatively heavy, September showed a big drop, the actual figures for four weeks being even lower than the estimate I cabled to THE TIMES from Paris on Oct. 9. The Germans must have become alarmed and made extra efforts, for toward the end of October the English and American defenders observed a greater number of submarines at work on the Atlantic than had ever before been known, though owing to the organized defense the aggregate sinkings totaled only one-half the high mark of April.

The Germans evidently exhausted themselves in the October effort, as the low returns in the first part of November clearly indicate. The boats broke down, the crews wore out, and the effect of the strain was otherwise evidenced. The delicate machinery constantly needs repair, and crews to man the submarines are increasingly difficult to obtain. We are experiencing a similar difficulty in America where, despite the inexhaustible supply of raw man power, men for the new destroyers coming out shortly are hard to get.

The best opinion here is that such optimism as is displayed in the dispatch above referred to will have a mischievous effect. If America accepted that dictum it would certainly turn out to be the reverse of true. The submarine is not only yet unbeaten, but can be defeated only by the most strenuous sort of effort, with America and England working shoulder to shoulder.

The men who have been sent here to study the subject and co-operate with England are doing fine work to that end. They bring the American point of view to London and impress it on the British, and they will take home a full understanding of the most important single subject of the war, and will be prepared to enlighten Washington's efforts. None of those making this study minimizes the seriousness of the situation or attaches more than casual significance to one week's figures. I consider as the general impression of many experts that if England and America stick right to it strenuously and sleeplessly, and a fair average of luck attends their efforts, we shall put the submarine danger behind us about the middle of 1918. We must always reckon with the possibility of Germany's springing some kind of surprise, but there has been opportunity to take the measure of the new submarine cruiser, the forerunner of the campaign which Berlin intimated was to be let loose on the high seas in great number as successors to the Seeadlers and Moewes. One of these craft actually has been cruising sixty days on the South Atlantic, and its entire bag totals five ships, two of them small Brazilians. They cannot duplicate the Seeadler's feats, because they cannot have a large cruising radius and speed both, and as the designers considered the cruising radius primarily essential, the submarine sent out as a demonstrator found the sea too big for good hunting at slow speed.

The Germans probably keep closer to realities in the submarine campaign than we. They are undoubtedly having much difficulty in sustaining their activities. They are aware that Italy and Rusela cannot save them if their submarine power is broken. They know that in eight months the Allies' building program of airplanes, destroyers, and cargo ships will put the submarines out of business as a determining factor, and hence their activity on all fronts, and especially the present desperate effort to win the war game by taking the ball round the end in Italy.

BRITISH SEEK HERE PLAN TO PUSH WAR

America, France, and England will thus be brought together on working terms. A card system of resources is being prepared so that their use can be systematized according to the war needs as a whole instead of proceeding on the grab-bag plan as has been done to some extent in the past.

McCormick, Crosby, Colley, Perkins, Taylor, and Cravath are as keen as bird dogs in this work. They have hit it off wonderfully with the British.

Colonel House, knowing the unbounded hospitality of London, warily suggested a rule against purely social entertainment. Luncheons and dinners, he ruled, should always have a business purpose, as much is to be done and the time is short.

From what I hear on the outside I get the impression that in handling large matters the Colonel is feeling his way, while his assistants are diligent with department heads, working with them like gears in a mesh. Colonel House keeps the strategic situation in review, watching the political upheaval here, keeping an eye on the French crisis, and above all keenly observing Italy, where the opposing forces will probably meet a few days hence in the world's greatest battle.

No Single Military Control Likely.

Out of the clash and confusion of these immense forces, English commentators predict, European statesmen, with America's help, will evolve plans for unity of control that will not be defeated by national jealousies or violate the spirit of democracy.

The underlying idea of the outside is that America's representative is not greatly concerned on the military side, where unity of control can only mean control by some one individual. That individual must belong to some nation, and the war being chiefly fought in France, control could be vested only in a Frenchman. The English statesman who proposes alienation of the leadership of the English Army bites granite. It was on that point that anger at Lloyd George centred. The Premier's statement disclaimed such intention, and even Lloyd George couldn't stand at present against the indignation which proposals to put the English armies under foreign generalship would arouse.

It is probable, therefore, that the inherently sound idea of putting the Entente armies under a single commander, as the Germans are under Hindenburg, must be abandoned for the present.

Apparently Washington has steered clear of these European controversies and is content to confine its efforts to political strategy, which bears even a larger relation to the war than the military leadership. In that field it is believed here that Washington clearly discerns existing weaknesses and will make a strong effort for amendments.

Lost motion and wasted opportunity can be measurably prevented in the future even in a war waged by democracies. Immense as has been the disaster from haphazard methods in the past probably the next few months will bring still greater perils and graver decisions. The problem is to line up the Allies together so that clear consideration and prompt action may be opposed to the Kaiser's push button control of the Central Allies.

While the meeting of the allied conference in Paris is necessarily postponed until the situation in England, France and Italy is stabilized, the delay gives an opportunity for cleaning up a mass of necessary preliminaries, and the Americans will go to the conference fortified with full information.

Our Naval Preparation.

No account of the mission's activities is complete without mention of the work of General Bliss and Admiral Benson. England being the allied naval headquarters, the Admiral has been especially active. I hear that he has undertaken to possess himself of first-hand information so that when he returns to Washington his knowledge may be in addition to and not a duplication of data already sent by Admiral Sims, whose record abroad is universally regarded as carrying out the best traditions of the American Navy and putting the convoy system in a state of highest efficiency. The American Navy will have three admirals—Mayo, Benson, and Sims—thoroughly informed on the European naval position which should make us strong at sea, especially against the submarine, defeat of which naval authorities hold would carry with it German defeat despite land victories.

MANY GROUPS JOINED IN ASSAILING PREMIER

By ROBERT DONALD,

Editor of The London Daily Chronicle.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The members of the American mission now in London must be struck coming from a belligerent nation where the hatchet of party politics has been temporarily buried, to find themselves in the presence of clamorous political controversy. They must be surprised that the criticism and abuse are directed particularly against the Prime Minister—a man for the moment without an organized party behind him, but at the same time the dominating personality among the people.

The revolt against Mr. Lloyd George came to a head this week as a result of his speech in Paris, and it is still in full swing. At first the attack was directed against the scheme for an interallied supreme council, regardless of the effect such comment would have on the Allies. Then it was turned on the manner and matter of his speech. Now it sweeps over the whole field and holds him up to obloquy.

The partisans have been given an excuse to say things which they had longed for an opportunity of saying. Mr. Lloyd George will no doubt reply to his critics on Monday.

In order to understand why the Prime Minister spoke with such brutal frankness in Paris and in a form which could be turned into good propaganda by the enemy, one must appreciate his temperament and psychology. For months he had been at work on the preparation of plans for creating a supreme allied war council. The study of the problem had just come to a head when Italy was overwhelmed.

Returning from the scene of one of the gravest and most unexpected disasters of the war, he reproached himself and every one else that steps had not been taken before to prevent such a misfortune to the allied armies. The fate of Serbia and Rumania rankled in his mind. Consequently he let himself go. He was in an allied country and was thinking more of the Allies than of England, although he spoke to the world.

Always Seeks the Offense.

There was perhaps another reason for his unmeasured frankness. It drew the fire upon himself, and lessened attention to the Italian disaster. He always prefers to be on the offense, therefore he attacked rather than wait to defend.

The fierceness of the attacks upon him has little relation to the merits of the case. The attacks come from the most irreconcilable sections. Former opponents of Mr. Asquith denounce Mr. Lloyd George and praise his predecessor. Their purpose is simply destructive. They want Mr. Asquith less than they do Mr. Lloyd George. They wish to upset the one without replacing the other. Joined with them are the anti-militarists, who fear a military dictatorship. They hate Lloyd George and shout with the old guard, "Hands off the army."

General and military leaders are busy influencing attacks on statesmen and talking wildly to newspaper men. A section of theRadicals as well as of the Liberals has been lying in wait to attack the Premier, and the Asquithians seize any opportunity which gives them an excuse for an attack which would lessen Lloyd George's influence and prestige.

A solid phalanx of the old Tories fear that too much has been given away in the Electoral Reform bill, and they are anxious to postpone and modify the measure until they can patch up a bogus peerage for the House of Lords. Reconstruction for a period at this stage and under a Conservative Prime Minister would give them hope that their purpose would have achieved.

Then comes a crowd of malcontents, who want to see the Government upset, although they have no alternative Government to suggest.

Deplorable Warfare.

It is very deplorable that this sectional discontent and guerrilla warfare should be carried on in the face of a great world crisis. These elements, if they persist in their agitation, might weaken the national effort, and in any case would give an exhibition of party feeling and prejudice which would bring some comfort to the enemy.

In all the democracies at war differences of opinions and conflicts between civilian control and military direction are inevitable. Lloyd George in his speech in Paris threatened to defend his attitude by a disclosure of the recommendations he had made in numerous memoranda. His forecasts of military developments have been almost uncanny in their accuracy, and if it came to a controversy on this point he would score off the military.

The British Army has done magnificent work, and Mr. Lloyd George's criticism of its tactics should be contrasted with his praise of its achievements in the House of Commons a few weeks ago, when he conveyed the nation's thanks to the army commanders. But the military have made not a few mistakes and miscalculations, and the results attained have not always been commensurate with the loss of lives incurred.

On Breat Britain must rest the chief burden of carrying on the war in Europe until America comes in force. Men and resources must be husbanded, and the enemy kept at bay.

If the British Government had adopted the same ruthless policy toward Generals as that followed by the French many of those now in high command would have been retired.

There is a feeling among the civilian population that the British Army leans too much on the old professional army class. The new talent brought out by the Kitchener army or Territorial forces has not been encouraged. The old military caste looks with jealousy on younger men, however capable they may be.

Lloyd George is against all routine, official, military or political, and he favors the advance of younger men who have proved their worth. Before long there may be a radical change in commands at the front where Generals have fallen short of their undertakings. The sole purpose of any changes will be to make the army a more efficient organization and to add to its fighting qualities.

Downfall Would Disconcert Allies.

The disappearance of Lloyd George from power just now would be a serious disaster for the cause of the Allies. His influence in France and Italy is far above that of any other foreigner and is equaled by few national native statesmen. As his speech, which has raised the outcry against him, was full of sympathy and contained promises of support for Italy and France, any setback to him would only be interpreted as discouragement by these two great allies fighting for their national existence. But I am confident that he will come through the present agitation unscathed, as he has the confidence of a vast majority of the people. His confidence in himself, together with his unfaiterable will, will pull him through.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Cable dispatches received at the Navy Department today from Vice Admiral Sims indicats that five enlisted men of the navy, members of the armed guard of the American steamer Rochester, which was sunk by a German submarine on Nov. 2, were lost in an open boat in which they attempted to escape. REBUKES LLOYD GEORGE.

Military Expert Questions His Statements on the Campaigns.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The military correspondent of The Times, recurring to Premier Lloyd George's recent speech in Paris, says:

"When the Premier narrates the follies of his British and foreign colleagues and lays the responsibility for allied misfortunes on them, while forgetting his own share in these transactions, it becomes necessary to speak out."

The writer then examines separately some of the Premier's assertions to show that the Government, of which Premier Lloyd George is a member, is responsible for the failures which he pilloried in Paris. The writer asserts among other things:

"The British army virtually was placed under General Nivelle (the former French commander) at the Calais conference by Premier Lloyd George without consulting the soldiers beforehand. Our losses in the later stages of the Arras battle were due to our loyal efforts to take a strain off General Nivelle, and the tardy opening of our Flanders offensive was due to delay caused by this."

After commenting adversely on the Premier's references to the Russian and Italian campaigns, the writer says:

"It would have been better had Lloyd George adhered to the facts."

JOINT CONFERENCE TUESDAY.

House Mission and British Officials Will Plan Co-operation.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The time for the meeting of the members of the American mission to the inter-allied conference with the heads of the corresponding British departments for the purpose of co-ordinating the work done by individual departments since the arrival of the American representatives has been fixed for next Tuesday at noon, in Premier Lloyd George's office. This will be the first joint conference, at which will be indicated the conclusions reached as to the best methods of prosecuting the war more effectively through co-operation between Great Britain and the United States.

Colonel E. M. House, head of the mission, gave up today to motoring to Brighton with Captain Wiseman for the purpose of visiting Lieut. Gen. Bridges of the British General Staff, who recently lost his leg in action and is in hospital. General Bliss and his staff also went to see General Bridges.

EXPECT CLEMENCEAU TO DO BIG THINGS

Paris Press Calls on Him for "Propulsive Action and Real Justice."

SOCIALISTS ARE HOSTILE

M. Sembat Predicts That the New Ministry Will Not Last—Under-Secretaries Are Named.

PARIS, Nov. 17.—The Clemenceau Ministry on the whole is received favorably by the press, but the editors are all careful to make it clear that much is expected of the new Premier, and that failure to produce results will meet with little indulgence. M. Clemenceau is welcomed because it is believed he will deal out exemplary justice to enemies at home without consideration as to who is affected, and also will inject new vigor into the conduct of the war.

"These considerations, in which instinct has as much of a part as reason, have irresistibly borne M. Clemenceau to power," says the Figaro. "We do not ask for speeches or fine shading of thought, but for propulsive action and real justice."

This quotation fairly represents the comment of all the newspapers in Paris and the Provinces with the exception of the Socialist organs, which are merciless in their criticism of the Premier. Pierre Renaudel, editor of Humanite, asks whether M. Clemenceau will live up to "all we know of him."

"That is the question, and the stake is the salvation of the country," he continues. "Events will show whether it was right to call M. Clemenceau to power or whether it would have been right to try to keep him out."

Marcel Sembat, in the Lanterne, is even more severe. "He will not last, because France must triumph and M. Clemenceau possesses exactly the qualities to prevent a triumph," M. Sembat writes. "Those baleful qualities will make themselves felt from the very first. His complete lack of understanding of democracy and the labor world, his total lack of a plan of action, the impossibility to transform into acts the ideas expressed in his articles without the most terrible consequences, all will be demonstrated. The experiment will be short. We shall do our best to see that it be quickly over before the national interests suffer too gravely."

The Excelsior points out how by his observance of rigorous rules of living M. Clemenceau at seventy-six is stronger than many men of fifty. It describes him as rising at 3 A. M. and working at his daily article until 6, when he breakfasts, goes through a half hour's Swedish gymnastics, has a cold shower bath, and goes back to his writing until 10, when his secretary arrives with the mail and receives his instructions. After this M. Clemenceau receives persons having appointments, lunches at noon, and after a rest walks to the Senate Chamber, a good three miles, whence he goes to his newspaper office at 5:30 o'clock and corrects his proofs. At 8 P. M. he retires after a light meal of eggs, but does not mind rising to answer the telephone. M. Clemenceau, says the newspaper, has never drunk a glass of wine in his life and has not smoked for twenty years.

Notwithstanding the report that M. Clemenceau intends abolishing the censorship, his newspaper appears this morning with the old title, L'Enchaine, as usual.

The Cabinet this morning decided upon the apointment of the following Under Secretaries of State:

Interior, Albert Favre, an Independent Socialist Deputy.

Navy, Depu y Jules Cels.

Military Justice and Pensions, Deputy Edouard Ignace.

Sanitary Department, Justin Godart, a Depu y who is reappointed.

Aviation, Jacques Dumesnil, reappointed.

Merchant Marine, M. Lemery, Deputy for Martinique.

Senator Jeanneney was appointed Under Secretary for War, charged with general administration of the affairs of the department. He will be the only Under Secretary to participate in the deliberations of the Cabinet.

For the first time in years no Under Secretary for Fine Arts was named. M. Vilgrain, who is not a member of Parliament, was placed in charge of the Provisioning Department.

ENEMY ALIENS BARRED FROM FISHING BANKS

None May Board Taurus, and Foreigners and Naturalized Citizens Must Show Papers.

No enemy alien will be allowed to go down to the Fishing Banks for the duration of the war, according to an order issued yesterday by Fred A. Bishop, President of the Iron Steamboat Company, which owns the fishing steamer Taurus. This will be a blow to many German fishermen, who have been patrons of the Taurus for years.

The notice, which was posted yesterday on Pier 1, North River, whence the Taurus starts at 8 A. M. on weekdays and 6 A. M. on Sundays, reads:

"No alien can go on board without a passport from his consulate, which must be shown at the gangway, and all naturalized Americans must show their citizenship papers, which will be examined by a Government official at the pier.

"No alien enemy can go on board the Taurus at all."

This order was made because of a regulation received from the United States Government at Washington, which the Iron Steamboat Company officials say they will strictly abide by. The notice concludes with the statement that any person attempting to evade the rule will be liable to arrest and detention.

BOARD WILL HEAR ACCUSED TEACHERS

President Wilcox Says Evidence Justifies Dismissal of Three High School Men.

INSULT TO NATION'S HEAD

Pupil Permitted to Read Impudent Letter to Wilson One of the Charges Made.

President William O. Wilcox of the Board of Education said yesterday that the charge against the three De Witt Clinton High School teachers of "holding views subversive of discipline in the school and which undermine good citizenship" would be heard next Tuesday. John L. Tildsley, Associate Superintendent of Schools, possesses evidence against the three men sufficient to warrant their dismissal, Mr. Wilcox said.

The three teachers to be tried are Henry Schneer, instructor in mathematics; Samuel Schmalhausen, instructor in English, and Thomas Mufson, instructor in English.

One of the strongest pieces of evidence against any of the teachers, according to Mr Wilcox, is a letter which Schmalhausen allowed Hyman Herman, a pupil 14 years old, to read in his class on Oct. 22. There were about thirty-five pupils in Schmalhausen's class at the time. They had all prepared, as an exercise in English composition, a letter to the President of the United States. Young Herman's letter is addressed "To the Defender of Humanity and Champion of Democracy, Woodrow Wilson," and with the exaggerated phrases of a schoolboy wishing to air his learning, jocularly upbraids the President for not having "consulted the people" before declaring war.

"You are ready to slaughter us all in order that we may enjoy in death what we are now lacking in life," the letter reads in part. "Do not deign to listen. I am only of the twentieth century; while you are a Messiah in disguise. Cast my worthless epistle into the fire, but please forget not to wash your hands thoroughly, and for that purpose I recommend the sacred oil of the Standard Oil Company. Pray, your Excellency, do not misunderstand me. I do not sympathise with the autocratic Germany. But how is it that the United States, a country far from democratic, and England, the imperial and selfish, can undertake to slam democracy upon a nation whether it likes it or not."

Schneer denied yesterday that either Schmalhausen or himself had ever uttered or even thought anything which could be construed as disloyal. He said that Schmalhausen and himself had antagonised Superintendent Tildsley and, probably, the Board of Education, by having joined in the meeting last month of De Witt Clinton High School teachers which urged that the number of school hours per day be five instead of seven.

Schneer told a TIMES reporter yesterday that he valued his ideals of "social civilization" much more highly than his job as teacher, and that he would like to apply these ideals of his to the "democratization" of this city's public school system. He wants to have the public school teachers have a voice in the management of the school system and in the proceedings of the Board of Education. He says that Schmalhausen has always stood with him in this; but that Mufson, the third suspended teacher, on the other hand, has always seemed to be a routine type of man without militant ideals, and that the reason for his suspension is a complete mystery. He said that Superintendent Tildsley had as yet, he is to notify him of next Tuesday's hearing or of any charges against him.

"Regarding the three suspended teachers, the charge of 'holding views subversive to discipline, &c.,' may be, perhaps, an unfortunate phrasing, since it is liable to be misconstrued as an unwarrantable interference with individual opinions," said President Wilcox yesterday. "It is really these three men's qualifications for teaching which are in question. A teacher holding views that correct English is of no importance is obviously disqualified from teaching English. An anarchist holding views in opposition to all government is manifestly unfit to teach patriotic citizenship. Teachers are employed in Government service to teach those things which in general opinion will best promote the welfare of the pupils and the community."

The six teachers who were transferred from De Witt Clinton High School to other high schools after a controversy regarding the patriotic zeal of a certain group of school teachers, wrote to Associate Superintendent Tildsley yesterday, arguing that if they were fit to teach in other high schools, they were good enough to continue to teach in De Witt Clinton.

FIND GERMAN AGENTS IN MUNITION WORKS

Report Says Teutons Were Employed in Kingsland Plant Before Explosion.

TWELVE MEN SUSPECTED

Fires in Other Great Plants Believed to Have Been Set by Disloyal Employes.

The German spy system now operating in the United States was able to cause many disastrous explosions in American munition manufacturing plants with the aid of German agents and spies who were employed as watchmen and in other minor capacities by the owners of these plants, in the opinion of many officials of the Federal Secret Service agencies. It has been rumored many times that the great explosion which destroyed the Canadian Car and Foundry Company's shell-making plant at Kingsland, N. J., last January was the work of German agents who had managed to obtain employment in these works, and there are reasons also to suspect that mysterious explosions in other great plants in the last two or three years have in many instances been the work of German spies employed there.

THE TIMES came into possession yesterday of a copy of a report which was made following an inspection of the Kingsland shell plant in December, 1915, a little more than one year before the disastrous explosion of last January. That report names twelve men who were employed as guards and in other minor capacities in that plant, and of these twelve two are said to have been former employes of one of the German steamship lines, another was reported to be in the service at that time of the German Consulate General in New York, while another, it was stated, had been a former employe of a well-known German-American citizen who is said to be in Berlin at present.

The report, referring to one of the guards, the names of the men being given in the report, states that "at the outbreak of the war he was in the employ of the North German Lloyd Steamship Company, and is still in close relations with many of their employes." Of another, the report says another guard "has only been in the country for a few months and was formerly in the employ of the North German Lloyd Company."

Referring to another German, who obtained work in the plant as a guard, it is stated that he was employed at a brewery in Newark for a period of ten years before going to work as a guard, and was a member of various German societies, one of them being the Striegerbund of Newark. Still another man who obtained employment is said to have been the agent of a German insurance company. Two Irishmen are also mentioned, one of whom, it is said, had an unfavorable reputation, the other being a suspicious character believed to be friendly with the German cause.

The same persons who gave the copy of this report to THE TIMES told of the discovery in the employ of a well-known automobile manufacturing company of two men who had been proved to be German agents. Both of these men were foremen, and it was not until after the United States entered the war that the fact was disclosed that both were German subjects. The plant in which they had employment is building airplanes for the Government.

Various fires which have resulted in the loss of millions of dollars' worth of war supplies destined for American and allied forces in Europe are also believed to have been the work of German agents, who in many instances were workingmen employed on the properties which were destroyed or seriously damaged before the fires were got under control.

OTTO KAHN'S GIFT FOR WAR.

Will Keep None of His Income While the Conflict Lasts.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 17.—Otto Kahn, the New York banker, addressing the loyalty meeting here last night, denied that the present war is a "rich man's war and a poor man's fight."

"The insinuation that 'big business' in this country had any share in influencing our Government's decision to enter the war is an insult to the President and Congress and to every American citizenship," he said.

"Perhaps you will be more inclined to believe in my disinterestedness when I say that I have made up my mind to keep no income for myself during the war, and whatever remains to me of income after paying my living expenses and taxes will be devoted to charity and war purposes as long as the war lasts."

Speaking of the events which led up to the war, Mr. Kahn said:

"I know of my own knowledge that the stage was set for the war by the Prussian war party ten years ago at Agadir. Austria did not believe that the ultimatum to Serbia would bring on war."

ALL ARE CLASSIFIED IN NEW DRAFT RULES

Registrants Arranged in Order in Which They May Best Be Spared for War Service.

CARE FOR DEPENDENTS

Slacker Marriages Not to Give Exemption—Agriculture and Industry Considered.

The new selective service regulations, which have been drawn up under the direction of Major Gen. Enoch H. Crowder, the Provost Marshal General of the United States, have been approved by President Wilson, and are now on the way to the examining boards throughout the United States. Those sections and parts of the regulations which call for the submission of a questionnaire to the more than 9,000,000 registrants in the country go into effect at noon next Tuesday. All others become effective at noon of Dec. 15 next.

The new regulations, which make a book of 255 printed pages, include a foreword by President Wilson, in which he points out that the task of selecting and mobilizing the first contingent of the national army is nearing completion, and adds that the "expedition and accuracy of its accomplishment were a most gratifying demonstration of the efficiency of our democratic institutions." He adds, however, that the swiftness with which the machinery for the execution of the selective service law had to be assembled left room for adjustment and improvement.

"New regulations putting these improvements into effect," the President continues, "are, therefore, being published today. There is no change in the essential obligation of the men subject to selection. The first draft must stand unaffected by the provisions of the new regulations. They can be given no retroactive effect."

All Must Be Listed.

The new classification rules, which comprise Part 4 of the new regulations, say that "the military needs of the nation require that there be provided in every community a list of names of men who shall be ready to be called into service at any time."

"The economic needs of the nation, while deferring to the paramount military necessity, require," it is added, "that men whose removal would interfere with the civic, family, industrial, and agricultural institutions of the nation shall be taken in the order in which they best can be spared. For this reason the names of all men liable to selection shall be arranged in five classes in the inverse order of their importance to the economic interests of the nation, which include the maintenance of necessary industry and agriculture and the support of dependents."

The group of registrants resident in the jurisdictional area of each local exemption board will be the unit of classification. The order of liability to service is determined by the drawing made in Washington prior to the mobilization of the first national army, and the millions to be classified under the new regulations will be subject to call according to their position in the original drawing. The term "deferred classification" is used in the new regulations, and it is pointed out that it is to be construed by the boards as the equivalent of the term "temporary discharge."

Dependency First.

The most important of the classifications is probably that in respect to dependency. In this connection it is asserted that the selective service law "exempts no person from military service on grounds of dependency," but that it does authorize "the exclusion or discharge from draft" of those whose discharge is advisable "because of the position of those dependent upon them for support."

"The present scheme," it is stated, "is designed by the creation of several classes, arranged in order of their availability for military service, to defer the induction into the army of registrants upon whom other persons are mainly dependent for support until persons without dependents have been called. While an actual dependency must be established before any kind of discharge can be granted, there are certain conditions of dependency which it is advisable to recognize to a fuller extent than others. The present classification is designed to afford the maximum of protection to dependent relatives consistent with the military necessity of the nation.

"It is to be recognised that war must bring inconvenience and sacrifice to all. No person has a right to refuse to sacrifice luxuries. On the other hand, it is not the intent of the law to deprive the dependents whom the law and regulations are designed to protect of a reasonably adequate support. No definite degree can be given to the meaning of the term 'reasonably adequate support' as used in the classification rules and schedules. The adjustment of these relations must be left to local boards, who have abundantly shown that they will approach each case with sympathy and common sense, and, while defending the interest of the nation from selfish and thoughtless claimants on the one hand, will afford the decent protection here designed for meritorious claimants on the other."

Must Be Dependent Upon Labor.

The general rules which will govern the classification based on dependency follow:

RULE I.—In determining whether a claimed dependent is "mainly dependent on a registrant's labor for support" the board will consider all existing or available reasonably certain sources of support other than the labor of the registrant, excepting only public charity, and including:

(a) Income of the claimed dependent from any source whatever, including gifts, and including also the income (or what reasonably and justly should be the income) from the labor of the claimed dependent; except that where the dependent is the wife or child of the registrant the income (or what should be the income) from the labor of the claimed dependent shall only be considered where its consideration is expressly authorized in the classification schedule.

(b) Income of the registrant from any source whatever, including gifts and excluding his labor.

(c) The contribution which the registrant may reasonably and justly be expected to make, or which he is required to make, from his pay as a soldier.

(d) The amount of support which the claimed dependent would receive from any provision of Federal law made, or hereafter to be made, to support such dependent during the absence of the registrant or to insure such dependent against loss entailed by the death or disability of the registrant.

(e) The effect of any moratorium statute made, or hereafter to be made, on the claimed condition of dependency.

(f) The amount which other persons (who have or have not hitherto mainly or partially supported the claimed dependent and who can reasonably and justly be expected to do so) are able and willing to contribute to the support of the claimed dependent during the absence of the registrant; except that, where the claimed dependent is the wife or child of the registrant, support by persons other than the registrant shall NOT be considered.

If, considering such of these circumstances as the board is authorized to consider, or other circumstances not herein mentioned, the board finds that the removal of the registrant will leave the claimed dependent of reasonably adequate support, the board may find that the person claimed to be dependent is mainly dependent upon the registrant's labor for support.

Public Charity Excluded.

RULE II.—Where the claimed dependent is not the wife or child of the registrant, and where persons other than the registrant have contributed to the support of the claimed dependent, or have an equal legal or moral obligation to do so, the board should consider all circumstances stated in Rule I., but it should not find the person "mainly dependent upon the registrant's labor for support" unless it finds that such other persons cannot reasonably and justly be expected to undertake the support of the dependent during the absence of the registrant, and unless it finds also and specifically that the removal of the registrant will remit the claimed dependent to public charity in part, or in whole, for support.

RULE III.—The term "children," where used without qualification, shall be taken to include an unborn child, and, except as provided in Section (a) of Rule VIII., shall be taken to import only children (the issue of the registrant) and stepchildren and legally-adopted children. It shall be taken to import boys under 16 and girls under 18 years of age.

RULE IV.—The dependency of relatives residing abroad who are not citizens of the United States or who have not declared their intention to become such shall not be considered as a ground for deferred classification.

As to Hasty Marriages.

Rule V.—On May 18, 1917, every person subject to registration had notice of his obligation to render military service to his country. The purpose of the selective service law was not to suspend the institution of marriage among registrants, but boards should scrutinize marriages since May 18, 1917, and especially those hastily effected since that time, to determine whether the marriage relation was entered into with a primary view of evading military service, and unless such is found not to be the case boards are hereby authorized to disregard the relationship so established as a condition of dependency requiring deferred classification under these regulations.

RULE VI.—In Class I. shall be placed:

(a) Any registrant who has neither wife, nor child, nor aged, infirm, or invalid parents or grandparents, nor brother under 16 years of age, nor sister under 18 years of age, nor helpless brother or sister of whatever age, mainly dependent on his labor for support.

(b) Any married registrant, with or without children, and any father of motherless children, where the wife or children are not mainly dependent on his labor for support for the reason that the registrant has habitually failed to support them for a sufficient time to justify a finding or the board that he has been making no bona fide attempt to support them in the past and cannot be relied upon to do so in the future—this regardless of support recently rendered or tendered for the purpose of evading military service.

(c) Any married registrant, with or without children, whose wife and children (if any) are not mainly dependent upon his labor for support for the reason that such wife and children (if any) receive no substantial proportion of their support from the fruit of his labor; but, where, on the contrary, such registrant is mainly dependent for his own support on the income (including earnings) of his wife.

(d) Any married registrant with or without children, who is not engaged in any useful occupation, and whose wife and children (if any) are not mainly dependent on his labor for support for the reason that his income or the income of his wife, or both, is amply sufficient to support his wife and children and that the removal of the registrant will not deprive such wife and children of reasonably adequate support.

Wife's Ability Considered.

RULE VII.—In Class II. shall be placed:

(a) Any registrant with both wife and children or any father of motherless children, where such wife and children or such motherless children are not mainly dependent upon his labor for support for the reason that there are other reasonably certain sources of adequate support (excluding earnings or possible earnings from the labor of the wife) available, and that the removal of the registrant will not deprive such dependents of reasonably adequate support.

(b) Any married registrant, without children, whose wife, although the registrant is engaged in a useful occupation, is not mainly dependent upon his labor for support, for the reason that the wife is skilled in some special class of work which she is physically able to perform and in which she is employed, or in which there is an immediate opening for her under conditions that will enable her to support herself decently and without suffering or hardship.

RULE VIII.—In Class III. shall be placed:

(a) Any registrant who has children, not his own issue, but in respect of whom he has in good faith assumed the relation of parent, and has fulfilled the obligations of such relation, where such children are mainly dependent upon his labor for support.

(b) Any registrant who has aged and infirm or invalid parents or grandparents mainly dependent on his labor for support.

(c) Any registrant who has a helpless brother or sister, regardless of age, mainly dependent on his labor for support.

RULE IX.—In Class IV. shall be placed:

(a) Any married registrant whose wife or children are mainly dependent on his labor for support.

To Maintain the Public Service.

Rule 10 controls the classification of registrants in respects other than dependency, industry, and agriculture. It provides that in Class 5 shall be placed registrants found to be county or municipal officials, who have been elected by popular vote and whose offices cannot be filled by appointment for unexpired terms. Also firemen and policemen who are highly trained, and who have been in service for at least three years, and whose places cannot be filled without substantial and material detriment to the public safety. Also in Class 5 are to be placed custom house clerks, persons employed in the transmission of mails, artificers, and workmen employed in United States armories and arsenals, when in accordance with the new rules and regulations "it is found by a Local Board that such person is necessary to the adequate and effective operation of the service in which he is engaged, and that he cannot be replaced without substantial, material loss and detriment to the adequate and effective operation of such service." The discharge of these persons will depend upon the sworn answers to the questionnaire and the required affidavits and certificates which must be filed in each instance.

Mariners, actually employed in the sea and Great Lakes services, are to be placed in class 4, while officials of the legislative, executive, and judicial branches of the Government, the States and territories, regular or duly ordained ministers of religion, students who on May 18 were in attendance at theological institutions, aliens, the physically and mentally unfit, persons who have been convicted of any crime which is treason, felony, or infamous, and licensed pilots are to be placed in class 5.

Industry and Agriculture.

Rules 15 to 26 govern the classification of persons engaged in industry and agriculture. They are:

RULE XV.—The words "persons engaged in industry, including agriculture," as used in the Selective Service Law, shall not be construed to mean that a person engaged in industry or agriculture is entitled to deferred classification by reason of the fact that the class of industry in which he is engaged, taken as a whole, or agriculture taken in its entirety, is necessary to the maintenance of the military establishment or the effective operation of the military forces or the maintenance of the national interest during the emergency. In order to support such deferred classification, the evidence must establish that the claimant is engaged in a particular named and designated industrial or agricultural enterprise, and that the particular named and designated enterprise is "necessary" in the sense recited in Rule XVII.

RULE XVI.—In acting on any claim for deferred classification on the ground of engagement in a particular industrial or agricultural enterprise the board shall proceed first to determine whether such enterprise is "necessary" in the sense recited in Rule XVII. If the board does not find that such enterprise is necessary in such sense, the claim is concluded and the registrant shall be classified in Class I.

If the board determines that the enterprise is "necessary," the board will then proceed to determine whether the registrant is "necessary" to the enterprise in the sense recited in Rule XVIII. and in the capacity recited in any of the various rules in the classification Schedule. If the board does not find that the registrant is "necessary" in such sense and in any such capacity, the claim is concluded and the registrant shall be classified in Class I.

Scope of the Word "Necessary."

RULE XVII.—The word "necessary" as applied to any industrial or agricultural enterprise within the meaning of these regulations shall be taken to import that the discontinuance, the serious interruption, or the materially reduced production of such enterprise will result in substantial, material loss and detriment to the adequate and effective maintenance of the Military Establishment, the adequate and effective operation of the military forces, or the maintenance of the national interest during the emergency.

A particular agricultural or industrial enterprise shall be found to be "necessary" only when it is shown of such enterprise that it is a well-conducted and going concern, contributing substantially and materially to the maintenance of the Military Establishment, the effective operation of the military forces, or the maintenance of the national interest during the emergency; and, further, that particular agricultural enterprise; that it is apparently producing an appreciable amount of agricultural produce over and above what is necessary for the maintenance of those living on the place.

RULE XVIII.—The word "necessary" as applied to the relation of a registrant to an industrial or agricultural enterprise within the meaning of any particular rule governing deferred classification in these regulations shall be taken to import:

(a) That the registrant is actually and completely engaged in the enterprise in the capacity recited in any such rule and that he is competent and qualified in that capacity.

(b) That the removal of the registrant would result in direct, substantial, material loss and detriment to the adequate and effective operation of the enterprise to a degree proportionate to the importance of the capacity recited in the rule.

(c) That the available supply of persons, competent in the capacity recited in the rule, is such that the registrant can not be replaced in such capacity without direct, substantial, material loss and detriment to the adequate and effective operation of the enterprise to a degree proportionate to the importance of such capacity.

Rules for Classification.

RULE XIX.—In Class I. shall be placed:

(e) Any registrant not found to be engaged in a "necessary" agricultural enterprise, or, if found to be engaged in such an enterprise, not found to be "necessary" to the effective operation of the enterprise in any capacity recited in Rules XX., XXI., or XXII.

RULE XX.—In Class II. shall be placed:

(c) Any registrant found to be engaged in a "necessary" agricultural enterprise, and found to be "necessary" to such enterprise in the capacity of a skilled farm laborer.

RULE XXI.—In Class III. shall be placed:

(j) Any registrant found to be engaged in a "necessary" agricultural enterprise and found to be "necessary" to such enterprise in the capacity of an assistant, associate, or hired manager of such particular enterprise or of a substantial and integral part thereof.

RULE XXII.—In Class IV. shall be placed:

(c) Any registrant found to be engaged in a "necessary" agricultural enterprise and found to be "necessary" to such enterprise in the capacity of sole managing, controlling, and directing head of the enterprise.

RULE XXIII.—In Class I. shall be placed:

(f) Any registrant not found to be engaged in a "necessary" industrial enterprise, or, if found to be engaged in such enterprise, not found to be "necessary" to the effective operation of the enterprise in a capacity recited in Rule XXIV.; XXV., or XXVI.

RULE XXIV.—In Class II. shall be placed:

(d) Any registrant found to be engaged in a "necessary" industrial enterprise and found to be "necessary" to such enterprise in the capacity of a skilled laborer especially fitted for the work in which he is engaged.

Experts in Class III.

RULE XXV.—In Class III. shall be placed:

Any registrant found to be engaged in a "necessary" industrial enterprise and found to be "necessary" to the effective operation of such enterprise in the capacity of—

(k) A highly specialized technical or mechanical expert, or

(l) An assistant or associate manager of the enterprise, or a manager of a substantial, integral part thereof.

RULE XXVI.—In Class IV. shall be placed:

(d) Any registrant found to be engaged in a "necessary" industrial enterprise and found to be "necessary" to such enterprise in the capacity of sole managing, controlling, and directing head of the enterprise.

A synopsis of the sixteen-page questionnaire which is shortly to be mailed to all registrants who are not now in the service of the United States was printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES of last Thursday. These questionnaires will be mailed by the local boards and must be returned in a stipulated time. In the event the answers submitted are not satisfactory, the boards are instructed to call the registrant before them for examination. The registrant will have seven days in which to fill out the questionnaire and return it to the board.

JAPANESE MEET McADOO.

Financial Mission Also Sees Members of the Reserve Board.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—The Japanese Economic and Financial Mission of nine members, headed by Baron Megata, a Harvard graduate, conferred with Secretary McAdoo and other Treasury officials today preparatory to studying American methods of war financing.

The commission expects to stay in this country for several months, making headquarters in New York and Washington. The principal purpose of the mission, Baron Megata explained, was to broaden commercial relations between the United States and Japan and to increase trade after the war.

While at the Treasury the Commissioners met the members of the Federal Reserve Board, and Baron Megata found in Charles G. Hamlin a fellow-alumnus of Harvard.

Accompanied by Ambassador Sato the mission also called at the State Department and saw Acting Secretary Polk. Monday the Japanese Ambassador will give a formal dinner in honor of the visitors, Tuesday Mr. Hamlin will entertain them at luncheon, and Wednesday Secretary McAdoo will give a dinner. Next Thursday the Commissioners return to New York to remain for a month or more.

The Eastman Kodak Company was named as defendant in a suit filed in the United States District Court in Newark, N. J., yesterday by McCartor & English of Newark, counsel for the United States Aristotip Company of Bloomfield.

Violations of the provisions of the Sherman anti-trust law are charged, the allegation being that the defendant company attempted to effect for itself a monopoly of the sale of photographic print papers, thereby causing damages to the plaintiff company to the amount of $250,000. The act invoked entitles injured persons to recover three times the actual amount of damages as a penalty; consequently judgment is asked for $750,000.

PUT UP TO GARFIELD BIG WAGE INCREASE

Anthracite Operators Will Pay Miners $40,000,000 a Year More if Prices Are Raised.

ASK 45 CENTS A TON MORE

Contract for Wage Increase Signed by Both Sides Contingent Upon Approval of Fuel Administrator.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Miners in the anthracite coal fields want wage increases aggregating more than $40,000,000, and Dr. H. A. Garfield, the Fuel Administrator, was asked today to grant a readjustment of the prices for coal at the mouth of the mine, which operators say is necessary to meet the situation. It is estimated that the increases suggested call for a jump of at least 45 cents a ton in the price schedule approved by President Wilson.

The terms which both miners and operators are willing to accept if Dr. Garfield agrees to the increase in mine prices, were incorporated in an agreement reached today after a series of conferences between representatives of both branches of the industry. It is similar in many respects to the agreement reached recently in the bituminous fields.

In the latter case a number of increases in prices for coal at the mine were granted by Dr. Garfield, but there is the difference that mine prices had been reduced radically by the President in the bituminous fields, while prices for coal at the mine in the anthracite field have not been changed materially by Government edict from those which have been in force.

Dr. Garfield reserved decision today, but may make an announcement early next week. He had informed the miners and operators that the Government would make no promises on which they might base negotiations. The only recognition that the Fuel Administration gave to the conference was to have two of its experts, John P. White, President of the United Mine Workers of America, and James Neale, attend some of the sessions to hear the arguments presented.

The Settlement Contingent.

The decision as to the increase is put directly up to Dr. Garfield in the terms of the agreement signed by the authorized representatives of operators and miners. It contains these paragraphs:

"And it is further understood and agreed that this contract will become effective only on condition that the selling price of coal shall be advanced by the United States Government sufficient to cover the increased cost of production, and will not take effect until the first day of the pay period following the order granting such increased price.

"Subject to the foregoing provision the contract will remain in effect during the period of the war, or until March 31, 1920, in case the war is not terminated before that date."

Gives $40,000,000 More Pay.

The operators and miners entered into one agreement in May, 1916, which was to extend until March 31, 1920. There was a supplemental agreement in May, 1917. Concerning the latest contract this statement from the conference room was issued through J. A. Gorman, Secretary of the Anthracite Conciliation Board:

"The agreement concluded by anthracite operators and miners brings to the anthracite mine workers in excess of $40,000,000 above the wages provided by the supplemental agreement of May, 1917. Above the 1916 basis the additional wages to the mine workers exceed $65,000,000 per annum.

"The new supplemental agreement gives increases in wages of 15 per cent. to 44 per cent. to day men and 15 per cent. to contract men."

THREATENED TO STEAL FORD'S BABY GRANDSON

Detroit Youth Sentenced to Five Years for Demanding $10,000 From Edsel Ford.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 17.—Jacob Yellin, a Detroit youth, was convicted by a Federal jury here today of sending a threatening letter demanding ransom to Edsel Ford, son of the automobile manufacturer. Yellin was sentenced to five years in Leavenwortr Prison and also was fined $1,000.

The letter which Ford received demanded $10,000 as the price for the safety of his baby son, Henry Ford II. The writer specified that the money be sent by mail to the local general delivery department. When a messenger called at the window for the package a dummy parcel was given to him, and then he was trailed by detectives. The messenger met Yellin several blocks from the Post Office, and the latter was arrested as he took the parcel.

Yellin asserted his innocence and declared that he had promised a man whom he did not know to receive the parcel. Testimony was offered at the trial by a typewriter expert to the effect that the ransom note was written on the same typewriter that Yellin had used to write a note to a friend.

FEDERAL CONTROL OF RAILWAYS LOOMS

Heads of Lines, at Rate Hearings, Foresee Some Radical Step in Near Future.

MAY BE ACTUAL OWNERSHIP

Or Merely Government Loan, with Guarantee of Income and Complete Direction During War.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—As the hearings progress before the Interstate Commerce Commission in the 15 per cent. freight rate increase case, revealing the condition of the railroads of the country, it is becoming more evident, in the opinion of many of those concerned, that a radical change must be made in the fundamental railroad policy. The carriers say they are unable to obtain money to keep up equipment, and even if the increase should be granted by the commission this would not supply the needed revenues.

All kinds of cures for the present ills are advanced by financiers and railroad chiefs. One of the most radical suggestions is that the railroads should be brought under Government ownership. Others favor merely Government control and a unification of railroad lines under one directing head during the war. Frank A. Vanderlip, President of the National City Bank of New York, advanced the latter idea in a modified form.

That the railroad Presidents themselves see the need for Government assistance, but are opposed to Government ownership, has been reflected in testimony before the commission. Samuel Rea, President of the Pennsylvania Railroad, said the carriers could not obtain the money necessary for maintaining the roads in their proper condition. He offered the suggestion that the Government loan the railroads about a billion dollars at 4 per cent.

The impression is strong in the minds of railroad chiefs that the Government must aid them materially, and that the 15 per cent. increase in rates is insufficient. Railroad Presidents are now reported to be considering a proposition which would furnish them with the required revenues and make government ownership unnecessary. It is believed that this will be a request for a Government loan and that, receiving this, the carriers will readily consent to a semi-government control during the period of the war.

Newlands Committee Report.

The railroad men in Washington—and nearly all of the important heads are here—are anxiously looking forward to the report to be made to the next Congress by the Newlands Committee, composed of members of the Interstate Commerce Committee of the Senate and the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee of the House, which for a year has been investigating the railroad situation in general. One of the features of the committee's investigation has been the advisability of Government ownership.

It was reported today that the Newlands Committee had evolved a scheme that would mean Government control of the roads with Government financial support, but leaving the actual operation and ownership with the carriers themselves. The Newlands Committee's scheme, it is reported, comprehends a guarantee of earnings of the railroads at a stipulated rate, based on the value of the property. An ample wage would be exacted for the employes. This system, if put into effect, would follow that in vogue in England with respect to the British railways since the beginning of the war. In England the scheme has worked successfully. Official confirmation of the report was not obtained.

Under the reported Newlands committee idea the Government would, in effect, back the railroads with whatever finances were needed to carry on their operation during the war. The securities would be strengthened by Government support.

Ever since the Interstate Commerce Commission began its hearings here on the application of the railroads to raise their rates, railroad men have seen a tendency on the part of the Government to step in with some intimate regulation, if not actual ownership. They have heard rumblings that Congress was ready to take the initiative by enacting a law putting the railroads directly under Government ownership. This has caused no little uneasiness among the railroad heads. While they do not object to Government supervision, no matter how drastic, they do not want their property taken away.

That the Interstate Commerce Commission may eventually recommend Government ownership is believed by many of the railroad men. But they are more concerned over what Congress may do at the coming session than what action the Interstate Commerce Commission is going to take on the application for an increase in rates. It now seems a foregone conclusion that the commission is going to grant some kind of an increase.

One plan being discussed for the running of the railroads is that Congress, as part of the necessary legislation to bring about Government ownership, should transform the Interstate Commerce Commission into a Department of Transportation. Then, as part of the plan, the country would be divided into zones or sections, each member of the present commission to be a Director of the railroads in that zone and all the Directors co-operating together along lines to be laid down by Congress.

The commission now has a large force, numbering more than 2,000 employes, a heavy percentage of whom are trained in railroad accounting and railroad matters generally. In addition to these, the commission would be authorized to employ additional practical railroad men.

How the Government would finance the taking over of the railroads is a problem to be worked out. Those who advocate Government ownership say that the revenues of the carriers now disbursed to the immense army of officials and other disbursements in the way of dividends, etc., would be sufficient to pay the interest on bonds that might be issued to compensate present stockholders and bondholders.

It is very apparent that one thing stands out strongly in the present railroad situation and it is that the railroad men are now more apprehensive of Government ownership than at any previous time.

Shippers' Witnesses Heard.

Taking of testimony in the hearing of the 15 per cent. advance freight rate case before the Interstate Commerce Commission was completed today with the introduction of witnesses by shippers in an effort to show the financial condition of the railroads was not as serious as had been contended, and that an increase in freight rates now was unwarranted.

The principal witness was Clifford Thorne, who gave an exhaustive review of statistics prepared by the shippers, tending to show that railroad securities had not declined as much as some others and that earnings of the 38 Eastern roads interested already had exceeded by $30,000,000 since January 1 the estimates the railroads gave of their earnings for 1917, when the case was heard earlier in the year.

In attacking the method by which some railroad figures had been prepared, Mr. Thorne, reading from his charts, stated that in 1907 the Baltimore & Ohio entered $7 for renewal of each freight car, and in 1916 $44 for the same purpose. In 1907, he said, $8 was charged for every passenger car, while in 1916 it was $176, and for locomotives for the same years the figures were $30 and $519, respectively.

Representatives of Southwestern cattle interests testified that an increase in rates even in Eastern territory only would work a hardship on the industry, which, they said, had been abnormally bad for the raisers for two years. Ed. C. Lassiter, who raises cattle on a large scale in Texas, said the cattlemen who shipped to the Middle Western markets would be affected by the rates in the East, because the packers would consider the increased transportation cost in purchasing.

Sam Cowan, representing the National Livestock Shippers' Protective Association, read telegrams from cattlemen saying their situation was serious because of the drought and high cost of feed. One from Ike T. Pryor, President of the American Cattle Raisers' Association, said the supply of calves this year would be 40 per cent. below normal.

Benjamin C. Marsh, Executive Secretary of the American Committee on the High Cost of Living, filed a brief attacking the proposed increase, and suggesting "We have meatless days and wheatless days, and would it not be appropriate to have some dividendless days?"

FREIGHT ORDER EXTENDED.

Pennsylvania's 'Shipping Day' Plan Now Includes New Jersey.

Adoption of the "Shipping Day" for freight in less than carload lots, introduced as an experiment by the Pennsylvania Railroad at its Philadelphia freight terminals some time ago, and since extended to New York, Buffalo, and Baltimore, has proved such a success that the Pennsylvania has decided, beginning tomorrow, to apply it to its entire territory in northern New Jersey.

Henceforth freight in less than carload lots will not be accepted at the Pennsylvania stations within this territory except on designated days, with closing hours ranging from 3 to 5 P. M., after which no freight of this character will be taken. The "Shipping Day" will vary for different stations, depending upon the route to be followed by the shipment. A full schedule of dates will be available for shippers at all times.

The purpose of the "Shipping Day" is to diminish the amount of rehandling of freight at transfer stations, reduce the time in transit, and save car space by consolidating ship-

DWIGGINS BACK, TELLS OF SHORTAGE

Insurance Agent Said to Have Admitted That His Assets Will Not Cover Loan Thefts.

TRIES TO SHIFT BLAME

Wife Declares He Assured Her That He Would Make Good the Amount Due on Liberty Bond Sales.

Handcuffed to a Post Office Inspector, Elmer Dwiggins, general agent of the Bankers Life Insurance Company of Des Moines, Iowa, was brought to this city yesterday to be prosecuted on a charge of having used the mails to defraud investors in Liberty bonds. Dwiggins, who was arrested in Montgomery [illegible] disappeared [illegible] Saturday after it was discovered that he had failed to account for more than $70,000 worth of Liberty bond subscriptions which he had collected through the mails, presumably, it was said, as an agent of the Bankers Life Insurance Company. When taken to the United States Marshal's office for examination, Dwiggins refused to discuss his discrepancies further than to admit to Assistant District Attorney Edwin S. Brogan that he had speculated with the money received for Liberty bonds on the Stock Exchange.

Following an examination before Assistant United States Attorney Elon Mathews, the prisoner was allowed to see his wife, Mrs. Ora Dwiggins, who gave the Federal authorities information which led to his arrest. They conversed alone in one of the rooms of the United States Marshal's office for fifteen minutes, after which Mrs. Dwiggins emerged and declared to reporters that her husband had assured her that he would "make everything good." She persuaded him, she said, to tell of his deeds, and felt sure that he would do so when the proper time came.

"His intentions were of the best," said Mrs. Dwiggins, "and I feel personally convinced that he will make everything good. He has assured me that he has ample funds on hand to cover all shortages."

Dwiggins, however, is said to have admitted to the Federal authorities that his deposits on hand aggregating $90,000 in bonds and cash would not be adequate to cover the entire amount of his shortage. With these assets considered, he said he would still be short between $50,000 and $80,000. He declined to speak of the bonds which were found in his possession when arrested. Neither would he discuss why he speculated with Liberty Loan money and tied after his discrepancies were discovered.

Dwiggins endeavored to shift the liability for his losses by declaring to Assistant United States Attorneys Mathews and Brogan that whatever shortages existed were connected entirely with his sale of bonds for the first Liberty Loan. Having made these sales as the acknowledged agent of the Bankers Life Insurance Company, he said, the company must be held by law responsible for his shortage. As to the second loan, he said, he left enough funds on deposit to cover every penny, received by him in those transactions.

Dwiggins was locked up in the Tombs last night to await arraignment tomorrow before Commissioner Hitchcock. Both the Federal and county grand juries will continue their inquiries into the transactions of Dwiggins.

Francis L. Kohlman, who was appointed receiver in bankruptcy for Dwiggins, declared yesterday that he had made a preliminary examination of Dwiggins's affairs and had found a considerable amount of assets among several brokerage houses. He said there was also evidence to show that Dwiggins had lost heavily in speculations. Mr. Kohlman tomorrow will begin liquidation proceedings in court.

100,000 PORTUGUESE ARMED

65,000 on the Western Front—Serious Labor Shortage Is Threatened.

Portugal now has at least 65,000 soldiers fighting on the western front in France, while 35,000 more of her troops are in active service in her African colonies, according to an item in O Observador, a leading review published in Oporto.

In enumerating the reasons for the serious shortage of labor threatening the republic, the Portuguese periodical gives the number of men fighting abroad, and also remarks that there are 20,000 Portuguese working men employed in France and 15,000 in England.

ARRESTED IN BOMB INQUIRY.

Two Men Seized After Scare at Chicago Grand Opera.

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—Federal agents this afternoon arrested two men in connection with the placing of a crude bomb in the Auditorium Theatre at a grand opera performance last night. One of the prisoners is said to be an employe of the theatre.

Bomb experts today established that the contrivance was evidently intended to start a panic.

The so-called bomb, made of a gas pipe, with a little loose powder inside, "would not have killed a fly," according to Chief of Police Schuettler. The instrument was turned over to the chief by Federal authorities today and it was examined by three experts on explosives, one of them employed by a big powder company and the others members of the New York bomb squad. The chief's report was based on their testimony.

An analysis of the bomb showed that it contained two ounces of sawdust, two ounces of smokeless powder and some scraps of leather.

PREDICT OPTION IN JERSEY.

Assemblymen-Elect See Law Enacted This Winter.

Passage of a local option law by the New Jersey Legislature this Winter was prophesied by four Essex County local option Assemblymen-elect last night at the annual dinner of the New Jersey Home Rule Republicans at the Hotel Albert. The prospective Assemblymen who spoke were O. Bell Close, George S. Hobart, Edgar H. Bostock, and William Yarrow. The Rev. J. K. Shields, Superintendent of the New Jersey Anti-Saloon League; former Assemblyman James G. Blauvelt, Assemblyman Arthur N. Pierson, and George L. Record were other speakers. About fifty new Jersey Republicans were present, and all toasts were drunk in grape juice. Superintendent Shields declared that the Local Option bill would pass the New Jersey Legislature shortly after that body convenes in January.

SUFFRAGE PICKETS GET TOO MUCH PORK

Miss Todd Complains That While Hoover Is Saving Jail Menu Is Profligate of Fat.

WANTS AN INVESTIGATION

Says She Is Sure President Does Not Know "Political Prisoners" Are Harshly Treated.

Miss Helen Todd, representing the Committee of 1,000 Women, which has been working for better prison treatment for women convicted of picketing in Washington, said last night that she was going on the midnight train to Washington to ask President Wilson to appoint a disinterested and competent investigator to study the conditions under which the pickets are incarcerated.

Miss Todd said that, while she had visited the City Jail in Washington on Nov. 13, her inspection necessarily had been superficial, because her visit was in company with Commissioner Gardner in charge of prisons in the District of Columbia, and was made under the stipulation that she should not talk with prisoners and under other restrictions. Even this limited survey of the prison, she said, showed many serious evils.

Commissioner Gardner assured her, she said, that changes would be made in compliance with a series of requests, which would barely have brought prison conditions for the pickets up to the level of the average penal institutions of the country, but that he has failed to reply to a letter on the subject, thus indicating that no reforms were to be made after all.

Miss Todd said yesterday that she had gained the impression that the prison authorities were entirely ignorant of modern and decent penal methods. As an illustration, Miss Todd said that, though the food was in good condition and wholesome, she found that the main article of diet was pork, which was on the menu for meal after meal and day after day.

"I said this was a very heavy diet," said Miss Todd, "and that, when it was fed to prisoners who lived in the air of the prison, which was very bad, the prisoners ought to have plenty of exercise if they were to keep their health. Commissioner Gardner seemed much surprised at the criticism that pork was not a good thing for nearly every meal, and seemed to think that the diet was near the ideal."

It was also pointed out, Miss Todd said, as a misstance of the blindness of the prison management, that, while Food Commissioner Hoover and patriotic organizations all over the country were appealing to people to save pork, the prison authorities of the capital of the country were forcing it in outrageous quantities on prisoners who did not like it.

"After we had seen some of the prisoners who have been on a hunger strike," she said, "we actually went. They were our personal friends and they were emaciated and in a deplorable condition. Some of the most senseless hardships had been inflicted upon them. One had not been allowed air for fear that, if the window were opened, she would talk to people on the outside. Another was not allowed to wear her own nightdress. She would not wear the prison garment, which did not reach to her knees, and was wrapped in a sheet when we found her. When we talked of this to Commissioner Gardner, he was actually on the verge of tears himself, and promised to do everything in his power to lighten the lot of the prisoners."

SUFFRAGISTS RATIFY NONPARTISAN STAND

Women's Organizations Agree to Hold Themselves as an Independent Unit in Voting.

Women who spoke yesterday at a meeting of representatives of women's civic organizations at the Women's City Club at the Vanderbilt Hotel were almost unanimously in favor of keeping the vote of women nonpartisan, for the present at least, so that they could exercise their full political power in favor or against men and measures on their merits, rather than from views of party loyalty. While none of the speakers favored forming a third party, they urged that the vote of women, as far as possible, should be kept an independent unit, to be used at its full strength in favor of the candidate or party measure considered by women to be most progressive and most in the interests of party welfare.

Miss Helen Todd said:

"The women of California found that they obtained their greater power for good in the influence of the Nonpartisan Women's Alliance, which had organizations in all of the cities, towns, and counties of the State. Through this league they were instrumental in bringing about many of California's important reforms. The alliance took a prominent part in obtaining the Minimum Wage act, child labor laws, prison reform, motherhood pensions, and other valuable progressive measures.

"The Nonpartisan Women's Alliance in San Francisco rented open rooms at regular intervals, where they would hear candidates of different parties and listen to the arguments of those who were both for and against important legislation. After thorough discussion they would take sides, and their stand had the most powerful political effect."

Mary Garrett Hay, who attended the meeting at the Women's City Club, said:

"The Woman's Suffrage Party will use all its machinery to educate the women for whom it has won the vote. The first essential of education is to hold them from party affiliation until they are sure of themselves and of the party issues."

In a statement given out regarding the meeting by the suffrage leaders present it was said:

"It was the sense of the meeting that nonpartisanship is the first and immediate essential to be reite ated in every phase of the work, and that a campaign of investiga ion and broader education should be undertaken to supplement the elementary work of the Woman's Suffrage Party."

WOMEN TO CONSIDER USE OF VOTE POWER

Will Be One of the Important Questions Taken Up at State Suffrage Convention.

New York State suffragists, who will hold their twenty-ninth annual convention at the Ritz-Carlton beginning next Tuesday, will take up officially in the three-day session the question of how they will attempt to use their political power.

With leaders of the Republican, Democratic, and Socialist parties making overtures for support and with many suffragist leaders urging the creation of a separate and independent political organization, which shall hold the balance of power between the old parties, the first official gathering of women voters is expected to produce some interesting sessions.

Next in importance to the question of wielding their political power independently or by joining existing parties, will be the official stand taken by the New York State Woman's Suffrage Party, on the question of methods to be used in the campaign to force through the Federal amendment. Republicans, who urged this amendment in the last campaign, after its indorsement by Charles E. Hughes, hope to gain the support of the women.

Closely connected with this question is the matter of the White House pickets. While the majority of suffrage leaders in this State have not favored picketing as a means of advancing the cause, a strong faction has been formed to oppose the imprisonment and alleged severe treatment of pickets. Although President Wilson's support to the suffrage cause in this and other States has been warmly acknowledged by the most influential suffragist leaders, an attack on the proceedings against the pickets, and criticism of the President, is almost a certainty, if free discussion is allowed at the convention. Suffrage leaders who have been warm supporters of President Wilson decided yesterday at the Women's City Club to make an effort to have the President take some action toward settling the picket question before the convention opens.

The attitude of women on the war is another question which attempts may be made to define at the convention, but this topic has not had much attention from suffrage leaders since the election because of their work in plans for the building of machinery for the future use of their power rather than in the issues on which their power will be exercised.

The Republicans have gained a point in their representation at the celebration over the success of the suffrage amendment, which will be held at the Metropolitan Opera House on Tuesday. Two of the speakers will be Colonel Theodore Roosevelt and Governor Whitman. In a statement sent out by the New York State Suffrage Party, however, this suggestion is made to account for the absence of Democratic speakers:

"Perhaps the remembrance that President Wilson and his Cabinet practically to a man are in favor of a full settlement of the woman suffrage question may account for the stress apparently being laid on speakers representing the Republican point of view."

The State Executive Board and the State Committee will meet Tuesday morning, and in the afternoon at 2 o'clock the convention will be called to order by Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse, Chairman. Addresses will be made by Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse, Colonel Roosevelt, and Governor Whitman. Dr. Anna Howard Shaw and Mrs. Whitehouse will speak at the celebration in the evening.

SUFFRAGISTS OBTAIN WRIT.

Occoquan Prisoners to Appear in Habeas Corpus Proceedings.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 17.—Federal Judge Waddill today ordered a writ of habeas corpus issued seeking the release of twenty-eight Woman's Party militants imprisoned at Occoquan workhouse for picketing the White House, and set a hearing for Nov. 27 at Alexandria, Va.

The application for the writ alleged acts of cruelty and charged as one example that Lucy Burns, Vice Chairman of the Woman's Party, had been handcuffed to the bars of a cell formerly used for the incarceration of prisoners in delirium tremens.

The petition for the writ seeks the release of the militants on the legal ground that prisoners sentenced for offenses committed in the District of Columbia cannot be imprisoned in the State of Virginia.

LABOR PLANS CHANGE IN CITIZENSHIP LAW

Aims to Have Women Get First and Second Naturalization Papers at Same Time.

TO WORK FOR AMENDMENT

Naturalization Aid League Here Prepares for Its New Duties Following the Suffrage Victory.

Labor organizations with many women members are preparing to make a fight for amendments to the naturalization law which will enable women who have lived long enough in this country to become citizens to obtain both their first and second naturalization papers at the same time. Male applicants for citizenship under existing statutes are subjected to a wait of two years at least after declaring their intention to become citizens before they may obtain their so-called "second" papers.

The subject was brought up at a conference of the Naturalization Aid League, held at the Broadway Central Hotel yesterday afternoon by Miss Juliette Stewart Poynts, Educational Director of the Ladies' Waist Makers' Union. In common with other questions affecting naturalization, it was referred to a committee of ten which was appointed at the conference to consider ways and means to meet the increasing demands on the organization, due to the enfranchisement of women, and submit a plan to a general conference of the league to be held next month.

There are about 200 labor unions affiliated in the work of the Naturalization Aid League. Last year the league aided some 5,000 alien members of labor organizations to obtain their full citizenship papers, and about 6,000 in obtaining first papers. It was the league's greatest year of activity. Next year, owing to the right being given women to vote, the league expects to double last year's record.

In the interest of economy, Samuel P. Kramer, who presided at the conference, suggested to the representatives of labor organizations who attended that wives of alien husbands, or daughters of alien fathers, who had reached voting age, encourage husbands and parents to become citizens, thus being carried into citizenship themselves. This suggestion, however, did not seem to meet with the approval of the audience.

"I am sure," said Miss Juliette Poynts, taking the floor, "that women do not relish being carried into citizenship through the male members of their family, but would rather become citizens by their own declaration."

It was in connection with this that Miss Poynts brought up the question of providing a short cut to citizenship for women.

"I do not know just how it is to be done," she said, "but I am convinced that some way could be found. Considering the many years women have had to wait for the right to vote, it is only fair that some concession should be made to them, now that they have the ballot."

About 100 delegates from various labor organizations, mostly women, attended the conference.

in hand-to-hand fighting with the enemy, who had penetrated the first line." The others cited, "who showed excellent military qualities," are Second Lieutenants M. C. Laughlin, R. O. Patterson and E. F. Erickson; Sergeant John Arrowood, Corporals David M. Knowles and Homer Givens, and Privates Charles Massa, William B. Thomas, George Hurd, Boyce Wade, Robert Winkler and John J. Jarvis.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Nov. 17.—(By The Associated Press.)—General Pershing today returned to his headquarters from a visit to his troops in the first line trenches and the support in the rear. Artillery firing on both sides was normal while he was there, and no shells fell near him.

CONGRESSMEN NEAR DEATH IN TRENCHES

German Shells and Machine-Gun Fire Suddenly Burst About Them Near Dixmude.

BRITISH FRONT IN BELGIUM, Nov. 16, (By The Associated Press.)—Five members of the party of American Congressmen and private citizens who spent yesterday and part of today visiting the Belgian war zone, had a narrow escape from death or injury this morning when they were caught in a sudden burst of German machine-gun fire when inspecting the front line trenches near Dixmude.

The Americans in danger were Congressman C. C. Dill of Spokane, Wash.; Congressman Charles B. Timberlake of Colorado, Congressman John F. Miller of Seattle, Wash.; Congressman Albert Johnson of Washington, and former Representative Stout of Montana. Nobody was hit, but it was one of those freaks of fortune which soldiers call luck, because the shots came in a shower, so close to them that it seemed almost certain some one must be wounded, although they were exposed only for a brief time.

The seven other members of the party were in another section of the trench at the time and were not disturbed by the fire. Later, however, when all the Americans were together, the Germans dropped a big shell some ten yards away, seriously endangering every one. One of the members of the party in describing the incident to the correspondent later, said he and his companions heard the shell coming.

"It sounded like the roar of an airplane" he said.

Again fortune favored them, and no one was injured. Both these situations were fraught with danger, as any one who is moving constantly about the forward areas knows well.

The visitors spent the night near the front and rose early this morning for a trip to the trenches in the vicinity of Dixmude. The Belgian and German lines run within thirty yards of each other at one point, and it was there that the five men fell into danger. At that distance it is quite easy to see any one in the opposite trench who raises his head above the top. Only the usual firing was under way when the party, accompanied by Belgian officers, reached this place.

The Americans were having an excellent view of the lines when several of them got into an exposed position and were seen by the Germans. Suddenly the enemy machine-guns near by began a vicious chatter and bullets came whizzing across the narrow strip of No Man's Land at the rate of several hundred a minute. Before the visitors realized the situation bullets were whining all about them like a storm of hail and dirt was being thrown into their faces as some of the steel pellets struck the top of the trench. They all had down for cover but all might easily have been caught, since it does not take more than a small fraction of a minute for a machine-gun to account for a number of men if the shooting is accurate.

The Americans departed this afternoon for England. On arriving at the port whence they sailed they said their trip to the Belgian front had been most satisfactory and that the reception accorded them could not have been more cordial. They were especially pleased at the invitation of King Albert to take tea with them. The King made them feel very welcome and chatted freely with them. The American Minister, Brand Whitlock, also was present at the invitation of the King.

Other members of the party who were endangered by the shell, in addition to the five who were under machine-gun fire, are Congressmen Parker of New Jersey, Taylor of Colorado, Goodwin of Arkansas, Stephens of Nebraska, and Hicks of New York, and former Representative Hammond of Nebraska.

DESCRIBES GERMAN RAID.

Congressman Suspects Especial Efforts to Punish Americans.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—Further details of the Germans' special effort to trap American soldiers in the front line trenches on the American front Nov. 3, on the occasion of the invaders' first raid on the American trenches, which resulted in numerous casualties to the defenders, have been brought to London by the party of American Congressmen now visiting France and England. Congressman Taylor of Colorado said:

"Our men were detailed to a position on the front line for observation at 3 o'clock in the morning. There had been a lull during the night, but signs of activity of the enemy during the early hours of the morning had been followed by this stationing of our men in advantageous positions for observation.

"The German attack followed the enemy's sweeping of the position, as usual, with illuminating rockets, by means of which it is presumed the Germans located the American force. Their artillery fire appeared to be concentrated on that point, and they accomplished their hurriedly conceived object in smashing our little squad of observers who were out there to gain experience.

"The attack seems to confirm reports that the German commanders have inculcated a spirit of rivalry among their troops for the taking of the first American prisoners and to making a showing in American casualties. It is commonly reported on all the fronts that the Germans have transferred their vindictiveness and hatred of the English to our men."

American Soldier Executed.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—An American soldier of General Pershing's forces, found guilty by court-martial of the rape and murder of a French woman, has been executed by a firing squad. When a full report has been received from General Pershing it probably will be published, as officials of the department want the world to know how the American Army deals with men who commit such crimes. Secretary Baker said today that General Pershing had full power to carry out the sentence of the court-martial without referring the case to the President.

QUITS WOMEN'S CORPS.

Captain Helen Bastedo Dissatisfied with Progress of League.

Captain Helen Bastedo, who has been in charge of the Motor Corps of the National Women's League for Service, announced yesterday that she had handed in her resignation and that most of the members of her corps had quit the league with her.

At the headquarters of the league it was said yesterday that the organization would not meet certain demands which had been made by Captain Bastedo, and that her resignation had been accepted. Miss Fitch, who was temporarily in charge of the motor service, said that three-quarters of the members of this department had remained loyal to the league.
